For the States and Provinces, the usual abbreviations, viz: Mass., Massachusetts; N. H., New Hampshire, &c.

The column of figures, 1, 2, 3, 4, &c., on the left margin of the page, is the general enumeration from the beginning to the end of the book. The figures over each paragraph indicate the number of the individual in the general enumeration, where his name and parentage may be found. The fractional or superior figure over each name denotes the generation to which he belongs; Joseph<sup>1</sup> is of the first generation, Joseph<sup>2</sup> is of the second generation, and so on to the end.

In the following pages we have endeavored to notice all the members of this family, so far as records could be obtained, or parties themselves have furnished material for that purpose.

We are aware that these pages are neither full nor complete. The difficulty, and even the impossibility, of attaining to anything like a correct record, every one at all conversant with such matters must understand. We have done all in our power to obtain reliable information. Records have been consulted, and aged people have been conversed with, whenever they could be found and were known to possess anything of interest.

We venture to hope that a large amount of indulgence will be extended to the compiler, when we consider the great variety of detail and dates here presented. In our notice of families, we have endeavored not to discriminate; and according to the interest the parties themselves have taken, and the fullness of the information they have furnished, will the record appear. Mrs. Charles Payson, of Thomaston, and Mr. Edward Ludwig Reed, of St. Davids, N. B., both of the fifth generation in the lineal descent, will please accept our thanks for the full and perfect record furnished by them. If other members of the family, with no better facilities, had done as much, our pages would have been augmented to double their present number.

A NAME.

ADMITTING the philosophical fact that a stream cannot rise higher than its fountain head, it may conciliate the good feeling of some reader to remember that science has now reduced her theories to such minuteness as to discover globules of royal blood floating in ignoble veins. It must be claimed that names are of some importance in navigating the investigator over all the shoals and quicksands of a long line of ancestry. "Names are things, and" adds the translator of Pelagiarism, "are instruments for moral and religious, as well as for scientific investigation; lenses, for instance, and of the most divers and most magic power, enlarging or diminishing, beautifying or deforming, multiplying, illuminating or obscuring, and investigating objects with all imaginable hues. They are weapons, shields of adamant, Damascus blades. Wise men know well their power. Good men use them, and love to see them used, only aright. High minded men scorn to use them, and blush to see them used in any other way."

Names have been the cause as well as the implements of war, arraying brother against brother, even in the household of faith. Who will doubt this who has heard the thunder of such wars, or read their history. Notwithstanding the immortal bard of Avon asks, with so much piquancy, "What's in a name?" its true import of good or bad will rest with its possessor. The blade of the sword will do just as good service as though its hilt were not wreathed with flowers. Embellishment does not impair usefulness. It is idle, if not worse than that, on the part of parents to neglect any item of intelligence which may afford the least claim to respectability or renown to the child. I would therefore inculcate and enforce by every argument within my power a due respect to the right names of both men and things in their peculiar etymology in the minds of the young.

THE object of the following pages is to make a true and correct record of one of the oldest German families, and the only one of the name in New England, which has now become quite numerous, dating back to 1699, and having already extended to the seventh generation.

Although almost every family has kept some kind of record of births, deaths, &c., yet there is nothing sufficiently definite to be found whereby any one of the present generation, unaided by tradition, could know from which branch of the family he descended. I have endeavored so to classify and arrange the several branches of this family that with a little care any one may easily ascertain who his ancestors were from the remote period of their emigration, 1699, and where they lived and died.

Genealogy is a subject that is never interesting to any except those of whom it immediately treats; and strange as it may seem, scarcely any one gives it a thought until they themselves are beginning to shrink from the cares and perplexities of life, and then they, for the first time, reflect and inquire from where and from whom they descended. I believe the remark will hold good with the learned as well as the unlearned, the obscure as well as the illustrious. Man loves to dwell upon anticipated prosperity, and to boast more of what he will do than of what his ancestors have done; feasting with hope rather than fasting with memory.

Uninteresting and neglected as the subject of genealogy is to those whom it does not immediately concern, it nevertheless affords to the reflecting mind many instructive lessons, and perhaps none of which are more important than the sad conviction of the brevity of human life.

It is now less than two hundred years since Joseph, the individual from whom descended this large posterity, was born, and yet there are now living many of the seventh generation, leaving an average of only about thirty years for each of us to act our part in life and then pass away.

Degeneracy, and everything tending thereto, like impure blood, bad habits, and unsound principles, should be assiduously guarded against, as well by individuals as by races; and in this family, although they have all escaped the poor house, and never, to my knowledge, been convicted of crime, still they have sinned, with a high hand, in another direction: They have intermarried with their own blood. Cousins and second cousins have disregarded the Levitical Law, which says, "thou shalt not marry thy grandmother," &c., and in every instance some of their children have been visited with physical malformation or mental defect, showing conclusively that nature will have her revenge whenever her laws are recklessly disregarded.

In Massachusetts, a few years ago, the Legislature became aware of this growing evil, and appointed a committee to investigate the matter and report.

One passage (page 90) of their report gives the statistics of seventeen families, the heads of which being blood relations, intermarried, which they had occasion to inquire about in the discharge of their commission. Ninety-five children were the issue of these seventeen marriages. Of the ninety-five children, one was a dwarf, one was deaf, twelve others were puny, and forty-four were idiots.

“Facts are stubborn things.” Nature speaks plainly enough here, and no consideration of sentiment, custom or prejudice should drown her voice.

I have been so occupied for the last forty years as to become familiar with every instance of physical or mental defect that has occurred in a district of twenty miles square, and in every solitary case I can show an intermarriage of blood. If this be true, is not the inheritance which we entail upon our children fraught with incalculable loss and suffering?

These intermarriages are never uniform in their development upon the children. The most feeble form of manifestation is eccentricity, in which the child is said to be odd, and does not incline to join in the sports of others of its age. Imbecility of body and mind is a fuller development of the infirmity, and such children are characterized as feeble or puny. Monomania and insanity are amongst the consequences; but the worst form, and that which oftenest occurs, is idiocy, and unfortunately for the sufferer, it is that form from which there is the least hope of improvement.

Large and respectable as this family has become, and widely as they are dispersed by migration, they have never acquired any special distinction for learning or wealth. Magistrates, physicians and clergymen are to be found in almost every generation, and religionists are quite conspicuous among the women as well as the men, and I believe as a general thing they may be characterized as a family of good common sense and true patriotism. The compiler asks no thanks for furnishing this little volume. He has no other wish than to cultivate a reverence for your parentage and a proper solicitude for your children, and ignores the idea of making any attempt to elaborate an ancestral tree. His only aim is to fix a few facts, important and interesting only to those connected in this family chain, hoping thereby to awaken in the hearts of those who may hereafter come upon the stage of being a desire to emulate the virtues, if there be any, and avoid the errors of those who have gone before. He would say with Cowper :

“ My boast is not that I deduce my birth
From loins enthroned, and rulers of the earth,
But higher far my proud pretensions rise,
The son of parents passed into the skies.”

LUDWIG GENEALOGY.

JOSEPH LUDWIG.

THE origin of the name Ludwig does not appear to be involved in so much obscurity, nor to have the same derivation that many of the family names among the German peasantry have; for in many instances, as in Zimmermann, Timberman, or Carpenter, the individual is named for the trade he has. So in Steinheart, Stoneheart, or hard heart, the individual is named for his want of feeling. Again, Schonemann, Handsomeman, the individual is named from his personal appearance, or perfect symmetry, showing very conclusively that most of the German names have more than an ordinary significance. Another instance in Schiller's Piccolomini:

COUNTESS.

Thou would'st oppose thy father then, should he
 Have otherwise determined with thy person?
 Thou mean'st to force him to thy liking? Child,
 His name is Friedland.

THEKLA.

My name too is Friedland,
 He shall have found a genuine daughter in me.

The German name Ludwig appears to be an exception to this rule, and I think it may justly be regarded as an official or royal title, the same as George, Charles, &c., and is translated Louis. The first we see of its receiving this distinction is when Charlemagne resigned his Empire of the West to his only son Ludwig, in 814. Subsequently his grandson of the same name was appointed by his father to the throne of Bavaria, and the family, notwithstanding the many serious national conflicts, have retained the title until the present time.

The ancestral line of Joseph we do not propose to pursue; but his birth, and the time of his migration to this country, is ascertained with the fullest certainty. It appears by his passport, and other statistics in our possession, that he was born in Kinderroth, Province of Dietz, Germany, in 1699, and left there, with his wife Catherine Kline, and three children, together with sixty other German families, for America, under the auspices of Brig. Gen. Samuel Waldo, in June, 1753, and while in the English Channel they touched at Cowes, Isle of Wight, when he and several other passengers died, and were buried on the coast of France. The remainder of the family arrived safe at "Broad Bay," Waldoboro', where a German colony was formed, the September following.

