REPORT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE
PENNSYLVANIA-GERMAN SOCIETY
AT ITS TWENTIETH ANNUAL MEETING

HELD AT YORK, PA.

ON THURSDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1910

---

THE Executive Committee of the Society held its regular quarterly meeting in the parlor of the Colonial Hotel, York, Pa., at seven o'clock, on Thursday evening, October 13, 1910, for the transaction of business.

MORNING SESSION.

The twentieth annual meeting of the Pennsylvania-German Society was held in the Parish House of Christ Lutheran Church, York, Pa., Friday, October 14, 1910. The Local Committee, of which Robert C. Bair, Esq., one of the Vice-Presidents of the Society, was the Chairman, had made such excellent arrangements that the large gathering of members and their friends at once felt thoroughly at home.

The meeting was called to order at 10.30 a.m., by the President of the Society, John E. Roller, Esq., of Harrisonburg, Virginia, after which the Divine Blessing was asked by the Reverend G. W. Enders, D.D., pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, York, Pa.

Dr. E. T. Jeffers then extended a most cordial welcome to the members of the Society on behalf of the city of York and its people. On account of the lateness of the hour the response of Dr. Theodore E. Schmauk on the subject "The Twentieth Anniversary of our Society" was postponed until the dinner in the evening.

ADDRESS OF JOHN E. ROLLER, ESQ., OF HARRISONBURG, VIRGINIA, AS PRESIDENT OF THE PENNSYLVANIA-GERMAN SOCIETY.

In the very latest issue of the North Carolina Booklet, a little magazine published by the North Carolina Society of the Daughters of the Revolution, a reference is made to the German settlement in Orange County, of that State, which may be read as illustrative of the character of the German settlement throughout the South.

"The German Settlement, or Dutch, as it was universally called by others of the County, was not large and it was segregated by its language and by the habits of the people themselves. They took little or no interest in public affairs, and had their own churches and their own preachers, who preached to them in the German language."

These settlers, says the historian, came from Lancaster, Chester, York, and Bucks and Berks counties, Pennsylvania, and while the migration began as early as 1745 it was at its flood tide from 1750 to 1775. Some of these settlers were careful enough to bring with them certificates of character, from their friends and neighbors, and one of these certificates, which is still preserved by a family in the South as a precious heirloom, is from "their friends and neighbors, inhabitants of the townships of Heidelberg and places adjacent, in the county of Berks, in the Province of Pennsylvania," to the effect that "they are of a sober, honest, peaceable, and good behavior, and are about to depart, in the good esteem of the neighborhood."

It is stated, also, that the chief cause of this migration to the South was the French and Indian War from 1750 to about 1755, the date of Braddock's defeat, which—on account of the activity of the Northern and Western Indians—had vastly increased the migration from Pennsylvania and from the Valley of Virginia.

It is said, also, that there was a severe winter in 1750-51, and that a killing frost which had come unexpectedly, at an early date—it may be possible that some of you antiquarians remember it—had also helped to induce or had determined some of these immigrants to go southward.

The fact that this quiet settlement, "segregated" as the writer says it was, by reason of its godliness, and faithful observance of the duties, which they owed to their church and their God, exerted a profound influence upon its neighbors and associates is found in the further statement that "These newcomers found the inhabitants about their colony grossly ignorant of the essentials of the Christian religion. They knew something of the form of godliness but nothing of its power: they thought that religion consisted only in the practice of its outward forms." So that we find that even the early Baptists of that region adopted a rite of "christening," or "devoting" their children as they called it, which was thus performed: "As soon as circumstances would permit, after the birth of the child, the mother carried it to the meeting, when the minister, either took it in his arms, or laid his hands on it, thanked God for His mercy, and invoked a blessing on the child, and at the same time, it received its name. This rite, which by many was satirically called a 'dry christening,' prevailed not only in the Sandy Creek Association, but in other parts of the South."

But—returning to our subject—the fact remains, also, that until the treaty of Fort Stanwix, and that of Grenville, coming after the power of the Northern and Western Indians had been broken, at the battle of Fallen Timbers, by the force under "Mad" Anthony Wayne, and had made the country beyond the Appalachian Mountains safe for settlement, the tide of immigration of the German element, as well as of the Scotch Irish, was Southward, even to a point as distant as Pensacola, on the Gulf.

It is true that many Germans had preceded these settlers in Virginia and the other States southward. There were Germans at Jamestown in 1607, and while that gascon and braggart, Captain John Smith denounces them as "the damned Dutch," and proceeded to kill them all off, in his "True Relation" as he called it, yet the fact remains that one of that element had sufficient influence with the Virginia company of London to secure Smith's recall never to return to Virginia, and that the very men whom he says "perished miserably" because of their alleged affront to his dignity, were still alive and well, when the new Council came in. That these men were no mere artisans and laborers without education, save enough to "make potash," and "grow tobacco," as they were known to be skilled to do, is proven by the fact that one of them was learned enough to write a letter in Latin describing the affairs of the Colony to John Pory, the Secretary of the Company, and afterwards, speaker of the First House of Burgesses of Virginia—the first popular representative assembly that ever sat in America.

But the language which Smith applied to the Germans of the Jamestown Colony is quite mild when compared with the language which the English Secretary applied to the French glass makers of the Colony of —— whom he said, "a more damned crew, hell has never vomited."

A noted colony of Germans had preceded the settlers from Pennsylvania, even in North Carolina. The story of the colony of de Graffenried and Michel, at Newberne, between the Trent and the Neuse, on the coast of Carolina, is one of deep interest. The destruction of the colony by the Tuscaroras, and the capture and carrying away of the two great leaders of the colony, is one of the romantic stories of American history. How de Graffenried made his escape from the Indians by claiming that he was the "King of the Palatines," and by securing the interference of Governor Spotswood of Virginia, who announced to the Indians that he would slay men, women and children, without mercy and without regard to number, if harm should come to their captives, is a truthful romance of great interest.

The only point at which it touches the immigration of the Germans from Pennsylvania southward is in fact that Spotswood—having found that some of the settlers at Newberne were soldiers who had fought under his command in Europe—had declared himself to be their staunch friend and ally, and proceeded very generously to invite them to Virginia. But he says, also, that "upon their arriving here, just at a time when the Tuscarora Indians had departed from the treaty they had made, I did both in compassion for those poor strangers, and in regard to the safety of the country, place them together upon a piece of land several miles outside of all of the other inhabitants," where he built them a fort and expected them to serve as a protection to the rest of the colony.

It is not within the scope of my address here to-day to do more than to refer to the knightly John Lederer, the first white man who ever looked upon the beautiful valley of the Shenandoah, west of the Great Mountains. The credit of his advance cannot be taken from him, nor from the people of his blood, by the splendor and glory of the march of Spotswood and his knightly cavalcade of "the Knights of the Golden Horse Shoe" to the same region, a half a century later.

It is a painful thing to tell that this "modest and ingenious hero" and "pretty scholar," instead of receiving applause and a generous welcome upon his return, was met with affronts and reproaches, and it is even said that "the malice of the people improved to such a general animosity that he was not safe in Virginia from the outrage of the people, drawn into the persuasion that the public levy of that year went all to the expense of his vagaries." Forced by "this storm" he left the state never to return.

It would be an interesting thing indeed, if it could be positively determined and known, as to who were the first, of that great and shining host, to begin this movement from Pennsylvania into Virginia, and through the Carolinas, following the great and beautiful valleys of the mountainous region, to the southward.

Was it Maria Elizabeth Gerber, to whom Kelpius, in 1704, addressed a twenty-two page letter, in which he gives his adherent, or follower, whose German name will be recognized at once, his views as to the Quakers and their doctrines? The questions as to who she was, and where she lived, are still unsolved, and are of deep historic interest. She has been pursued in all the public records of America, and in those of Europe, without success.

Was it Henry Funk and his associates of the Mennonite faith among whose children was a son named for John Kelpius, the great mystic?

Was it Adam Miller, whose naturalization papers seem to have indicated that he was in the Valley of the Shenandoah as far back as 1726?