All the motives which actuated this family in migrating to America cannot now be easily determined. They may have been personal or public. A desire to escape civil or religious persecution would be very natural, so would a desire to improve their condition, by increasing their means of support. With their iron constitutions, and confirmed habits of industry and frugality, nothing is more reasonable than to suppose that the flattering inducements held out by Gen. Waldo in the proclamation which he issued in Frankfort, and circulated throughout Germany in 1753, was the principal cause of drawing so large a colony to this country. To be sure, they had suffered much from oppressive taxation and other burdens incident to frequent and long continued wars, but they had become accustomed to these; and all experience shows that mankind are disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, rather than to improve their condition by abolishing those habits of life to which they are accustomed. Hence it is to be inferred that the prospect opening in America was the motive power. Wal-do's proclamation reads thus: "To every family will be given one hundred and twenty acres of land, and the land, provided they dwell upon it seven years, either in person or through a substitute, shall be guaranteed to them, their heirs and assigns forever. To every one hundred and twenty families there shall be given, for the use of the church, two hundred acres. To the school, two hundred acres, and to the first preacher settling among them two hundred acres.

"As soon as they arrive in Broad Bay, if they are Protestants, they will enjoy the protection of the laws, and will be authorized, as soon as the one hundred and twenty families are together, to send a deputy to the General Court to represent them; will be obliged neither to bear arms nor carry on war; in case war should arise, they will be protected by the government, and the free exercise of all Protestant religions will be granted them. On the other hand, the government demands nothing further in return than that every one hundred and twenty families shall call and support a learned Protestant minister within five years from the time of these grants." The climate, the soil, and the fruitfulness of the country, are all painted in glowing colors, indeed the whole country is made to appear superior to the land they are about to leave forever. As a last and final inducement, they are told that there shall be given them on their arrival all necessary support for from four to six months, as they arrive early or late in the season.

Of Joseph Ludwig's personal history we know but little, except that he was a farmer and went frequently to the large market town, often taking one of his two boys with him. While they lived they often told of going with their father to Frankfort on the Main, to Darmstadt, and other large towns, where he was in the habit of selling his surplus produce, and bringing back books and other useful or ornamental articles in return. His children all had a good German education and a trade. In the rural districts, in the valley of the Rhine, where he was born, habits of industry and economy were early inculcated, and a good knowledge of their own language, with a useful trade, was thought to be indispensable by all the peasantry; and their laws were such then that they could not avoid either the one or the other if they would. He was a member of the Lutheran church, in good standing, in his native town, and he brought his certificate of membership with him.

His wife survived him a number of years, and her remains now repose on the western bank of the Madomok, near the old German church yard.

SECOND GENERATION.

Jacob Ludwig,<sup>2</sup> oldest son of Joseph,<sup>1</sup> of Dietz, was born in Germany in 1730, settled in Broad Bay in 1753, and married Marguritte Hilt in 1755. He and his brother Joseph Henry located themselves on opposite sides of the Madomok River immediately after their arrival, and the farms which they then purchased they continued to occupy and improve till the time of their death. Their tastes and vocations were very similar, often serving the town or individuals in their common affairs, as well as those of more difficult and responsible character. They had held all the offices of trust and profit within the gift of the people, from common road surveyor to that of town representative, besides the executive appointments of notary public and justice of the peace.

In Eaton's History of Warren, he says: Broad Bay was incorporated into a town by the name of Waldoboro, in 1773. Its boundaries were not well defined, and it became subsequently a matter of dispute, but was finally arranged by mutual consent; but not being familiar with the case, we shall pursue it no farther, hoping that some one competent to the task will give it in a manner worthy its posterity and the character and enterprise of its inhabitants, not forgetting to do justice to its German fathers, among whom were particularly distinguished Jacob and Joseph Ludwig, who in spite of every disadvantage found means to acquire enough of the English language to enable the former to record the early transactions of the town intelligibly, and both of them to represent it efficiently in the Legislature of Massachusetts.

Jacob, or, as baptized, John Jacob Ludwig, was about eighteen years old at the time of his arrival in America. In the latter part of the French and Indian war he seems to have resided in Boston, where he enlisted into the army, and did service at Ticonderoga, Lake George and Crown Point, and was promoted to the rank of orderly sergeant. When the town was incorporated; in 1773, he was chosen the first town clerk, and one of the first selectmen, which offices he continued to fill, with few intermissions, for forty years. He frequently represented the town in the legislature, and sustained other town offices.

In 1776 he was appointed captain of a company sent to Machias for the protection of that place. In 1788, and at several subsequent periods, he was appointed a notary public, and in 1789 appointed justice of the peace, which latter office he held till near the close of his life.

His knowledge of both English and German eminently qualified him to act as magistrate among a mixed population, nearly ignorant as they were for a time of each other's language. He retained his faculties up to the time of his death, which took place at Waldoboro' January 1, 1826.

The following lines seem very appropriate, addressed to his memory, from the prospect attained in a view from a window in the old homestead:

I look out at the window now,
Which, like an old eye glazed and dim,
And blinded by the falling snow,
Seeks in the graveyard after him
Who slumbers there,
While I sit in his ancient chair.

There the tall poplars waving high,
Pencil long shadows on the ground,
Writing with fingers from the sky
An epitaph for every mound.
He planted these —
These beautiful and grand old trees.

The patriarch of the fields has gone
 To the republic of the dead.
 Soon we shall follow, one by one,
 And under the cold turf be laid.
 But we shall rise —
 There are no graves beyond the skies.
 His children and grand-children fill
 The gray old homestead which he planned,
 The cottages that crown the hill —
 And own for many a rood the land
 That swells afar,
 To hills that meet the morning star.

JACOB LUDWIG'S<sup>2</sup> WILL.

IN the name of God, Amen. I, Jacob Ludwig, of Waldoborough, in the county of Lincoln, Esquire, fully sensible of the uncertainty of life, and conscious of my approaching dissolution, hereby make, declare and publish my last Will and Testament, as follows, to wit:

Firstly. I will and direct that my executor, hereinafter named, shall pay out of my estate all just and honest debts which I may owe at the time of my decease. * * * * *

Thirdly. I will and bequeath to my daughters, Margaret Hoffses, wife of Christian Hoffses, of Waldoborough, Eve Catherine Heibner, relict of Mathias Heibner, deceased, Elizabeth Robinson, wife of Moses Robinson, of Warren, Maria Catherine Kaler, wife of Jacob Kaler, late of Waldoborough, deceased, Catherine Reed, wife of Michael Reed, the sum of two hundred dollars each, to be paid out of my estate by the executor of this last Will and Testament, as follows: To each of my daughters abovenamed, or to their heirs, the sum of fifty dollars annually, computing from the day of my interment, with interest on each sum of fifty dollars only from and after it shall become payable.

Fourthly. I will and bequeath to my eldest son, Joseph H. Ludwig, the sum of two dollars at the expiration of one year from the probate of this instrument, which with a farm conveyed to him by me heretofore is his full and just proportion of all my estate.

Fifthly. I will, bequeath and devise unto my son, Jacob Ludwig, Junior, the farm on which I now reside, and all other real estate whatsoever of which I may die seized and possessed, including one pew in the German Meeting House, so called, in Walboborough, to have and to hold to him, the said Jacob Ludwig, Jr., his heirs and assigns forever. I also give and bequeath unto my said son, Jacob Ludwig, Junior, all my personal estate of whatsoever name or nature, howsoever I may be interested in the same, or wheresoever it may be found, subject, however, without evasion, to all the foregoing dispositions, legacies and bequests. * * * * *

Seventhly. I hereby appoint my son, Jacob Ludwig, Junior, to be sole executor of this my last Will and Testament; and I hereby revoke and annul all wills which I have heretofore made.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal, this twenty-fifth day of September, in the year of Our Blessed Lord and Redeemer one thousand eight hundred and twelve.

JACOB LUDWIG.

Signed, sealed and published by the aforementioned testator, in the presence of us, who have, in the presence of the testator and of each other, hereunto subscribed our names.

Joseph Henry Ludwig,<sup>2</sup> second son of Joseph,<sup>1</sup> of Dietz, b. in Germany, 1740, m. Elizabeth Kaler, of his own colony, 1771, died, 1833. What is said of his brother Jacob's<sup>2</sup> public life in the preceding chapter may be said of his. They, in fact, were the two principal men of the town for upwards of forty years. The Rev. Augustus Rodolphus Benedictus Ritz, their Lutheran clergyman, was a man of learning and ability; so was Dr. John Christopher Walleser, their German physician, and a Mr. Henry Frederick Helmershausen, who was a man of much learning, but neither of them participated in any of the public business of the town.

Catherine Elizabeth Ludwig,<sup>2</sup> only daughter of Joseph<sup>1</sup> and Catherine Kline, of Dietz, was born in Germany, and came to this country with her two brothers, Jacob<sup>2</sup> and Joseph Henry,<sup>2</sup> and married Godfrey Bornheimer about 1750. Her husband, it would seem, was about the same age, for "Eaton's Annals of Warren" says, Godfrey Bornheimer was a sergeant in a Broad Bay company ordered to Machias during the Revolutionary War, as well as in the French and Indian difficulties previous.

Joseph Henry Ludwig,<sup>3</sup> oldest son of Jacob<sup>2</sup> and Margarete Hilt, was born in Waldoboro', 1767, m. Margarete Winchenbach, of the Dutch Neck, 1791, died 1852. He always lived on a farm, which his father gave him, on the eastern side of the river, about five miles below the village, dividing his time between his farm and his household till he died, thereby showing his consistency in natural things, as he always did in spiritual things, letting his faith be known by his works. He was an unusually zealous and devout member of the Lutheran Church for about twenty years, when he was transferred to the Congregational Church, and immediately on his admission was chosen deacon, and continued to hold the office, with much credit to himself and the entire satisfaction of the church and society, till he died, during a period of over thirty years.

*OBITUARY.

Died, in Waldoboro', Sept. 17th, Mr. Isaac Ludwig, aged 56.

He never was blessed with a view of the beauties of this world, having been blind from infancy. But his mind was strong, especially his memory. He could repeat verbatim long passages of scripture and many hymns which he had acquired by hearing them read. He could also tell the age of nearly every individual in a circuit of miles around. He was converted under the preaching of Rev. Mr. Mitchell in W. more than forty years ago. He united with the Congregational Church in W. in Nov. 1818. From the time of his conversion until his death he maintained a remarkably consistent Christian character, seeming continually to rejoice in hope. His spiritual apprehension of the great truths of christianity was unusually clear. Doubts never seemed to enter his mind. The language of his whole life and character seemed to be, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." He was very useful in social meetings, being always ready and active, and very happy in exhortation and prayer. In such meetings the little church of which he was a member when he died (Second Congregational Church in W.) will deeply feel his loss. He was exceedingly active visiting the sick, encouraging and praying with them. Neither the cold and snow of winter nor the heat of summer could abate his zeal for doing good. He was often seen feeling his way along the road, when those who could see would remain at home. Sometimes when the snow was so deep that he could not wade through it, he has been seen creeping on his hands and knees that he might visit some sick person or perform some other duty. He was constant in his private devotions. Three times a day would he retire to his closet and his voice be heard in prayer. Even the very coldest weather could not keep him by the fireside when his hour of prayer came. When his sister, with whom he lived, would ask him if he was not cold when thus engaged, he would answer, "O, no, my heart is warm with love to God, and that warms me all through." He was known as a good man by every one for miles around, and will be much missed and lamented. But he will be most missed at home, where his earnest, effectual prayers seemed, to those near and dear to him, like the protecting wings of a guardian angel. He will be deeply lamented in this little church, now bereft of three of its members within a few months. He will no more go from house to house to exhort and pray. He will no more go to the outskirts of the town to hold his little meetings, for his work is all done, and he has gone to his rest. He used to love to sing. Now, no doubt, he is singing in heaven. The following three verses were great favorites with him :

Thou dear Redeemer, dying Lamb,
 I love to hear of thee;
 No music like thy charming name,
 Nor half so sweet can be.

When we appear in yonder cloud,
 With all the favored throng,
 Then will we sing more sweet, more loud,
 And Christ shall be our song.

When we've been there ten thousand years,
 Bright shining as the sun,
 We've no less days to sing God's praise
 Than when we first begun.

Although death came upon him very suddenly and unexpectedly, yet his good hope never faltered. On Sabbath, Sept. 13th, he attended meeting all day and evening, apparently as well as any one present. In the evening he seemed in a very happy frame of mind as he spoke of his good hope in Christ which he had possessed more than forty years, and recommended it to the impenitent. This was his last exhortation and prayer. He was taken sick the next morning, and died on Thursday afternoon. His good hope in Christ sustained him to the very last, as was evident from the answer he gave to the question, "Are you ready to die?" His faint answer was, "Yes, glory be to God, I am ready and willing." And our dear Bro. Ludwig fell asleep in Jesus, to awake in the glorious morning of the resurrection. And now the admonition comes home to us all, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

10.

Jacob Ludwig,<sup>3</sup> second son of Jacob<sup>2</sup> and Margarett Hilt, was born in Boston in 1776, and removed with his parents the next year to Broad Bay, where he continued to live upon the same estate that was owned and occupied by his father, ever after. He was married by Patrick Pebbles, Esq., to Susan Hutchins, daughter of Robert Hutchins, of Cushing, of Scotch Irish descent, in the year 1797, at the age of twenty, and died Nov. 5, 1858. His wife died Feb. 24, 1838.

During the Irish rebellions, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, several of the counties in the north of Ireland became nearly depopulated, and her successor, James I. caused those counties to be settled by a Protestant population, as he said, to introduce a higher state of cultivation among them. This is the race, flowing from different parts of Scotland, which furnishes the material of the Scotch Irish immigration to this country, and from which this Hutchins family descended.

They settled first at Boothbay, and were more or less intermingled with the Dutch and Germans of that region, their descendants many of them containing blood of each race, and blending their joint exertions, their distinct origin almost lost, in giving prosperity to the country which their ancestors first opened to the light of civilization.

OBITUARY.

Died, in Walboboro, Nov. 3d, 1858, Col. Jacob Ludwig, aged 82 years.

Col. Ludwig was of German descent. His father, Capt. Jacob Ludwig, was one of the German emigrants who settled at Waldoboro' in 1748, was an orderly sergeant in the French and Indian wars, commanded a company in the war of the Revolution, and was the first representative from Waldoboro' to the General Court of Massachusetts.

Col. Ludwig had but few early advantages of education; possessing a strong and active mind, he improved every opportunity to obtain knowledge. He frequently represented Waldoboro' both in the Legislature of Massachusetts and of Maine. He was one of the selectmen of the town for more than a quarter of a century, and a deputy sheriff more than thirty years. Candid and decided in the expression of his opinions, prompt, fearless and judicious in the discharge of duty. Highly respected as a citizen, few men, in any community, have received and retained for so long a time the confidence of the people. Practically benevolent and public spirited, ever giving his influence on the side of virtue, morality and religion. Many who have enjoyed his society abroad, or partaken of the cheerful hospitalities of his house, will remember his manly form, gentlemanly bearing, general conversation, and the fund of useful information he was ever ready to impart. As a husband, father and friend he possessed those amiable, kind and endearing qualities which make happy and joyous the domestic circle. As a christian, he exemplified the religion of Jesus more by his consistent life and conversation than by any outward profession.

The infirmities of age came gradually upon him. He remarked, a few weeks previous to his death, that his faculties were impaired, his usefulness ended; he was now ready and waiting his summons to depart. His last sickness was short; the day before his death he walked in his fields, apparently as well as usual. His work all done—life well spent—the summons came—and he has gone to rest awhile, that he may be present at the resurrection of the just. R.

REMINISCENCES.

WITH this third generation the German language is but little spoken, and their religious teachings, which have been uninterruptedly maintained for over a hundred years, are now fast giving way before an advancing system of English education. From their earliest arrival at Broad Bay, in 1740, they had religious services performed on the Sabbath. Having no settled minister at first, one Charles Leisnor, who came over with them as an agent for Gen. Waldo, officiated as religious teacher until his death, in 1760. After Leisnor, one John Ulmer, of their colony, was employed to conduct their meetings, and it was said Gen. Waldo allowed him a fixed sum for preaching. After a few years he and his family, which was quite numerous, removed to Thomaston, and took up that large tract of land at "Blackinton's Corner," embracing all the valuable lime rock in that vicinity; and from this family descended all of the name of Ulmer in Rockland and the region round about.

Soon after this the Rev. Frederick Croner received a call, married one of John Ulmer's daughters, and settled as their minister. He remained about four years, and was dismissed. The next clergyman whom they employed was the Rev. John Martin Schaeffer, last from Boston. He agreed with them, on condition of having a lot of land as a settlement, and £3, old tenor, and two days' work, yearly, from each settler. He was a smart preacher, and a good singer, and was thought to be a man of great learning; but from the want of proper judges it is difficult to determine what his literary acquirements were. His moral character seems to have been less equivocal. He had left a wife in Germany, seduced the wife of another, a woman of great personal beauty, and brought her over to this country with him.

Not satisfied with his income as a preacher, he practiced as a physician also, and gained much fame as well as wealth by blood letting and dealing out medicine. He made many of his people believe it was necessary to be bled every spring, for which he received a regular fee of fifty cents from each inhabitant of adult age. As wealth increased, restraint was thrown off, and his vices appeared without a blush. He was very profane, grew intemperate, and though a stirring preacher, gradually lost all influence as a minister and a man. (Eaton's History of Warren).