Was it Zerechius Fleishman and George Utz, who filed a petition before the General Council of Virginia on the 3d of April, 1724, for permission to take up a large body of lands, in the County of Spottsylvania, on behalf of themselves and fourteen other Germans, then residing in that country?

Was it Jacob Vanmeter, who on the 17th of June, 1730, asked the General Council for authority to take up lands, for himself and eleven children, reciting in his petition that his relations and friends living in New York were desirous of moving to Virginia, and asking that 10,000 acres of land lying in the fork of the Shenandoah river between that and the river Cohongarta might be set apart to them?

Was it Isaac Vanmeter, of New Jersey, who filed his petition on the 17th of June, 1730, in which he set forth that he and divers other German families were desirous to settle themselves on the western side of the great mountain, in the fork of the Shenandoah River?

Was it John Casper Stoever, whose marriage and baptismal record extends from 1730 to 1779, and whose first labors in the ministry were in the service of the Lutheran Congregation at the far-famed old Hebron Church, in the county of Madison, in the State of Virginia and who was sent back to Europe to solicit funds for church purposes and while there published a pamphlet setting forth the needs of the German Lutherans of Virginia, and who was destined never to return again, having died on board ship and been buried at sea, upon his homeward voyage.

It is an interesting thing to know that his original book of subscriptions obtained in Europe is still preserved, and contains many a noted and historical name.

Was it John Casper Stoever, the second, who was refused ordination at first by Daniel Falkner, although there was at that day, great need for pastors for the scattered Congregations in America? His Baptismal Register contains many of the noted names of Virginia. Among the children baptized by him are such names as those of Sikles, Stephan, Christman, Bauman, Fromann, Colvert, Schnepf, Weisman, Bugher, Dieter, Dellinger, Maag, Crisp, Ehrhart, all of the Opeckon; Bird, Moore, Guill, Dawbin, Hodge, White, Leenwill, Hoolman, Heydt, Cundtz, Dyart, Gebert, Ann, Strubel, of the Shenandoah; Heyl and Seltzer of Massanutton; and Hoevner of South Branch.

Among the interesting things to be found in the records of Old Virginia is a grant of a body of ten thousand acres of lands to the "Trappists," and it cannot be doubted that this could only have meant the Virginia followers of the two Stoevers and Anthony Henkel, the pastors from the "Trappe," the first of whom had served the Virginia people, as we have already seen, in spiritual things, and had made a journey to Europe in their behalf.

Each and every suggestion made in this address could be the theme of a volume, full of deep interest. Later still came the colonies from the cloister of the Seventh-Day Baptists, or Sabbatarians at Ephrata. There were no less than three colonies from this noted place that went to the South. One at Strasburg, in the County of the Shenandoah, on the North Shenandoah, or Cape Leannocks River, established a colony which has left many traditions of their presence behind them. They owned a lot in the town and lands adjacent to it, and they have left behind them names and memories, which have not yet been forgotten.

Yet another, at the "Dunkard Bottom" on the New River, in the southwestern part of the State, a stream which rises east of the Appalachian Mountains and flows westward into the waters of the Ohio. Here they made a settlement, the history of which is still involved in obscurity, save that your speaker has in his possession the materials for a more complete history of it than has ever yet been given to the public. Still another, or third colony was settled in the County of Shenandoah, and from it are descended many people in the South, more or less prominent, who know nothing to-day of the characteristics and origin of the people from whom they spring.

The great body of the immigrants were adherents of the Lutheran and Reformed Churches, and under the lead of Joist Hite and those who came with him, they began to take up lands and settle the country in a lawful and orderly way. Spying out the beautiful and fertile land, in every part of all that great country, with rare good judgment, they selected the best, and these have been sent down from sire to son, in almost unbroken line from that date to the present.

From this great body of the people have sprung some of the most distinguished men of "The Sunny South," in every department of life.

As ministers of the holy religion of our Lord and Savior, many of them have led noted and useful lives. Without assuming anything in their modest and useful lives, they have nevertheless achieved eternal fame. It would take no small volume of the publications of this Society to give even a brief suggestion of the names and achievements of the men of the German element, who have preached the gospel, taught theology: handed down the true apostolic succession from themselves to their successors, and have made a deep impression upon the mental activities, as well as the every-day life, of the people of America than that of any other body of men, or any other man, or set of men, Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall, and all the other politicians, to the contrary, notwithstanding.

In the legal profession, many of them sought, and found, grand and growing success, and everlasting fame, and honor besides. In this department, too, the best efforts of this Society could not hope to accomplish all that should be desired within a half century of continuous work. It is the purpose of this address to call attention to the field and to cut the first blaze in the first tree along the path.

Of the men of our race, who distinguished themselves in the South, in the legal profession, it will not be disputed that William Wirt was facile princeps. Born of humble parentage, and compelled to endure many hardships in early life, he attained, nevertheless, the highest honors of the profession. As Attorney General of the United States he was never excelled by any of the men who have filled that great office. The memory of his successes at the bar are still treasured among the best practitioners of the profession, and while his success as a politician was subsequently dimmed by his disastrous candidacy for the presidency, yet his fame has grown, until to-day he is regarded by the men of our race and blood, as one of its greatest ornaments. He was never popular or acceptable to the German element in America and they rarely named their children for them, as they were wont to do with men whom they loved and admired. They thought that in the "Old Bachelor," a book supposed to have been written by him and of which several editions were published by him in Maryland and Virginia, he had spoken slightly of the German people. It has since become known that Wirt did not write the number of the Old Bachelor of which complaint was made, although he has been held responsible for it. It was written by a kinsman of his wife. But Wirt did write the life of Patrick Henry and he drew so glowing a picture of his subject that the fame of Henry has become embalmed in the hearts and affections of the American people, and continues to grow brighter and brighter, and will so continue as long as free institutions shall exist in a republican America. So unstinted were the encomiums which Wirt heaped upon Patrick Henry that the correctness of his statements became the subject of animated controversy between the distinguished men of the land. It is the good fortune of your speaker to have in his possession the correspondence between Robert Walsh, of Philadelphia, chargé d'affaires under Jefferson at Paris, upon the one side, assailing Wirt's description, and Francis W. Gilmer, the brother-in-law of Wirt, a distinguished young lawyer and literateur, defending the same upon the other, in which Gilmer successfully maintains upon authority, and upon proofs, his side of the controversy. This praise of Henry is confirmed anew by that magnificent book, The Life of Patrick Henry, by his grandson, William Wirt Henry, a classic of American literature.

But with all his right to distinction and fame, Wirt was a modest and unassuming man. If time were afforded, I would like to quote from a letter of his, addressed to his wife, which has never before been published, in which he writes to her upon the eve of his engaging in an argument in a most important case, in which some of the grants of the land were his adversaries, and have you tell us what you think of his modesty and his greatness.

He was a Christian too, as well as a modest man. Hear what he says about his public profession of the Christian religion, also to be found in a letter never before published.

“God forbid,” writes Mr. Wirt to a friend, “that the public profession that I have made should redound to the dishonor of His cause. It was the fear of this, and not the fear of man, that has so long held me back. I am grieved that my having gone to the Lord’s Table has got into the papers. Of what consequence is it to the cause of Christ that such a poor reptile as myself should have acknowledged Him before other worms of the dust like myself. I feel humble and startled at such an annunciation. It will turn the eyes of the hypocritical and malignant world upon me, and I fear it will tend more to tarnish than to advance His cause. I hope for more fervor in prayer, for more of the Spirit of God, shed abroad in my heart, for more of His presence throughout the day, for a firmer anchorage in Christ to keep this heart of mine and its affections from tossing to and fro on the waves of this world, and things of time and sense, for a brighter and stronger faith, and some assurance of a Savior's acceptance and love. I feel as if He could not love me; as if I were utterly unworthy of His love; and as if I had not one lovable point or quality about me: but that on the contrary, he must regard me still as an alien from His kingdom, and a stranger to His love. But with the blessing of God, I will persevere in seeking Him, relying on His promise that if I come to Him, He will in no wise cast me off."