It is told that during the Revolutionary War a Mr. Dalham, an honest old soldier, returned home from the army sick, with a Spanish doubloon in his pocket, and learning that his family during his absence had been sick too, and that Dr. Schaeffer, their family physician, had been very kind and attentive during their sickness, hastened to discharge the obligation while he had money. He found the doctor at home, and in a brief way introduced the subject, and threw down his doubloon upon the table. The doctor looked about and began to sum up as follows, as he did not keep any books: "Vel, ven your vife vos sick first, dat vos den taller; next dime, vos vour taller; den your poy vas sick, dat vas one taller, and one half taller." Finding the doubloon, which passed for $16.50, was not wholly consumed, he began to scratch his head to quicken his recollection, and then announced, "Oh! your last schild, I christed dat, dare ish another half taller." But there was still another half dollar unappropriated, and the doctor from the beginning seemed not to be satisfied with anything short of the whole, began to ransack his brain a second time, looked wiser than before, and presto, the idea came "Oh! now I cot it," said the doctor, "One dime ven we dink your vife vill die, I gift her the sacrament; dat vas another half taller," and picking up the doubloon, fled to another room, relieving poor Mr. Dalham from any further care about the money.

From this time a new era seemed to open for these poor people, who had been wretchedly imposed upon by itinerant preachers.

In 1795, Frederick Augustus Rodolphus Benedictus Ritz, a native of Germany, was called, and entered immediately on the work of his ministry. He was educated in his native country, at the University of Helmstadt. He was a man of great piety and learning, and emigrated to this country in 1751, became a member of the Lutheran Synod of Pennsylvania, and was there for some time as pastor of four congregations. He remained with the people of Waldoboro' until his death, which was in 1811, universally lamented not only by his church and society, but by all who knew him.

The Rev. Paul Coffin, D.D., of Buxton, Me., a Congregational clergyman, in making a tour through the wilderness of Maine as a missionary in 1796, called upon Mr. Ritz, and says of him: "He could not pronounce th. Th and with could not sound from his Dutch (German) mouth. He knew something of five languages, as did I. We both knew something of the Latin, Greek, French and English. He knew Dutch (German) to which I opposed my Hebrew. He appears sociable, benevolent and pious, and is something of a divine.”

Previous to Mr. Ritz, a very popular Moravian clergyman, by the name of Cilly, was employed here for a time, and when he left about seventy of his converts went with him. They settled in North Carolina, and their descendants have become quite numerous, though the name of Kinsel, which was among the emigrants, has become extinct in the male line.

Rev. John William Starman, who succeeded Mr. Ritz, in 1811, was born in Sennep, a town in Rhenish Prussia, Germany, about four miles from Dusseldorf, one of the old cities on the western bank of the Rhine, where he served an apprenticeship to fit him for commercial life.

NOTE.—The writer of this article was in Dusseldorf a few years ago, and conversed with several who knew Mr. Starman personally, when he was employed as a clerk in the store of a woollen draper in that city, and from those persons he learned something of his early history.

He received the rudiments of his education in his native town and his father's house, and was designed for a merchant; but after the death of his father in 1787, who was a Lutheran clergyman, he came to New York, and put himself under the tuition of the late Rev. F. W. Geissenhainer, D. D., a celebrated divine in the study of theology, and it was there he prepared himself for the Gospel Ministry, and in due time offered himself to the Lutheran Synod for examination. He was examined, accepted and received a license to preach to any vacant congregation. Soon after, he received a call from the people of Waldoboro, where he preached in the German language till 1840. By this time he had acquired some knowledge of the English language and gave the people his first written sermon. Many were there from other societies out of curiosity to hear him. Although it was not a perfect failure, you might say with the poet, vox hæsit faucibus. He however persevered, and in a few years was not only able to speak the English language correctly, but to discharge the duties of Superintendent of Common Schools, to which office he had been elected, to the entire acceptance of that large and intelligent community in which he lived.

When the people of this colony, who as a nation were devout, arrived at Broad Bay in 1740 and 1753, most of them were members of the church, and those who were not soon became so. The prerequisites for admission were, a profession of faith, with an ability to repeat the articles of their belief, (Christlichen glaubens), and the Lord's Prayer, which they call Vater unser. Many were admitted by the time they were ten years old. This lax and unsatisfactory test, together with a discrimination which was made at the communion table, seemed to call for reform. The church had been divided, from the first, between the Lutherans and the German Reformed. At the celebration of the Lord's Supper, the former took the bread and wine from the communion service themselves, while the latter had the bread put into their mouths and the wine cup held to their lips by the deacon. Mr. Starman labored hard and long to reconcile these differences, telling them, among other things, that they were all of one Father and ought to be of one faith. From the time he first came among them, he began to inaugurate a more rational and rigid discipline, with reference to church membership, requiring some other evidence of fitness besides an ability to repeat the articles of their belief and the Lord's Prayer, and he had the satisfaction of living long enough to see both sects come to the same communion table and unite in one great brotherhood of the church in undivided fellowship.

The old church edifice in which all the German clergymen of the place have officiated in the order in which they have been presented, is still standing, about one mile south from the village, on the western bank of the Madomok River, in a tolerable state of preservation,—indeed, with no marks of neglect or decay save those made by the “tooth of time.”

CAPTURE OF THE SHIP HIRAM, A. D. 1800.

The following account of the capture and recapture of the ship Hiram, when commanded by Capt. Samuel Austin Whitney, has at length been found in the columns of the New England Palladium for January 16, 1801. About the same time, a more detailed account appeared in a Castine paper, which it is hoped may yet be recovered.

Samuel Austin Whitney was born in Concord, Mass., Sept 27, 1770, and at the date of this occurrence was thirty years of age. His brother Henry, born Jan. 29, 1783, was in his eighteenth year. They were the sons of Samuel and Abigail (Cutler) Whitney, successively of Boston, Concord and Castine. A few copies of the letter have been printed, to insure its preservation.

Boston, Oct. 8, 1859.

Extract of a letter from Capt. WHITNEY, of the ship Hiram, to a gentleman of this town, dated "Fort [Port] Royal, Martinique, November 18. [1800.]

"I arrived here the 13th inst., after being twice taken and re-taken; and one hundred and two days at sea. I left Liverpool the 2d of August, and on the 13th September, being in longitude 55° and latitude 29°, I was taken by a French sloop-of-war, and all my people taken out, except Harry, (second mate, a brother of Capt. W., aged seventeen years,) one man, and a boy twelve years of age, an apprentice of mine; and manned with ten Frenchmen, and ordered for Cayenne. I, being determined on an attempt to retake my ship, on first discovering her to be French, loaded my pistols and hid them in a crate of ware, which had I not done I should have lost them, for no less than three different times were my trunks searched for them, as were the cabin and all parts of the ship which they could come at. They found my ammunition, but my pistols were secure; and such was their extreme caution, that they would not allow any man to be off deck; but ate, drank and slept on deck.

"Finding that I could not obtain any advantage of them by getting them below, I determined to attack them openly, by daylight. Therefore, at about four o'clock, on the fourth day after being taken, I secured my pistols in my waistband, having previously told Harry and my man my determination, and directed them to have a couple of handspikes where they could clasp their hands upon them in an instant, and when they saw me begin, to come to my assistance.

“The Prize Master was now asleep on the weather hen-coop, his mate at the wheel, and the crew on different parts of the main deck. Under these circumstances, I made the attempt by first knocking down the mate at the wheel. The master started up so quick that I could get but a very slight stroke at him ; upon which he drew his dirk upon me, but I closed in with him, sallied him out of the quarter rail and threw him overboard ; but he caught by the main chains, and so escaped going into the water. By this time I had the remaining eight upon me, two of whom I knocked backwards off the quarter beck, and Harry and my man coming aft at this time with handspikes, played their part so well among them that I soon got relieved. I then drew a pistol, and shot a black fellow in the head, who was coming at me with a broad-axe. The ball only cut him to the bone, and then glanced, but it had an excellent effect, by letting the rest know that I had pistols, of which they had no idea. By this time, the mate, whom I had first knocked down, had recovered, and ran down to his trunk and got a pistol, which he fired directly at my man’s face, but the ball missed him.

“The Prize Master, whom I hove over the quarter, got in again, and stabbed Harry in the side, but not so bad as to oblige him to give out till we had conquered. In this situation we had it pell-mell for about a quarter of an hour, when we got them a running, and followed them on, knocking down the hindmost, two or three times around the deck, when a part of them escaped below, and the rest begged for mercy, which we granted on their delivering up their weapons, which consisted of a discharged pistol, a midshipman's dirk, a broad-axe, a hand-saw, &c. We then marched them aft into the cabin, and brought them up one at a time, after strictly searching them, and confined them down forward."