There are unpublished legal documents, original letters, and other manuscript to make a grand volume for the publication of this society, and a new life of Wirt is a necessity.

Rivaling Wirt's fame is that of the Sheffeyes, the first of whom, and perhaps the most distinguished, was Daniel Sheffey, a member of Congress for many years, and who rose from the shoemaker's bench to a position of distinguished honor and usefulness. "The shoemaker had better have stuck to his last," said his satirical critic, John Randolph, of Roanoke. "If my adversary had started on the bench he would never have gotten away from it," was his quick and prompt reply. From such an origin came his distinguished grandson, Hugh W. Sheffey, for more than half a century one of the leaders of the Virginia Bar and the best known and most honored layman of the Episcopal Diocese of Virginia. The Hon. James P. Sheffey was another distinguished member of this family.

But in deed, and in truth, the men who have brought honor to our race throughout the South besides these just named are legion. It seems invidious to name any, where so much honor has been conferred by so many.

In the Carolinas, and the far South, the Barringers, the Forneys, the Holtzcaws, the Hokes, and many others, have brought us never-dying fame.

The story of these must be written up and published in detail, and the work of this Society is to enlist the men who with loving hearts and minds will do the work.

It has been the dream of your speaker that the work of this Society should embrace also one or more pretentious volumes which would do some measure of justice to the men of our race and blood who served their country with distinction, and usefulness, in the wars of America. First, in the Colonial wars, in battles with the aborigines and their French allies; later on, in the war of the Revolution; and in that of 1812 as well; as in the war with Mexico; to be followed by a superb volume giving the history of the deeds of the men who participated in the war between the States, on the Federal side, and then, if he could but link his name with a truthful account of the heroic deeds of the men of Pennsylvania-German descent who served in the armies of the South, and the motives that prompted them to take the part which they did, he would feel that his share of the honors of earth was full.

Our Southern soldiers were no degenerate sons of the men of 1776, who only fought, like ourselves, a war of Rebellion, the difference being that theirs was a successful one, while ours was not. Our people thought that they were resisting infringements that were being made upon the guarantees of constitutional liberty, which the sacrifices of their fathers had helped to secure. Our armies, just as theirs, thought that they were serving in the defense of their country.

There were no tories on the "Dutch side" in old Virginia and they were equally scarce, I am told, in the Carolinas, as there were none in Pennsylvania. So that when the alarm of the War of the Revolution sounded, and the signal fires were lighted on every hill, they came forth a host of shining warriors ready and eager to march to the defence of the cause to which they had given their allegiance. A Muhlenberg led the German regiment in Virginia, and he and Weedon were the contribution of Virginia, from her Colonial German element, to the general officers of the Revolutionary War. Behind these were the field officers, and those of the line, distinguished in every grade, and the privates were sons of sturdy German ancestry, that had but a few years before settled in the Sunny South Land.

The need is that some Herodotus, with heart glowing with love for the memory of these forefathers of ours, might be found, to transcribe the glory of their deeds for the inspiration of mankind.

Nor have the men of the South lost their right to claim a share in these honors because of the part which many of them bore, in the late War between the States, and surely no true lover of his country either North or South would withhold it from them. As has been written by one of your poets:

Hail to the sons of German sires,
Who lit the Southland's bivouac fires,
And followed oft to victory
The banner of the matchless Lee.

They followed through the smoke of war
The standards of the cross and star,
And not an envious heart can trace,
A stain upon that hero race.

The years to come will crown them all
Though fated was their cause to fall.
They faltered not, and won renown
Wounded and dying for the hero's crown.

As the question is stated by a distinguished statesman and writer, a scion of a distinguished and noted family, whose ancestors have filled the Presidential chair twice, and who has as much right to speak as any other, and who says: "As I read the record and understand the facts in the case, of direct and insoluble issue, between the sovereign State and sovereign Nation, between 1788 and 1861, every man was not only free to decide, but had to decide for himself, and whichever way he decided he was right. The Constitution gave him two masters. Both he could not serve, and the average man decided which to serve in the light of sentiment, tradition, and environment."

From the ashes of the bivouac—from the memorials of the sufferings of men for their fellow men—a nation learns the virtues of peace. From the land of memories a people can catch grander visions for future inspiration. To-day they cannot only dream, but see, and know, a united country—though the sections may have been sundered far, no line of cleavage now appears. The old soldiers of this land of ours, though once divided by the color of their uniforms, and as some even thought in the principles for which they were contending, have forgotten their differences, in the rightful claim of the men upon both sides that each fought as he believed, at the call of his country.

It is a fact well known to intelligent men that the vast and overwhelming majority of men who fought for the Southern cause did not fight for slavery, and never thought of themselves as fighting for the preservation of slavery, for they neither owned slaves, nor cared to own them, or expected ever to own them. Neither did they fight for the right of secession, or for the Southern interpretation of the Constitution. Virginia was for the Union by an overwheming majority, and had so voted, and she had persisted in her refusal to join the seceding States, steadily and faithfully, notwithstanding the excitement of the day, and the tremendous influences and forces that were being brought to bear to bring her into the conflict, alongside with her sister States of the South; and she so continued, until there came the call of Abraham Lincoln for troops for the purpose of making war. Then it was that the most extreme antisecessionists and anti-war men in the Virginia Convention became the most enthusiastic men in the Commonwealth in the advocacy of war, and in their service in it.

The cavaliers of Stuart and of Lee, of Hampton and of Barringer, need not be ashamed to sit at the board with the troopers of Kilpatrick and Milroy when bumpers are filled to the men who fought with Marion, or followed the sword of "Light Horse" Harry Lee. The men who marched with Lee and Jackson, or followed the standard of a Pender, a Ramseur, a Forney, a Phifer, or Hoke, need not refuse to claim a share in the glories of their ancestors, who fought at Camden, at Kings Mountain; at Yorktown, in the South, or crossed the Delaware with Washington, at Trenton, or fell at Long Island, or at Brandywine, in the North.

Do you know that if you were to efface from the history of the achievements of American arms the record of the deeds of the men of German blood, for whose descendants I speak to-day, there would be noted a most wonderful and perhaps irretrievable loss? That prince of noblemen, the courteous and courageous Fitz Hugh Lee, in his life of one of our beloved Southern leaders, is proud to acknowledge the fact that the immortal Robert E. Lee was himself in part from German ancestry. Would you spare the fame of Lee from the records of our race? Would you spare the fame of the "Stonewall" brigade or of Stuart's cavalry or of the thousand of brave men of German descent who served in the Army of Northern Virginia, or with the other Armies of the South, from the same records? Would you spare the fame of Kemper and Armistead, or of Pender, or of Ramseur, from the fatal heights of Gettysburg, and the other fields of the great war? Would you spare the glorious fame of that immortal young hero, John Pelham, major of artillery, in the Army of Northern Virginia, of whom it was said by Lee that it was "glorious to see such courage in one so young"? Would you efface the memory of the deeds of that Prince Rupert of the Old North State, the fearless and knightly commander of its first brigade of cavalry—Rufus Barringer, one of the heroes of the historic fight on the plains of Brandy, from the records of American achievement and valor? Would you spare the story of the lives of Zolicoffer, of Deshler and Strahl, of Eshleman and Shank, and, indeed, of all the thousands of heroes of German descent, who served out fair Sunny South Land with the highest devotion, and poured out their hearts' blood for her cause? I know that your answer will be "Let us have a volume in the publication of this Society in honor of each and every man who deserves it at our hands."

I will quote again, as I have often done before, the well-known lines,

"And when recording history displays,
Feats of renown though wrought in other days,
Tells of a few stout hearts that bled and died,
Where duty placed them at their country's side,
Who is not moved with what he reads,
Who takes not fire at their heroic deeds,
Is base in kind and born to be a slave."

The spirit of this Society has ever been one of tolerance; within its membership are enrolled every possible shade of political and religious belief. There has never been a word of dissension or strife among us on any possible subject. We have realized the spirit of one of the sires of the forgotten Huguenots, one of those who have changed language and have given up allegiance to country and home twice in as many centuries. He, like many, had learned to look out beyond the hills into the beautiful blue sky, and see the visions which the Lord God Almighty himself vouchsafes to all who are humble and lowly of heart, even when sick, in body or mind.