Ten days after this daring action, Capt. W. was again captured by a privateer schooner from Guadeloupe, who plundered his ship of £8,000 or £10,000 sterling, put on board a crew of 15 French, and ordered her for Guadeloupe. After being in their hands 46 days, he was retaken by an English frigate and sent into Martinique.

Moses R. Ludwig,<sup>4</sup> second son of Jacob<sup>3</sup> and Susan Hutchins, of Cushing, was b. in Wal., Jan. 2, 1799, studied medicine with Drs. James Bowen and Francis Caldwell, of Somerset County, and John Manning, M. D., of his native town; graduated, M. D., Mid. Coll., Vt., 1824; removed to Thomaston April 25, 1825, where he has enjoyed a full share of the practice of his profession for upwards of forty years. He was married by Rev. George Keely to Sophia Balch, a pupil of Harriet Newell, of Haverhill, Mass., May 6, 1830, who was born Sept. 5, 1807, and d. March 22, 1855.

Among the official stations which he has occupied may be mentioned that he was one of the original founders of the academy in Thomaston, in 1844, and being one of the trustees by act of incorporation, he was chosen the first president of the board, and has been re-elected annually ever since. He has likewise been one of the directors of the Mutual Insurance Company for thirty years, and is now the only survivor of the board as it was at the time of his election. He has held the position of Commissioner on State Prison affairs; was a member of the Legislature in 1860, and received the unanimous support of his party for Speaker of the House in opposition to Hon. Fred. A. Pike, of Calais. He has also been a member of the Senate, and one of the trustees of the Insane Hospital.

In 1851, his health became impaired, and by the advice of medical friends, he visited Europe, and on his return he was so much recovered as to be able to resume the practice of his profession. During his absence he saw much of Germany, the birth place of his ancestors, and learned something of the manners and customs of her people, an account of which was published in the "Lincoln Miscellany," and other newspapers of the day.

He was married in 1858, by Rev. William Littlefield, to his 2d wife, Hannah C. (Robbins) Thomas, widow of Hon. William Thomas, late of Rockland, and the only daughter of Lieut. Otis Robbins, who commanded Fort Preble, Portland Harbor, during the war with Great Britain, in 1812. Her only son, Albert F. Thomas, had command of the 2d Maine Battery during most of our late rebellion. He died in Boston, March 1, 1866, from disease contracted in the army.

voted much care and expense in ornamenting and embellishing an old burying place, which was located on a very desirable part of his farm when he purchased it, intending, no doubt, as the sequel proves, to make it a final resting place for himself and family. Here his beautiful and accomplished daughter Sarah McCobb lies buried, beside her young and confiding husband.

Here, too, may be found the neglected grave of Rolan Cushing, Esq., of Scotch Irish descent, a man of rare native talents, and very celebrated as a lawyer. He was a brother to Judge William and Charles Cushing, who figured largely in this State, in the legal profession, a hundred years ago. He graduated at Harvard College in the class of 1768, and died in Waldoboro', 1788. No monumental slab marks his resting place.

OBITUARY.

Died in Waldoboro, Nov. 19, 1864, William E. Ludwig, aged 22 years and 1 day.

He left home with the 20th Maine Regiment, Aug., 1862, and arrived in Washington in time to participate in driving the invaders from Maryland. From exposure and rapid marching he became so much exhausted as to be unfit for duty, and was sent to the hospital in York, Penn. Unwilling to have the time pass by unimproved, he began the study of anatomy and surgery, and by diligent attention, together with frequent opportunities of witnessing the army practice, he had already made great proficiency and had decided to follow the medical profession as a means of livelihood. Genial, courteous and dignified, he won alike the love of the aged and the young. Gifted with fine musical talent, he was never chary of the gift, and wiled away many a weary homesick hour amid the gloom of hospital life, by his cheery songs. He possessed a well-governed mind, and had the power of concentrating his thoughts upon whatever subject he chose. This was his crowning acquisition, and the hope of much promise to his friends.

He returned from City Point about two weeks ago, where he had been prostrated by fever, and continued to fail rapidly until the close of his life.

"At home!" as he uttered these words the morning after his return to his father, they seemed to convey so much joyous trustfulness, as to hallow them with a renewed benediction.

Never, since the earliest period of our history as a nation, could it be more truly said than now, that our whole land is the "Valley of the shadow of death." There is scarce one spot of burial ground, but some recently upturned sod greets the eye, speaking more eloquently, though mutely, than any human voice, of a life given to our country, and with still more tender meaning, of desolation in bereaved hearts. The incense of this costly sacrifice of youth, health, and life, laid upon the altar that thus has arisen before the throne of Him "who regardeth all things," is not lost. The subject of this brief notice left school and home "burning with high hope," and came back pale and still with the language of thanksgiving upon his lips and the light of a new found Saviour's love beaming from his eyes. This thought,

Earth's lonely pathway cheereth,
Bidding the darkness from around it flee;
The loved in life, whom death the more endeareth,
Dearest shall be through all eternity,

Com.

The oldest son of this family, a bright, intelligent boy, was attached to a vessel commanded by Rufus Kelloch, and on the 9th March, 1862, sailed from Tenants Harbor, St. George, with a fair wind, bound to Calais, Me., for a cargo of lumber, and has not been heard from since. During the first night out the wind was variable, with squalls, and as the vessel was light, it is supposed she capsized, and all on board perished. Some three months after, the captain's chest went on shore at Cape Cod.

Joseph Fish,<sup>4</sup> only child of Charlotte Ludwig<sup>3</sup> and Samuel Fish, was born in Wal., 1802, and m. Jane Young, of St. George, 1825; at the age of twenty-one he went to St. George, with not a cent in his pocket, and engaged successfully in teaching a winter school, and repeated the task for a number of winters in succession; with what he had thus earned by teaching, he purchased a few goods, and opened as a trader. His business increasing rapidly, he was soon able to invest a little in navigation; and from that day to this his business has continued to expand, and now he can count his ships by tens, and his dollars by hundreds of thousands.

Joseph William Ludwig,<sup>4</sup> son of John<sup>3</sup> and Sophrona Pease of Hope, was born in Waldoboro' in 1828, and married Cate J. Post of South Thomaston, in 1850. He was but six years old when he was left, by the death of his father, with his mother and two other children without any means of support. At this early period he began to think the life of a mariner would be most congenial to his taste, and in a few years he commenced as all successful boys do, first as cabin boy, then as foremast man, and from that he soon became master and owner. During the late rebellion he commanded a government steamship, and was actively employed during the whole of the war. He has now retired with honor and wealth to the peaceful enjoyment of family and home.

The Boston Advertiser of the 12th of February speaks of him as having purchased the Vicksburg and Shreveport Railroad, at auction, for $50,000.

"A kiss for his mother's sake," was given to him, after his death, by a lady who took care of him during his sickness. From this incident, the late Mrs. L. H. Sigourney wrote the following poem :

"LET ME KISS HIM FOR HIS MOTHER."—The editor of the New Orleans Advocate has this incident about the ravages of the yellow fever in that city, related to him by one of the Methodist pastors :

"The preacher was called a few days since to attend the funeral of a young man. Before his sickness he was a stout, buoyant, manly youth. He was from the State of Maine, and had been here but a short time. He was attacked by yellow fever, and soon died, with no mother or relative to watch by his bedside, or to soothe him with that sympathy which none but those of our own 'dear kindred blood' can feel or manifest. He died among strangers and was buried by them. When the funeral service was over, and the strange friends who had ministered to him were about to finally close the coffin, an old lady, who stood by, stopped them and said, 'Let me kiss him for his mother.' We have yet to find the first man or woman to whose eye this simple recital has not brought tears."

“TWAS FOR HIS MOTHER'S SAKE.”

BY MRS. L. H. SIGOURNEY.

He died amid a stranger band,
 Though in his native clime,—
 The fever smote him, and he fell
 In his fresh morning prime.
 A strong and stalwart youth was he,
 Reared 'mid the hills of Maine,
 And in his wild, delirious dream,
 He saw those hills again.

No care of kindred soothed his pain,
 Or watch'd his sleepless night,
 Or cool'd the burning lips that verg'd
 Into the deadly white;
 But unknown hands in haste prepared
 The narrow coffin bed,
 And a small funeral group drew near
 Where holy prayers were said.

But ere the coffin-lid they clos'd,
 An ancient woman prest
 Forth from that group, and laid her hand
 Upon that pulseless breast,
 And with a solemn fervor kiss'd
 The forehead cold as clay.

“'Tis for his mother's sake,” she said,
 And mournful turn'd away.

And so that mother's friendship-seal
 Down to his grave he bore,
 Who never to their cottage home
 Shall greet her darling more;
 While many an eye unused to weep
 Felt lingering moisture break,
 To hear that aged woman's words—
 " 'Twas for his mother's sake."