This is the advice he gave to his descendants and I pass it to you. "'Tis a world of shadows, and yet in the gloom, there shine faces—faces of men and women. The shadows will flee away but the men and women will pass into undying memories. Such memories, whether they hallow fair Valima or perfume the fields of Poitou, are the breath of the life of the soul."

"May you be human even if the crowd of shadows leave you lonely. May honor and sincerity seem to you better than all the bribes of the King of Shadows, may you love what is brave and serve what is true, so shall you be not unworthy of these forefathers of yours."

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY.

It affords the Secretary a great deal of pleasure to be able to report that during the past year the Pennsylvania-German Society has enjoyed its usual degree of prosperity.

The Executive Committee, in whose hands are the affairs of the Society when not in annual session, as usual held four meetings in the months of January, April, June and October. In order to facilitate the work and also distribute the labors of the Executive Committee in directing the affairs of the Society it was resolved to divide the work which had hitherto devolved largely upon the Secretary among several committees; and accordingly there were appointed committees on Dues and Delivery of Volumes, on Editorial Work, on Proof and Indexing, on Printing and Illustrating, and on New Members.

During the year the Executive Committee also made a special effort, by sending out personal letters, to have as many of the former members as possible reinstated, with the gratifying result that about thirty delinquents renewed their membership that had been allowed to lapse. The Executive Committee likewise has appointed a committee to prepare a complete bibliography of Pennsylvania-German literature.

In order that the wisdom and the experience of the older members of the Executive Committee may be retained but that there may still be room for the infusion of the young and aggressive element that is becoming prominent in the life of every community in which the Pennsylvania-Germans are represented and from whom must come our future membership, the Executive Committee recommends to this Society in annual session assembled that its Constitution be so amended that the Executive Committee be increased to fifteen members instead of ten as it is at present constituted.

As far as has come to the knowledge of the Secretary, during the past year the Society has lost by death Dr. Joseph Henry Dubbs, of Franklin and Marshall College, Oliver S. Henninger, editor of the Allentown Item, Hon. Jeremiah A. Stober, of Schoeneck, Pa., Dr. Charles H.

Ott, of Sayre, Pa., and Mr. John M. Hartman, of Mt. Airy, Philadelphia.

The number of members at present in good standing is 490.

During the past year Volume XVIII. of the PROCEEDINGS of the Society has come from the press and been distributed to the members entitled to the same, and Volume XIX. is almost ready for the printer. If by some oversight any members failed to receive their copies of Volume XVIII., they will confer a favor upon the officers by promptly notifying the Secretary or the Treasurer to this effect.

Thus in brief, my fellow-members, I have tried to give you an idea of the activities of the Society as conducted by the Executive Committee. Let me assure you that in all that was done the welfare and the progress of the Society were the first thought and the sole purpose in the minds of those to whom you have entrusted the management of the affairs of the Society.

To-day we are celebrating the twentieth anniversary of the founding of this Society. Of the record of these twenty years we may well feel proud. What our future will be is largely in our own hands. With the active interest and the united support of all our members, it is not too much to expect that the glories of the future will eclipse the achievements of the past.

GEORGE T. ETTINGER,
Secretary.

On motion of Dr. Schmauk, properly seconded, it was proposed that, in accordance with the resolution of the Executive Committee, we amend the Constitution of our Society so that Article IV., Section 1, be changed to read in the latter part "and an Executive Committee of sixteen members," including the Secretary as an ex-officio member; and Article IV., Section 4, be changed so as to read "The Executive Committee elected at the first election shall divide itself into five classes. The first class of three members shall hold office for five years; the second class of three for four years; the third class of three for three years; the fourth class of three for two years; and the fifth class of three for one year. At each annual meeting thereafter successors shall be chosen to the class whose term shall then expire."

In accordance with the rules of the Society the proposed amendments were received to lie over for final adoption one year hence.

On motion of Dr. Nead, duly seconded, it was resolved that the President appoint a committee to prepare a bibliography of Pennsylvania-German literature as recommended by the Executive Committee in the Secretary's report.

The Committee as later appointed by the President consists of Dr. S. P. Heilman, Chairman, Rev. A. Stapleton, D.D., Mr. Daniel Miller, Prof. L. Oscar Kuhns, Prof. Harry A. Reichard, Rev. John B. Stoudt, and Mr. Edwin C. Jellette, with authority to call to their assistance any persons they may see fit and to give them credit for such assistance in the printed work.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: President, Rev. Henry E. Jacobs, D.D., LL.D., Philadelphia, Pa.; Vice-Presidents, Robert C. Bair, Esq., York, Pa., B. F. Fackenthal, Esq., Riegelsville, Pa.; Treasurer, Julius F. Sachse, Litt.D., Philadelphia, Pa.; Executive Committee, Hon. M. C. Eby, Harrisburg, Pa., Dr. D. W. Nead, Buffalo, N. Y.

PAPERS.

After the general discussion pertaining to the affairs of the Society, Prof. Albert G. Rau, Ph.D., Dean of the Moravian College, Bethlehem, Pa., read an exceedingly interesting paper on "The Trades among the Pennsylvania-Germans," which called forth an animated discussion on the part of many members.

A member whose name escaped the stenographer said:

"There is one thing I would like to mention, and that is the tools that our fore-fathers brought with them. I have found that a great many tools were brought across the seas. I recall an anvil with the date of 1698. The immigrant who brought it with him I find arrived in 1731. His son set up a smithy and used that anvil. His grandson followed and after that his great-grandson used that same anvil, and the particular thing they manufactured were augers. They excelled in that. All the country over that family were known as expert auger makers, and that anvil remained in the family until 1854, when the great-grandson died, and the executor unfortunately allowed the anvil to be sold as junk and it was smelted into metal. That is a wonderful thing and it would be a great thing to have that anvil today, used for four generations.

"There is another thing I expected our good friend to speak about, and that is the manufacturing of spinning implements. The turning lathes were brought to this country and some of the looms were brought across. While it is true that some of these tradespeople followed the profession of farming so that they could get their bread and butter, these arts went from one family to another and in this way the larger manufacturers grew.

"Some of the finest clocks I have ever seen in this country were made during the Revolutionary War, some of them wonderful works of art, showing the phases of the moon. I know one that was made in 1780. It is a marvel. It is beautiful. It was made in the city of Reading. It would be very interesting indeed for us to gather some of those relics.

"I have a colonial knife made by a professional knife maker, and with a steel stencil he cut his name on the blade. It was made right here in America. The spoon makers also made spoons, knives and forks and they nearly all brought them from Europe."

DR. SCHMAUK said:

"Mr. President, I desire to express our great appreciation of the paper of Professor Rau, particularly at the breadth of the foundation which he has laid at the bottom of his study. I also desire to call attention to the fact that the greatest art that ever flourished on this American continent, from my point of view, emanated from the Pennsylvania-Germans, namely, the art of organ building, in which there was nothing that began to equal them in all this country."

MR. SENER:

"I am sure that some of the clocks made by the Pennsylvania-Germans are pieces of art. There are many people in Lancaster who have them, and I have one of my own, No. 11, made about 1772, a beautiful piece of work, solid mahogany.

"Peter Getz, that old Pennsylvania-German, designed coins and he also suggested the design for the seal of the United States."

MR. CROLL:

"It affords me much pleasure to be with you. I have tried for fifteen years to be at one of your meetings and I have come from Buffalo, New York, in order to be here. My friend to the right referred to the clocks. I have in my family a clock that was bought in Berks County at public sale, so just where the clock came from I don't know. My clock is No. 71. I would like to suggest that as long as we have this beautiful organ here, that we have a piece played on it some time during the day."

DR. S. P. HEILMAN:

"Mr. Rau asked for suggestions. Another thing which touched the Pennsylvania-German in many points was the cider mill. Right here in this little book of mine is a picture of that cider mill, where they made cider and apple jack and had those old-time apple butter parties."

MR. ROLLER:

"I have seen Pennsylvania-German clocks in the Shenandoah Valley made in 1780."

The meeting was adjourned at 12.15 p.m.

LUNCHEON.

Upon adjournment the members of the Society gathered in the Assembly Room of the Parish House of Christ Church, where a dainty luncheon was served free to the members and a delightful hour was spent in social intercourse. Many members also availed themselves of the intermission to visit the various points of interest in the historic city of York.

AFTERNOON.

The afternoon session of the meeting was called to order by the President at 2.15 o'clock.

After a selection on the organ by the organist of Christ Lutheran Church, Rev. John Baer Stoudt, of Emaus, Pa., read a very interesting paper on "Some Pennsylvania-German Rhymes and Riddles," which was followed by a lively general discussion, in which, however, nothing of additional value worthy of permanent preservation in these minutes was called forth.

Prof. Edwin M. Fogel, Ph.D., of the University of Pennsylvania, then followed with a very suggestive paper on "Some Pennsylvania-German Superstitions." Many members participated in the discussion of this paper.

DR. SCHMAUK said:

"It is my judgment that the Pennsylvania-German is less superstitious than any other of the races that have settled America from the point of view of being affected by his superstitions. What he has he has accepted. He is in the situation of being willing to accept facts. He is put into a certain place, and no matter how narrow that place is he will face the situation and he will face it patiently and boldly. These superstitions have come down from before them, and I do not believe that you will find a single race that has taken an heritage of this kind in such a matter-of-fact way. He will repeat them, he will tell his children, he will probably as far as his judgment goes conform his conduct with them, but he will not lose his nerve, and that is the difference between him and the more mercurial races by which we are surrounded."

DR. STAPLETON:

“In using the word superstition in connection with religion, I have no doubt that it occurs to us how closely the terms have been identified in the ages past, and it is easy to see how closely the two ideas were allied. I know that within our own family, over near the foot of the Blue Mountains in old Dutch Berks some fifty-one years ago, we had customs that we would never think of now, but in those days they were a part of our life. On Green Thursday we would just as reverently and sacredly gather the eggs that were laid that day for Easter morning breakfast, and if there were not enough eggs to go around father would divide the portion so that each would have a taste of the eggs. This was a part of our religious belief. You may call it superstition if you please, but it was a part of our religion and a custom that we followed regularly every year until I was a grown-up man.

“Then father would take us out in the fields and we would go through the fields hunting for different herbs which were a cure for certain diseases. And in that practical way I learned what has never been taken away from me. After I was a high school boy I learned the technical part of botany, but the foundation was laid when I was a child. Snake root, sarsaparilla—all these things we gathered and they were just as much a part of our religion as we said our prayers, and we kept them to be used during the year for fever or any disease that we might be threatened with.”

MR. CROLL:

“Speaking of driving away the witches reminds me of an aunt of mine when her soap would not come. My business takes me to all kinds of manufactories, and I have had occasion to come in touch with soap on a large scale, and I find that in their earlier history when the soap wouldn't come there was something lacking in the chemical composition. Well, my dear old aunt, now gone to her rest, an old maiden lady who was a mother to me during the war times, when boiling soap and it wouldn't come, would say to me in Pennsylvania-German, 'Sylvester, get me a stick.' I went and I got such a stick and trimmed it up, and we jammed it into the soap and in five minutes that soap was all right."

PRESIDENT ROLLER then said:

"Gentlemen of the Society: there is one thing more before we come to the last number of the program, some remarks by the incoming President. Before we get to that I want to offer to the Society for publication what I think is an exceedingly interesting and valuable thing. There was an English and German edition of this book and of that publication only one copy is known to be in existence. It was formerly in the possession of a gentleman in Lebanon, but unfortunately it is now in the hands of a collector in Philadelphia. I had the promise that it would be put in my hands, and then it would have been given to the Society along with this book, and I made every effort to get it but was not successful. But I have here the English translation of it by Peter Miller in his own handwriting.

"On the front cover of the book is this written in a strange hand writing. These are the words: 'These letters and manuscript belonged to Dr. Benjamin Franklin of Pennsylvania who gave them to me.' Unfortunately that is not signed and we are unable to trace the ownership of it. My desire is that the Executive Committee shall take this manuscript and if they concur in my views, namely, that we ought to have from Dr. Sachse an exact copy of the German edition printed by Franklin."

DR. SACHSE:

"MR. President and members of the Society: I think that this was one of the first books that Benjamin Franklin printed. Only one copy existed, but fortunately I have the duplicate and it can be re-produced in facsimile, and I suggest that it be re-produced with the facsimile on one page and the English translation on the other.

"I think I have the only copy of that in German and I think that the translation that our President has before him is a copy that was made by Peter Miller in English for Benjamin Franklin about the year it is dated, and as I have the plates of the only German copy, I think it would be well to have them published as I suggested."

PRESIDENT ROLLER:

"Then I would like to have the pleasure of having it printed and present it to the Society."

DR. SCHMAUK:

"I should like to present a motion,—that we express our great appreciation of the kindness of our President and his loyalty to our organization in tendering to us this valuable manuscript, and that we hand it over to the Committee with the recommendation, which will be an instruction, that they publish the same in our PROCEEDINGS with the facsimile plates of the original which Dr. Sachse has in his possession. That is all that is needed to be said.

This is work that the Society has undertaken before, and there is a well-established and correct method of doing it. Dr. Sachse fully understands that. I think we ought to express our appreciation of what our President has done in bringing back to us here in our own community a manuscript of Peter Miller, although he is not, strictly speaking, a part of our community, and I adopt those sentiments as a part of my motion."

This motion was carried unanimously.

President-elect Jacobs, having been presented, said:

"Mr. President and fellow members of the Pennsylvania-German Society: Without any attempt at an address, as your program prescribes, I wish simply to express my high appreciation of the honor which you have given me in electing me as your President. I must say that I feel humiliated, because I have not been a very faithful member of the Society. I have not been present at many of the meetings, although I have taken a great deal of interest in your proceedings. I feel humiliated also in view of the lore to which we were introduced this afternoon, a great deal of which is entirely strange to me. My studies have reached the work of the Pennsylvania-Germans in other fields, but I cannot express too highly my appreciation of those two thorough papers to which we have listened.

"I come at your summons because I have not a drop of blood in my veins that is not Pennsylvania-German. I also represent different sections of the Pennsylvania-German immigration. My two grandmothers having been members of the Reformed Church, my grandfathers members of the Lutheran Church and my great-grandmother having been a member of the Moravian Church, I touch the Pennsylvania-German community at different points.

“The question has sometimes been raised why there should be an association of this kind. I do not think that anyone that knows the proceedings of this Society after they have been published will ask such a question. Our common work for our common country depends upon our loyalty to our historic antecedents, and that man who takes no interest in the lives of his ancestors does not deserve to have anyone in this generation or the generations to come take any interest in his life. So, Mr. President, I regard this association as a most important one for the sake of the people, the republic and the common country to which we all belong, and in which each part of the country must do its work upon its own nationality and according to its own historic development.”

After the Secretary had read the greetings of Rev. P. C. Croll, D.D., of Beardstown, Ill., and a hearty vote of thanks had been passed to the pastor and the people of Christ Lutheran Church, of York, for their kindness and hospitality to the Society, the meeting adjourned.

EVENING.

A goodly company of ladies and gentlemen, members and friends of the Pennsylvania-German Society, gathered in the Banquet Hall of the Colonial Hotel at 5.00 p.m. and partook of a five-course dinner, after which prominent members responded to toasts. As this was the twentieth anniversary of the Society, the toasts were full of interesting reminiscences, which were deemed worthy of permanent preservation. The authorities of the Society are happy, therefore, to be able to present in permanent form the stenographic report of the several excellent addresses made on this happy occasion. When the large assembly dispersed at a late hour, all declared with one voice that this meeting at York, both by reason of its interesting programme and by reason of its enthusiastic banquet, had been one of the most successful sessions ever held by the Pennsylvania-German Society.

TOASTS.