Hartford, Jan. 16th, 1859.

The incident took place during the fever in New Orleans, in the summer of 1858.

REMINISCENCES OF COTEMPORARIES.

WITH this generation teachers of the English language began to be employed, first in private families, then in our public schools. Newell W. Wetherbee, of Barnstable, Mass., was engaged in the early part of 1800, and he may justly be said to be the first teacher who inspired the children with a love for English literature instead of their vernacular dialect.

Hon. NATHANIEL GROTON, soon after this, prepared himself for a public education, and he was the first young man on the eastern side of the Kennebec River who aspired to that honorable distinction. He studied the languages and the higher branches of mathematics at Hebron Academy, which was then in high repute, under the instruction of Bezaleel Cushman, and graduated at Bowdoin College in the class of 1814. He commenced the study of the law in his native town, in the office of Hon. Isaac G. Reed, an eminent lawyer, and finished it with that distinguished advocate and politician, Hon. Benjamin Ames, of Bath. After his admission to the bar, he opened an office in Bath for the practice of his profession. In 1832 and 1834 he was elected State senator from Lincoln County, and in the latter year he was appointed Judge of Probate, which office he held by successive executive appointments till near the time of his death, which was at Bath, his adopted town, Oct. 25, 1858.

WILLIAM JEWETT FARLEY was the second young man from Waldoboro' who received a public education. He was fitted for college at Lincoln and Hebron Academies, and graduated at Bowdoin in the class of 1820. He read with the Hon. Isaac G. Reed, of his native town, and was admitted to the Lincoln bar after the usual period of study. He located himself first at Camden, which then belonged to Lincoln County, in 1825; from there he removed, the next year, to Thomaston, where he and his family contributed largely towards the culture and social refinement of the place, and became a competitor of the Hon. John Ruggles and the Hon. Jonathan Cilly in the practice of his profession and in the party politics of that day.

He was a young man of a high order of intellect, and uncommon powers of elocution, and very acute discrimination of legal principles, and soon attained to a high position at the bar. He was twice brought forward by the whig party, of which he was the exponent in Thomaston, as a candidate for Congress, and with his fine abilities, courteous manners, and amiable disposition, would have done honor to himself and his constituents had he been elected; but for want of that popular element, an influence with the masses, he was defeated. Although he died young, he left ample proof that had his life been prolonged he would not only have been an ornament to the bar, but an honor to the State.

He was twice married: first to Alice McKeene, of Brunswick, daughter of Rev. Joseph McKeene, LL. D., first president of Bowdoin College, May 10, 1826. She died in 1827. He married for his second wife Sarah Emerson, daughter of Robert Foster, Esq., of West Chester, Penn., a young lady of rare accomplishments, Dec. 10, 1829. He had four children by his second wife: 1. John; 2. Alice McKeene; 3. Benjamin Emerson; 4. Sally Jewett, who is the only one that survived her father, and she is still living in Penn. He died in Thomaston, June 16, 1839, in the 36th year of his age.

ISAAC GROTON, brother to the Hon. Nathaniel, was the third from this town to receive a collegiate education, was fitted at Hebron Academy, and graduated at Bowdoin, in the class of 1821, and died in 1833, aged 33. He read law in the office of Hon. Isaac G. Reed, in his native town, and after he was admitted to the bar, he opened an office in Waldoboro', and soon acquired great notoriety as a collector, and it is believed he devoted his whole time and energy to that particular branch of his profession, and so lucrative was the business, that although he died young, he died rich.

WILLIAM LUDWIG, after receiving a common school education, put himself under the tuition of the Rev. James Hall, a graduate from the University at Edinburgh, Scotland, and then gave such attention to the classics and higher branches of mathematics as to well qualify him for admission into either of our colleges. But his limited means were exhausted; he therefore abandoned the idea of anything more than an elementary education. In this state of things, he entered his name with Dr. Benjamin Brown, as a student in medicine. After the usual course of study, and attending two full courses of lectures, without any pecuniary aid except what he earned by teaching, he graduated at Bowdoin College as Doctor of Medicine in 1825. Other members of the family underwent a similar course of discipline; but as a paragraph is devoted to each of them in the genealogical arrangement, it is not thought necessary to say anything further in this connection.

ISAAC REED, who had advantages beyond many of his time, received a good classical education at Bloomfield Academy, and was well fitted to follow in the footsteps of his father, the Hon. Isaac G. Reed of Waldoboro', who was one of the soundest lawyers at the Lincoln bar; but seeing, or fancying that he saw, a shorter and more direct road to wealth and respectability, and one more congenial to his taste, in commercial pursuits, he abandoned the idea of a profession, and soon became not only rich, but one of the leading men of the State, thereby demonstrating the sentiment most conclusively, that wealth is the royal road to high social position as well as official preferment, and that we have in Republican America a moneyed aristocracy, notwithstanding our boast to the masses that the sovereign people rule. He was State Treasurer from 1856 to 1857; has been a member of the State Senate and of the Executive Council, and served three years as Trustee of the Insane Hospital. In 1854 and 1855 he was the whig candidate for Governor, and in 1852 and 1853. he represented his district in the Congress of the United States.

EDWARD A. REED, brother of the preceding, was fitted for college at Warren Academy, and graduated at Union College, N. Y., 1836. He studied his profession with his father, the Hon. Isaac G. Reed of Waldoboro', and was admitted to practice after the usual course. He was a young man of eminent abilities, and was every way qualified to prosecute with distinguished success the brilliant career which opened before him. He early discovered a rare talent for oratory and elocution, and was considered one of the finest speakers at Lincoln bar; but unfortunately his health soon became impaired, and he was obliged to abandon the profession which his father had chosen for him, and in which, if his health had not failed, he doubtless would have made himself conspicuous, and have ranked high among the members of the bar.

AUGUSTUS F. LASH received his preparatory education at Bloomfield Academy, and from private teachers, and graduated at Bowdoin College in the class of 1829, and died 1848. He took charge of Lincoln Academy immediately on leaving college, and devoted himself exclusively to teaching. He was a young man of strong mind and much energy of character, and while in college he excelled in the department of mathematics. He was twice married; first to Miss Lydia Myric, a sister of Dr. Lot Myric, late of Augusta; 2d, Mrs. Melcher of Newcastle. His age was 47..

JOHN G. BROWN, a young man of much promise, received his academical course at Newcastle Academy, and studied medicine with his father, Dr. Benjamin Brown of Waldoboro', and graduated as Doctor of Medicine at Bowdoin College in the class of 1826. He practiced his profession several years in Waldoboro', married Miss Bertha Smouse, a step-daughter of the Hon. Isaac G. Reed of that town, a young lady of a highly cultivated mind, and great personal beauty, removed to the new and rising city of Bangor in 1835, earned quite a name as an operating surgeon (a department in which his father was celebrated), then removed to Roxbury, Mass., where he buried his wife in about 1840. From there he removed to Reading, Mass., where he married a second wife, and died in April, 1866.

GEORGE SPROUL is one of the few young men of Waldoboro', who received more than an ordinary education, considering the limited advantages the town afforded for those without pecuniary means.

In 1818 he entered Farmington Academy, then under the care of Rev. William A. Drew, now of Augusta, and remained there for a time, and as mathematics was the study he wished to pursue, he removed to Bloomfield Academy, where he was told they had a mathematician, in the person of Rev. James Hall of Edinburgh, Scotland, who was not excelled by any one in the State, and so he found him. Here he remained about two years, industriously employed in acquiring information. On the opening of the Lyceum at Gardiner, under the late Dr. Holmes, he entered that institution, and remained some two years, or until he had acquired a thorough and a finished English education. He then abandoned the pursuit of letters as a business, and engaged in shipbuilding, lumbering, and the like, and for a time had command of a ship which he built himself. He soon, however, forsook the sea, as not congenial, and employed himself about his large estate; built a brick block, of large proportions, on the site of the old homestead, for himself and tenants; enlarged and improved his mills, wharves, and other productive property, and was at that time regarded as one of the rich men of Waldoboro'. But in an evil hour, when in the height of his prosperity, a great and devastating fire broke out in the village, which left his large block, with many other buildings, nothing but a heap of smouldering ruins, without any insurance. None disheartened, he commenced the next day making preparations, and in a very short time rebuilt the entire block, in its original style of architecture, and it has been occupied ever since to its utmost capacity. Mr. S. has always been a hard working, industrious man, and had he been less desultory in his operations might have left a record that would compare favorably with the best of old Waldoboro's sons.

REUBEN SEIDERS, SON of Jacob Seiders, of Waldoboro, a respectable farmer, in moderate circumstances, fitted himself for college by his own exertions, and was a student at Bodowin in 1827, and graduated in 1831. Subsequently we find him in the divinity school, Cambridge, Mass., where he graduated in 1836, and became a Unitarian preacher.

During his residence in Cambridge he contracted an intimacy with a beautiful young lady, of family and fortune, by the name of Austin, in the male line of which the name had become extinct, and wishing to perpetuate it, as a matter of compromise, we presume, he not only took her, but by legislative enactment he took her name also.

She and her mother, who constituted the whole family previous to the marriage, possessed such a fortune as not to require any effort on the part of Mr. S. in the way of support for the family; but like a retired city clergyman, preached only when convenient for him to do so.

He was born in Wal., 1809, and graduated by the name of Richard T. Austin, at Bowdoin, in 1831, and at Harvard Divinity School in 1836. He died at Cambridge in 1847, aged 39.

EDWARD R. BENNER, a young man of German origin, descended from the Levensaler stock, who were celebrated for their ability to acquire knowledge; they can almost be said to be learned by intuition. He spent three years at Waterville College, and in his junior year entered Dartmouth College, N. H., where he graduated in 1856. He has been a teacher several years, and is now an apothecary in his native town.

JOHN J. BULFINCH, son of John Bulfinch of Waldoboro', one of the few of our old school lawyers, was educated at Bowdoin College, and graduated in 1850; at the Bangor Theological Seminary in 1856, and is now a settled Congregational clergyman in Newcastle, Me., where he has charge of a large and intelligent church and society.

HENRY A. KENNEDY, son of Hon. Henry A. Kennedy of Waldoboro', graduated at Waterville College with distinguished honor in 1860, and is now deputy collector at the port of Waldoboro'.

ALMORE KENNEDY, brother to the above, was a Waterville graduate in 1860 also. He read law with Sebastian S. Marble, and is now in full practice in his native Waldoboro'.

GRADUATES.—The town of Waldoboro' has not furnished a large number of students in our colleges, considering the number of her inhabitants and the amount of their wealth; nor can we present so long a list of graduates as many other towns in the State. The preceding chapter gives an account of all, from the first settlement of the place to the present day, whose names have ever appeared on a college catalogue.

THE LATE REV. O. J. FERNALD.

The funeral of the lamented clergyman of the Unitarian Church at Thomaston, whose sudden decease in this city we announced in our last number, took place on Sunday afternoon, 12th inst., in that town. The universal respect and esteem in which this good man was held throughout the community, were evinced in the spontaneous tribute paid to his memory in the assemblage of great numbers of the citizens of the towns adjoining his residence, as well as of almost the whole population of Thomaston, to unite in the funeral solemnities. Since the interment of General Knox, it is said, no such funeral has been seen in this part of the State. The sacred remains of the beloved pastor, followed by the bereaved family and the mourning relatives, were escorted to the church, so many years the scene of his cherished labors, by a procession consisting of several hundreds of the Masonic Fraternity, of which Mr. Fernald was an honored and endeared member. The exterior of the church fronting the street, as well as the interior, were draped in mourning, and a profusion of beautiful flowers—the flowers he loved so well—from the sweet arbutus, native of the woods, to the choicest productions of parlor and greenhouse—covered the coffin. Rev. Doct. Robbins of Boston, his own former pastor, who had been expected at the obsequies, but was unable to attend, wrote: "I had great esteem for Mr. Fernald as a man, and especially as a Christian minister. The last time I saw him we had a long conversation, and I was highly gratified and impressed by the earnestness and positiveness of his faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, our blessed Redeemer." The exercises at the church, which were very appropriate and touching, were conducted by the friend and fellow-student of Mr. Fernald in his professional studies, Rev. Mr. Reynolds of Concord, Mass., who came here expressly on this mission of duty and affection. The other places of worship in the village were closed. The church was crowded to overflowing by saddened and sympathizing hearts, and yet not one-fifth of those assembled were able to obtain admission. The address of Mr. Reynolds was an eloquent and touching tribute to the excellencies of character which distinguished the departed pastor. In commencing it, Mr. Reynolds remarked that twelve years before, in the exercises of the ordination of Mr. Fernald over that church, it was his part to grasp his hand, while he extended to him the fellowship of the churches; and now, when that hand was nerveless and cold in death, he had come to speak some parting words over the bier of his friend, and to testify to the fidelity with which he had discharged his duty as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. The address was replete with tenderness and pathos, and while it portrayed with wonderful accuracy the striking traits of the gentle and loving spirit of the departed, the deepest fountains of feeling were stirred, and heart beat to heart, responsive to the utterance of the speaker.

The appreciative and touching analysis of the late pastor's character, the simple, unstudied statement of his faithfulness to his holy calling, his remarkable unselfishness, his modesty and humility, his care of the "lambs of his flock," his earnestness and zeal in the cause of sound learning, and his untiring energy, in spite of physical weakness, to make the community wiser and better, showed how good are "words fitly spoken," and did equal credit to the judgment and heart of the speaker. He thought the deceased pastor possessed native gifts and graces, which, consecrated to the service of God, peculiarly fitted him for the Christian ministry; but that his earnest, true life, full of labor and of good fruits, made him worthy of the encomium of the "faithful servant," who, having received "five talents," had made them "five talents more." He said Mr. Fernald was naturally retiring, and inclined to shrink from the public gaze; and that, singularly free as he was from all ambitious aspirations, it was duty, and duty alone, that could have brought him into the foremost front of the battle of life.

The interment was according to the forms and ceremonies of the Masonic Institution, which were conducted in a feeling and very appropriate manner by Grand Master Drummond of Portland. At the close, he pronounced a touching eulogium upon the beloved brother whose remains had been committed to the tomb, "earth to earth, ashes to ashes."

There, in the peaceful shades of that pleasant cemetery, amid the quiet scenes of nature, so dear to him, the waving trees, the songs of birds, the balmy breath of flowers, he "sleeps well." For him we will not weep. To that better land upon which he earnestly strove to fix our thoughts and affections, he has but led the way. "His memory shall smell sweet, and blossom in the dust." But for the bereaved and afflicted ones, for the "lambs of the flock," who now have no one to gather them to the fold, for ourselves, wanderers, as "sheep without a shepherd," well may we "shed the bitter drops like rain." Alas! the devoted pastor, the faithful counsellor, the affectionate friend, has gone from us forever? "Help, Lord, the godly man ceaseth — the faithful fail from among the children of men !”

The following hymn, appropriate and beautiful, written by a lady of Rev. Mr. Fernald’s society, was read at the church by Mr. Reynolds, and sung to a plaintive air :

I.

Thou servant of the Lord,
Who lived to do His will,
Whose loftiest thought, whose highest aim,
Was loving, serving still.

II.

Entered into the rest
That “ His beloved ” see,
Thy labors o’er — thy victory won —
Henceforth ’tis “ well with thee !”

III.

But, oh ! for us who mourn
The faithful guide and friend,—
How can the o’erburdened heart but bid
Grief’s sacred tears descend !

IV.

For thine enfranchised soul,
From earth-born fetters free,
We weep not — but the loved and left
Are fain to yearn for thee.

DOINGS OF EUREKA LODGE, ST. GEORGE.

At the stated communication of Eureka Lodge, St. George, May 9th, 1861, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted :

Whereas, it has pleased the Great Disposer of events to remove from among us in a sudden and unexpected manner, our dearly beloved and most worthy brother, Rev. Oliver J. Fernald of Thomaston, who, by the purity of his heart and the uprightness of his life merited the esteem of all who knew him ; therefore,

Resolved, That this Lodge, grieving at the loss of an honored brother, one who was useful to the fraternity, from whom it has often received profitable instructions and kind admonitions, and one upon whom it has never called in vain, can but feel that his loss to it and to the fraternity in this region, at this time, is, indeed, irreparable.

Resolved, That we will ever hold in remembrance his purity of life, his gentleness of disposition, and his scholastic attainments, and that by them we will elevate our own characters and lives.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the family of our deceased brother in this sudden dispensation of Divine Providence, and commend them to the care of Him who watches over the widow and fatherless.

Resolved, That the furniture and jewels of this Lodge be put in mourning for the period of thirty days, as a tribute of respect for our departed brother.

Resolved, That the Master send a copy of these resolutions to the family of our late brother, and cause the same to be published in the Democrat and Free Press, and the Rockland Gazette.

W. M. RICHARDSON, Secretary.

He had been in the study of medicine, with his father, one year, and attended a full course of lectures at the medical school at Brunswick, but fearing that he would not like the practice of the profession, he abandoned the study, and took passage on board the bark Aurelia, at Boston, for New Orleans, where he had a prospect of employment. Ten days out, when they judged themselves up with Abico, or the "Hole in the Wall," he and the captain went aloft to look out for land, and by some misstep he fell from the maintop to the deck, and was instantly killed.

EXTRACT FROM A FOREIGN NEWSPAPER.

GIBRALTAR, April 17, 1857.