Benjamin M. Nead, Esq., of Harrisburg, presided.

DR. SCHMAUK: "The Twentieth Anniversary of Our Society."

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen: I have been accustomed to speak against all sorts of competition, and in a number of instances have had the fire department right outside of the building, in which I was attempting to keep the attention of those inside, but I have never as yet attempted to compete with those strong desires of the inner man which manifest themselves in a situation such as this and before they have been fully satisfied. I realize the enormity of the task that is before me, and I stand with some trepidation on the threshold of the remarks I am about to make.

This is a happy birthday party. The Pennsylvania-German Society is a blushing young maiden of twenty summers on this day, who is open to your congratulations, and to all who will treat her properly she is willing to extend a delicate Philadelphia finger tip and to all the ladies who will treat her with courtesy she is willing to implant on their fair countenances a typical Berks County kiss. She has determined, however, to remain forever in the state of single blessedness, and while she is entirely willing to receive and possibly coquette with other organizations that are more fair, more beautiful and particularly more aged and powerful than herself, she has thus far been able to resist every proposal that has ever been placed before her. And I pray the Lord that she may ever continue to be a blushing and useful old spinster and not allow herself to be entangled in any alliance that will take away the fairness of her name and rob her of the strength of her friends. This beautiful young damsel, instead of being about to give up any of her charms, is in the process of growing more useful every year. I am sure those of you who have seen the lack of baldness on the heads of every one of the speakers today will agree with me that we are on the path to perennial youth, that we are beginning to get strong, that instead of having defeat before us we shall be able by the help of Him who has given us ancestry in the past and opportunity in the present to do greater, larger and more majestic things for the cause for which we stand in the future that is to come.

Most happy are we to be on the southernmost out-post of Pennsylvania-German territory, which contains in itself the two cities of York and Hanover,—beautiful old York, with her stately square, her lofty buildings, with her historic churches, with that quietness in the evening and that rush in the day time, the opposite of the typical American city, which shows that there is still here a balance in power of the German blood that means sustenance, that stands for principle and that infuses itself into the civilization of our younger classes.

Yesterday afternoon as I rode down the banks of the broad bosom of the Susquehanna in one of those magnificent Washington expresses I felt the force of the contrast between my mode of traveling and that of those who came from the place where General Roller tried to get that little book. By the way that book was in my house for about a week, and while I was not responsible for its sale, had I known the General wanted it I might have used what influence I had to have kept it. As I thought of those men who every spring and every fall made a trip down through York, down into Maryland and Virginia, and when I thought of those lonely trips, partly on horseback, I felt that we ought to be thankful as a Society to be able to preserve the forms of the new which we are allowed to enjoy in this day and generation. And when we entered into that beautiful old church yard where the first and second and the third church has been erected, where in the year 1745, in this earliest formed county on the other side of the Susquehanna there rang out for the first time the tolls of the church bell to call the worshippers of the Lord together, and when I recall the steady ministry that is connected with this congregation and with this majestic town as it waded through the Colonial and through the Revolutionary period, I felt that our Association was fortunate indeed in having been welcomed into these hospitable borders.

When I listened to the address of our beloved President with fear and trepidation, thinking that possibly there might be some over-ardency in the experiences through which he has passed or some over-ardency on the part of those who had passed through similar experiences a little farther North, and found that such was not the case but that there was a manly plea on his part for the principles, for which we are bound to respect him, my heart rejoiced that the bosom of this Society was large enough to cradle on its one knee such a typical representative as our General from Virginia, and on its other knee such a typical representative as the State Superintendent of Public Schools of Pennsylvania. I hope that some of the vigor of youth will return into both of these men. I do not mean to call Dr. Schaeffer an old man, and I am only referring to the crown of white hair that graces his youthful countenance and confers upon him a dignity that is worthy of the chief educator of the state of Pennsylvania.

It was my opinion that on this evening we should have been floating on the waves of the Hudson River in one of the palatial steamboats that ply back and forth, and that our banqueting should be interspersed with the sweet musical songs that come from the Catskills, for this is the two hundredth anniversary of the arrival of the Palatines in the state of New York, and our Society might have made a glorious pilgrimage up this stream where the Palatines were first set to work and from which came that migration down the Susquehanna. But it proved to be an impracticable dream, and instead of sailing on the waves of the Hudson we are high and lofty, safe and dry in the Colonial Hotel,—the name is all right,—in this kingly old city of York.

Twenty years ago there were two or three men who met together and who declared that this Society should be organized. I will not give up the credit of that meeting, for I am sure it belongs to Lebanon County for having made the suggestion for an organization of this kind. However, suggestions are very different things from deeds and it remained for the county of Lancaster to do the actual thing, in connection with Dr. Egle of Harrisburg. The man who has been most active in furthering this association, the one who laid the preliminary plans and who brought matters to a focus, I am glad to say, is with us tonight, our first Secretary, Mr. Frank Diffenderffer. It was due to his communication with Dr. Egle, and it was due to his ability to gather round and about him Dr. Stahr, who is present tonight, and two representative Lancaster citizens, that this Society came into existence and has proved itself creditable to the ancestry which he represents.

The first meeting that I recall was held in Dr. Diffenderffer's office, where five men assembled to talk over the situation. A meeting that was held in the Moravian Church, of which Dr. Hark was pastor, was a very typical meeting. We had there two extreme factions, those who maintained that this organization be formed for the sake of the dialect, whose meetings should be conducted in the Pennsylvania-German dialect, and on the other hand those who opposed that sort of Society, those who felt that to be wide of the main proposition and not at all typical, and on that day this Society escaped the danger of becoming a mere dialect Society.

At first there were less than one hundred members. The next year there were over one hundred. The next there were several hundred, and now we have a membership of over four hundred and fifty persons, and I have no doubt that before the next meeting takes place we shall have gone over the five hundred mark.

There is no reason why this Society, which is in the heart of all that great emigration that went not only south to where General Roller lives, but also west and which is found in almost every state west of us today in large and magnificent representation, should not be brought into active and living touch with the scholarship and with the strength and power that are to be found in this organization. And as I sit down I trust that you all will be so filled with the charm of this lovely blushing maiden of two decades that you will be willing to bow to her, to bring more admirers to her feet, to place many crowns upon her head, and to place her with enthusiasm at the top of the mountain where our country may see her in the fullness of her strength, which may God grant shall never be diminished.

MR. HESS: "The Meeting Twenty Years Ago in Lancaster."

Ladies and gentlemen: A certain prominent man once said that he spoke upon two occasions. One was when he had to say something and the other was when he had something to say. This afternoon I tried to recall that meeting twenty years ago, and after listening to the eloquent words of the gentleman from Lebanon I felt that while I thought I was in the position of the second speaker, that I had something to say, I found I was in the position of the first one and had to say something.

Now the meeting twenty years ago to which I refer was a meeting in the parlor or office of the parsonage of Dr. Hark. That meeting was called by a member of this Society and one who was probably more prominent and took a more active part in the organization of the Pennsylvania-German Society than any other member. He called six men, five with himself, to meet in his office. They were Dr. Stahr, Professor Buehrle, Professor Lyte, Hiram Young and Dr. Egle. Two of those men have gone to that bourne from which no traveler returns, Dr. Egle and Hiram Young. The other four are still with us and active members of this Society. Those six men met and spoke of the organization of the Pennsylvania-German Society and how important it was. Those six men then and there agreed that they would send out notices to different persons in different parts of the state, asking them to meet at the office of Rev. Dr. Hark. At the first real meeting, February 26, 1891, thirty-one counties were represented.

The first question that arose at this meeting was whether it was to be the Pennsylvania-German Society or the Pennsylvania-Dutch Society, and the Society passed through a crisis at that time, because the two active members in favor of the Pennsylvania-Dutch thought of the dialect, while the rest of the men were more interested in the history and biography and genealogy of the Pennsylvania-Germans than in the dialect itself. And finally the name of the society was decided upon and was the name that we now have, the Pennsylvania-German Society.