We are informed that the American ship Sea Queen, of Bath, Me., Nathaniel Groton, master, under arrest in our bay by decree of the Vice Admiralty Court, pending a suit instituted against her by Capt. Moore, of the British bark Defence, for damages done to said vessel, took advantage of the strong easterly wind prevailing last night, to suddenly leave the port, and as we understand took with her the officer placed by the Court of Admiralty on board. This most unadvised and unheard of proceeding on the part of the American master has been the subject of much astonishment here, and it will no doubt give rise to some strong measures on the part of the United States Government, there being, we believe, a treaty between Great Britain and the United States, fully providing for such an act as that which this captain has been guilty of.

We are likewise informed that he left the ship's papers in the hands of his counsel.

The following modest account of this adventure, corresponding with the above statement, and thereby corroborating the same, was taken from the captain's log-book :

April 17, 1857, A. M. : Calm, with pleasant weather ; fine breeze from the east. As I could not get my ship released, got under weigh at 9.30 A. M. under the guns of Gibraltar, and with an officer of the Vice Admiralty on board, proceeded to sea. At 11, got out of the bay safely. Made all sail. At midnight, passed Tarifa. Later, increasing breeze ; took in light sails at 4 o'clock ; at 5 o'clock double reefed ; at 10, moderated, let out topsails ; 11, set top-gallant-sails. So ends. Obs. lat., 36 0 2, North.

METHODIST SOCIETY IN WALDOBORO'.

SOME fifty years ago, when the religious denomination called Methodists first began to attract attention in this town, Godfrey Ludwig<sup>3</sup>, his son Aaron<sup>4</sup>, and his two brothers, Joseph<sup>3</sup> and James<sup>3</sup>, although they were born and educated in the Lutheran faith, joined this new order, and soon became leading men among them. Elder Irish, of Union, and Elder Baxter, of Bristol, who often ministered to them, saw the growing state of these young converts, and organized a class of about a dozen members, and appointed Godfrey Ludwig<sup>3</sup> their leader.

From that time they continued to augment in numbers and increase in property, and in a few years constructed a church edifice, of moderate pretensions, and have had regular preaching in it until within a very short time.

At present the society is not only divided, but sub-divided; a part of them worship at East-North Waldoboro', where they have a meeting-house, and a part hold their meetings at the village proper, which will in time, undoubtedly, swallow up both the other societies.

The few, with their descendants, who first organized at West-North Waldoboro', have not yet abandoned their old place of worship, and probably will not, for all experience shows that place of worship is second only to worship itself.

My object in introducing this chapter is merely to show that this branch of the Ludwig family were not only active in this enterprise, but were instrumental in organizing and keeping up this society until the present time, thereby promoting in an eminent degree the cause of virtue and religion in a community where vice and immorality once threatened their peace and prosperity.

The following is an abstract from a memorial, written in the German language, of Philip Christoph Vogler, an ancestor of that branch of the Fogler family, who have intermarried with the Ludwigs:

He was born at Gundelsheim, in the Palatinate, Germany, April 7, 1725. His parents were Lutherans, and he was thus educated. Besides attending to farming, in his youth he learned a tailor's trade. In 1742, he emigrated with his father to America, and located in New England, near Broad Bay. Soon after, the Indian war broke out, which forced him to become a soldier. He was stationed at Copperston, for nearly four years, when he was married to Catherine Sides, and by whom he had six sons and four daughters. One son and one daughter died before him. Of the remaining, two sons and one daughter reside in Salem, Mass., one son and two daughters in Friedland, one son in the neighborhood of Bethania, N. C., and one son remained in New England. In 1761, he and his family became deeply interested in a revival of religion, under the ministration and instruction of the Moravian Brethren, Herr and Socble of Bethlehem, Penn. His inability to read the word of God troubled him, and with his children he began to avail himself of the instruction of Mr. Socble, and soon attained the desired object.

In 1770, with his own and seven other families, he removed to South Carolina, landing at Fayesville. His wife, from sickness and fatigue, soon died. With the rest of the company, he reached Wachozia in November, where they established themselves, with some families previously settled, and soon organized a county congregation called Friedland.

In 1772, he was again married, to Barbara Fiscuss, by whom he had two children, who died young. In 1780, the mother died. After remaining a widower for some time, he again married, a third wife, Christiana Mary Schener, born in Bethania, to which place he removed, giving up his plantation to his son. He was industrious, honest and earnest; sometimes impetuous in temper. Conscious of his imperfections, he was penitent for any outbreak of passion, and studiously sought to make redress for any real or imaginary wrong he might have committed, mentally or morally.

In August, 1790, himself, wife and step-daughter were stricken down with violent fever. He expressed an impression that his life would terminate in the course of the week, and requested the commemoration of the Lord's Supper, which was complied with. Serene and happy, afterwards, he passed away, August 20, 1780, in Bethania, then Stokes, now Forsyth County, N. C.

LONGEVITY.

As many of this German colony lived to pass the term of three score and ten, the time allotted to man to complete his earthly pilgrimage, and as many of them have reached the great age of one hundred years, and some of them even more, we subjoin the following table, with the date of death, and the age of those of eighty years and upwards who have died since the commencement of 1800. We likewise give a list of those now living who have attained to "a good old age," and bid fair to live on and still live longer:

1824.	Catherine Elizabeth Ludwig, <sup>2</sup>	-	-	89

As far into the misty past as we are obliged to search for the name of Ludwig, we must go still farther and search among the labyrinths of ages to find the origin of the German race. If we were to rely upon the absurdity of Tacitus, we might infer that they were indigenous. The light of reason and revelation forbids anything so preposterous. Climate and condition have had their influence upon the herds of barbarians invading the Hercynian forests, and contending with a power as formidable as the Roman Empire.

Some of the most civilized nations of modern Europe originated from the inhabitants in the black forests of Germany. As these immense woods have disappeared, in the lapse of ten centuries, from the time of Charlemagne, and the earth opened to the rays of the sun and the cold, invigorating winds of the north, the inhabitants have gained a loftier stature, and a constitutional firmness, yet undeveloped in a more temperate climate. Gibbon says, "among the nations who have adopted the Mosaic History of the world, the Ark of Noah has been of the same use, as was formerly the seige of Troy to the Greeks and Romans."

Upon a small nucleus of truth may be reared a large superstructure of fabulous import in any period of the world, but in the early and middle ages this danger was fearfully augmented. If other nations claim their origin and language from the confounded and dispersed people who were engaged in building the Tower of Babel, we cannot see why the German race may not assume the same prerogative.

Whatever may have been the origin of the German race, they have furnished the world with great men in every department of knowledge. Ecclesiastical history would be incomplete without a Martin Luther, a Melancthon, or a Neander. In the natural sciences, a Humbolt and a Liebig are our largest contributors. In diplomacy and international law, the Metternichs are rarely equalled. In poetry, Schiller and Goethe. In music, Beethoven and Strauss. In monetary affairs, the Rothschilds rule the European world.

Notwithstanding all we have said of Germany and the German people, it is a strange country. With all its abundance of literature, and the prevalence of education, with, also, freedom of religious opinion, it is far from being a free country. They retain many of the elements of the old feudal system in all their social, civil and political relations. The free city, in their confederation, is nothing more than a league town, under another name; and so with their compact, for all practical purposes, it is but a rope of sand, as the late disturbances in Holstein and Schleswig will testify. The people are despotically ruled by great or petty Princes, and have only here and there a mock form of representative government. The lower classes are entirely destitute of the means of improving their condition. Though a country from which more of the elements of freedom sprung than any other, it is now unquestionably among the least free of all the nations of Christendom.

It would be, comparatively, an easy task to fill out many pages with the lights and shades of the retrospective years and scenes just glanced at in the preceding record. Many of them now form a prominent part of our public history, and if once entered upon, it would be a difficult matter to find a satisfactory place for conclusion. The author has only sought to rescue a few facts connected with his family chronological data, from the oblivion which the turmoil of the present agitated condition of our government seems to impose, and to enkindle a love and reverence in the youth of the present generation, for something more permanent than traditionary lore.

The love of home and home influences are fast fading away in the activities of the times. So much of change stimulates the public mind, the scenes of early life become obliterated, and the tender and delicate tissues of household relations are less impressive than in former years.

As, toil-worn with travel and adventure, we return in after years to revisit our birth-place, the rule of advance in the anticipated growth of the trees, seems to have changed to an order for receding in size and grandeur; the mountain whose summit reached the clouds, and behind which, in our childish imagination, the golden sun went down like a monarch, and the magnitude of the river forming the boundary line of the homestead, diminish in rapid ratio.

We may not linger here.

If this unpretending volume affords the reader as much quiet satisfaction in its perusal as it has its author in retracing his ancestry and recalling the events connected with the family history in years long gone by, his patience and labor will not have been expended in vain; if otherwise, may his effort lie hidden in the folded mantle of silence.

THOMASTON, June, 1866.