It was agreed that they should send out notices. They were sent out, inviting all persons interested in the Pennsylvania-Germans to meet in April or May. The exact number I do not know, for I have no data to which I can refer at this time, but a large number met at the Court House in Lancaster, and that was the first general meeting of the Pennsylvania-German Society.

The President presided at that meeting and several men came from Philadelphia to attend that meeting, and I say that the Society passed through a crucial period when those two men who came from Philadelphia asked us either to join the German Society of Pennsylvania or else make our membership so large that also the latest generations of Germans could become members of the Society. Dr. Hark appointed a Committee on Constitution, and they insisted on making a limited membership to those who came of early ancestors, and it was then and there that our Society was formed and organized. Thanks to those men that it is what it is today.

At that time we hardly knew what a mine we had and what would be the output of the Pennsylvania-German Society, but today its volumes are in the prominent libraries of the world, and everywhere people have learned to know more of the Pennsylvania-Germans and the part they took in the history of not only Pennsylvania, but in the history of our country.

MR. BAIR: "The Meeting in York."

Mr. Toastmaster, ladies and gentlemen: Your kindly introduction, Mr. President, would I think appeal to any man and lift him into the sixth sense realm. I have a feeling toward the Pennsylvania-German Society which I can scarcely describe. I could hug her, not because, as Dr. Schmauk has said, she is "twenty years old," but rather because I have known her since she was a little tot. I watched her grow, until now she stands forth in the splendor of her young womanhood. The Pennsylvania-German Society gone into decline? Dead at the top? Dead at the root? Well not as long as there are virtuous sons and daughters justly proud of their German ancestry; not while there are sons and daughters of early immigrant settlers of Lancaster County and eastern Pennsylvania,—not while any of them live. I have said I have known her since she was a little tot, and am sure I do not speak above the head of anyone in this presence when I say that once we are in with the tots we are in with them for life.

The Pennsylvania-German Society was but three years old when it first visited York. It was on the eleventh of October, 1893, that it came here, and I recall that both of us were seventeen years younger then than now. With what delightful expectation I had looked forward to the coming of the Pennsylvania-Germans. It so happened,—permit this personality,—that I was selected at that time by our evening newspaper to report the proceedings of that meeting, and in return for whatever I might report I was to be remunerated in the form of a ticket to a banquet in this same room following the convention.

I sat down in the court room of our old Court House and heard the call to order, by the President of the Society, Henry L. Fisher. I heard the Honorable John W. Bittinger deliver the address of welcome for the citizens and Germans of York. I heard Mr. Thomas C. Zimmerman respond in a brilliant address, so brilliant, that at the time I wondered innocently, does this come from Reading. The convention was ready. Now three years old as a simile may destroy a proper concept of the physical and mental vigor of the Society, but you will have to consider it as if by protean power, sprung right out of the rock full grown, ready for business. There was that splendid venerable man, Dr. John G. Morris of the Maryland Society, and I remember I thought at the time how fine it was on the part of the Pennsylvanians in the very first part of their program to make way for the President of a sister state. Then came on these other names. (I had to go to my scrap book to recover them.) J. Max Hark, F. R. Diffenderffer, Rauch, George C. Heckman, John B. Warfel and Julius F. Sachse, who has again come to us. Then Lewis B. Hennighausen made a brilliant speech on "The Treasure the German American has in his Ancestor." Mr. Hennighausen, living or dead, has my profound respect, for by that speech he impressed himself upon me; for when the American people, or any other nationality, forget their ancestors it will not be long before they forget their homes, their flag and their country; then having lost honor of parentage, it will not be long before the ballot box, sunk below the solid level of the flag, will fail to record the will and judgment of a free people. If we propose to stand by the spirit our ancestors had, politically or socially, if you please, we will have to keep close to the integrity of their simple, unselfish, faithful lives,—the bed rock upon which human society and our own Christian government were built. Gentlemen, I verily believe it will yet be found that such organizations as the Pennsylvania-German Society have proved anchors of the ship of state, holding fast a respect for the lives and character of our forefathers who were never in a hurry but always at work.

Now, with your permission, I want to swell myself for a moment into something of the exultation I felt seventeen years ago when I wrote this, the heading of my newspaper report of your convention.

“On the second visit of William Penn to his province, in the autumn of 1700–1701, he led out from Philadelphia to the summit of the high watershed between the Delaware and the Susquehanna a distinguished company of gentlemen. From thence he pointed out to the rich investors who accompanied him, the wondrous wooded valleys of the Conestoga and Pequea, as well as the distant hills beyond the Susequehanna. Not long thereafter the Swiss Cantons and Palatinate sent into that extensive ‘forest garden of the Lord’ the early Mennonites and Lutherans.

“One hundred and eighty-five years have passed since they first came and now an honoring posterity—The Society of Pennsylvania-Germans—assembles within the boundaries of old Springettsbury Manor, a part of the domain, beyond the river, Penn himself had pointed out to friends in Germany. Though long belated, this Society assembles to gather up the almost forgotten past, to examine its records, measure its influences, establish the fame of the settler Teuton, declare the excellence of his enterprise in America, and finally unite in perpetual bond of fellowship the sons of German blood.

“Not since the first German set foot on soil west of the Susquehanna has a society met in York County to honor the forefathers of our vast German population. It was an intelligent and high purposed throng that pressed into the Court House at ten o'clock this morning. The convention at York of the Pennsylvania-German Society is an event. An event from which will spring fuller appreciation of our rich home history and a more careful preservation of the priceless rubbish on our garrets.”

And now you are come back again. My friend Nead has spoken of kindness. Though so long away we had often thought of you and wondered why you neglected us. I feel as though we ought to kill a fatted calf right here. There will be nothing too good in York hereafter for the Pennsylvania-German Society, and I hope that seventeen years will not elapse again before you bring your wives and sweethearts here. The Pennsylvania-German Society cannot come or go too often into any part of Pennsylvania, for their literature and they themselves carry impressive influences wherever they go.

MR. RICHARDS: “The Past Membership of the Society.”

My dear friends, if I wanted to talk all by myself about the past membership of the Pennsylvania-German Society I would not know where to begin and I would not know where to end. It would be unjust to our past membership, for they speak for themselves, and I think there is no more beautiful illustration of what I mean than what we see in the Bible itself,—where the human life is likened to a race, which is witnessed on all sides by throngs of spectators. So our Pennsylvania-German Society is running a race, and as it runs that race I in spirit go with it and I see seated around this amphitheater of ours all the dear friends, not of the past but of the present but who were with us in the past, and don't let us forget them. When I think of the faithfulness of the men with whom I served for so many years and when I think of all the pleasant moments I have had with those men, when I think of all the delightful conditions which surround my association with those men, I say to myself, as they sit and look at us, Thank God that the Pennsylvania-German Society has been running a good race.

St. Paul, when speaking of this race, has reference to the unseen witness. My dear friends, where shall I begin to speak about the unseen witnesses of the past, those whom we love and who are no longer with us? There is Dr. Egle, my dear old friend, who was one of the originators of this Society, a strong, big man something like myself. He was not like the man that the New Jersey girl wanted to marry and had to go to Texas to find. Her idea of a man was one six feet tall, wearing a No. 15 hat and No. 12 shoes. A real man would not have been Dr. Egle, according to her estimate, but we know that Dr. Egle was a real man, a man who knew something. We know what this Society was to Dr. Egle, and Dr. Egle may be looking down on us and thinking of what we have done, and let us remember what he did for us in the past.

Then I think of that dear old friend of mine, to whom reference has been made, Dr. Heckman, who was with me at the meeting in Lebanon many years ago and read an excellent paper. I still think of Dr. Heckman's being associated with this Society, but he is gone. We must not forget him and men like him.

Why, it was only a year or two ago that we were applauding at our banquet the grand address made by our dear friend Dr. Dubbs, and there are men like Dr. Dubbs who have left their influence with us, and don't let us forget those men and don't let us neglect to do the duty which they so valiantly upheld.

We all remember Dr. Porter, who was such an honor to this Society, one of the greatest orators this country has ever seen in the pulpit, and how many of the Executive Committee think of Dr. Porter who insisted upon being with us at our meetings, full of cheer, full of everything that helped to lighten the load that was resting on our shoulders.

We have had a great many witty addresses made before this Society and we have had a great many able men speak to us, but there was one very dear to me, my brother, and many of you remember with what sparkling wit he abounded and what kind of a man he was, and he has gone before us. There was a man who in my place would have had you laughing all the time.

So one after another they have gone. We are passing on, but don't let us forget those who have gone. Let us think of these few and many like these few, for I have no time to tell you of the others. Let us revere their memory. Let us not forget the past membership of our Society.

If I were Mr. Henninger, I would be inclined to tell a little story. It is a true story. That is the reason I tell it, but then you know Mr. Henninger never told anything but the truth. The fable was Æsop's, but the story was not. He told about a farmer who, as in the fable, went out one day and found a rattlesnake frozen stiff. He was a humane man, so he picked up the rattlesnake, took it home and thawed it out. That much is like the fable, but the difference between the fable and the story is this: that this rattlesnake appreciated what was done for it by this good friend, and they became very closely attached to each other. The snake was allowed the freedom of the house and was fed, as it were, from its master's hand. One night after the master had gone to bed he heard a racket down stairs and went down. What did he see? This shows the snake's appreciation and kindness. A burglar had gotten into the house and this snake had caught the burglar, had wrapped his tail around the burglar and a leg of the table, and had put his head out of the window and was rattling for a policeman.

MR. GLESSNER: "The New Members."

Mr. Toastmaster and friends: Seventeen years ago I was introduced in this hall by the toastmaster of the occasion of the assemblage of the Pennsylvania-Germans as the baby member. Today I am introduced as the new member. When I look to my right and see the Vice-President of this association, who was then a student in my office, and when I look around and see our old friend here, Dr. Sachse, and the various other members, and when I think of who were present then but who are with us no longer, I only know that the Pennsylvania-German Society doesn't grow old and that if I was the baby member of the Society then, I am now the young member and I am glad that I haven't grown a day older. Possibly I still use one of our old-time trundle beds that our friends were talking about this afternoon.

I am a peculiar member of our Society. I am a Pennsylvania-German who cannot speak German. I was unfortunate enough to be raised in the northern part of this county. My father thought it best to raise a crowd of boys in the country, so he took us up to the northern section of York County which is entirely English, and Pennsylvania-German was as much of a curiosity as the elephant is to the boy on his first visit to the circus. My mother talked to the butter man in Pennsylvania-German and I would look on with awe at this jabbering, and I do not understand much of it now. There was one thing that I discovered there that I have never discovered among the Pennsylvania-Dutch settlement in York County and that is the way the houses were built. You had to go up stairs to go into the cellar and down stairs to go into the attic.

As one of the younger members of this society, I want to say that I fully realize that you older members have done for us a great work. You have built a foundation and you have preserved records from which we, as we come in closer touch, can build further and further and further and store up knowledge, that to the future generations will be of incomparable value. No one realizes what a mine, what a fund of Pennsylvania-German history is found right here in York County, and I am sorry to know that there are so few York Countians here who seem to appreciate what a fund there is here.

It is amusing to sit and watch your Vice-President. I have known him a great many years and know that he is a full-blooded Pennsylvania-German. I don't think there is a drop of any other kind of blood in his veins, and I want to say this: I think he has gotten instilled into him during the last seventeen years a good bit of old-fashioned Pennsylvania-German common sense, and I know that as Vice-President you will have a well of information. He wont tell you, but down in his treasury and strong box there is a well of information that the Pennsylvania-German Society wants to get at. He knows more about the Pennsylvania-Germans in York County than any other man in York County, and you want to get it and you want to have it published in the Pennsylvania-German periodicals, because if you don't you miss something.

Now as younger members, in welcoming you here in York County we extend to you the only welcome that a good old-fashioned York County Dutchman can extend,—that is, the open hand. Come again, and we promise you that the next time you come, and I hope it will not be seventeen years, there will be more York Countians at the board and you will receive a warmer welcome, if it is possible, than you have this time, almost as warm, General, as your old friend General John Gordon got when he was here in 1863. We received him then as we have tried to receive you today, as we will receive everyone, with an open hand.

DR. SCHAEFFER: "The Work of the Society."

Mr. Toastmaster, ladies and gentlemen: The Pennsylvania-German Society can claim to have saved my life at least once. I came to York yesterday afternoon feeling like the girl who said she was just dying for a new sensation, and I came to York just dying for a new story in Pennsylvania-Dutch and last night I got one that gave me enough material to restore my health, to renew my strength and keep me vigorous for another year. Now that is but a concrete example of the first part of the work of the Pennsylvania-German Society, namely: the protection of good fellowship among kindred spirits. I claim that is one service which the Pennsylvania-German Society renders to every one of its members who takes the trouble to come to our annual meetings.

Some time ago a gentleman said to me "You Pennsylvanians are funny fellows. You never can do anything without a feed or a banquet, and you do more laughing than any other people on the face of the earth." I was willing to plead guilty on that charge. I think I have eaten meals in every state in the Union, but give me a good old-fashioned Pennsylvania-German meal, or such a banquet as we had last year in Bethlehem and this year in York. I think one part of the work of the Pennsylvania-German Society is to test and testify to the culinary art of the different communities in which we meet.

But of course the greatest part of the work of the Society is historical. The feeling has been expressed that we have reached the acme of our glory. I don't believe it. We have just begun to cultivate the historical field. We have cultivated the historic field in the direction of religion, for the Pennsylvania-Germans are a very religious people and it is natural that we should first take up that side of the development. We have hardly dipped into the work of the Pennsylvania-Germans in the domain of education, and we have not discussed what the Pennsylvania-Germans have done in the domain of science. How few people know that it was a Pennsylvania-Dutchman who first showed how to stop gangrene in the hospitals during the Civil War where the soldiers were dying like flies. People in your own city didn't know of that great work, while scientists of Europe have discussed it. Development in medicine in another direction is a field that we have hardly touched.

They sometimes say that the people of Berks County still vote for General Jackson. I always say that they vote for his heirs and assigns. Two days before the last election in which Thaddeus Stevens' name appeared as a candidate for Congress, Thaddeus Stevens went to another world and he was lying a corpse in his home when the people of Lancaster County elected him to Congress for the last time.

I made that statement in order to put myself square against the insinuation made by the best advertised man in the world, Theodore Roosevelt. He made an assertion in one of his writings that the Pennsylvania-Germans who dropped their dialect and became English came into prominence, but those who did not drop their dialect became an unimportant part of the United States, wielding no further influence. Now the Germans of Lancaster County exerted a great influence over the whole nation because they kept Thaddeus Stevens in Congress, no matter what the politicians of Pennsylvania might say or do.

In the next place the Pennsylvania-Germans have taught the people of the United States the greatest of all lessons, that of conservation, by their proper methods of farming and by rotation of crops. Here in Lancaster County for two hundred years they have been practising rotation of crops and following proper methods of tillage, and the soil today is as productive as when our Pennsylvania-German forefathers first settled on the banks of the Conestoga, and I don't think that Teddy would dare say today that the Pennsylvania-Germans who have kept up their dialect have not shown the people of the United States how to farm.

The people of America are not only writing history today, but they are making history and the Pennsylvania-Germans of today are making history. There is no danger that we shall ever exhaust the historic material of our Pennsylvania-German people, and the people one hundred years hence will find just as much worthy of historic record as we find in the deeds of our ancestors.

Once in a while somebody says to me "The difference between the Pennsylvania-Germans and the high Germans is that the high German has literature; the Pennsylvania-Dutch has none." Think of the things that have been written in Pennsylvania-German and think of that domain of folk-lore that has been given to us by our young men this afternoon. There is a whole world that we have not begun to cultivate.

Within the last year the Pennsylvania-German Society has discovered three new young men, our Secretary and the two young men on the program this afternoon. Now I do not know of anyone connected with the Society who knows more of the promising young men among the Pennsylvania-Germans than does our friend, Dr. Jacobs, the President of the next year, and the greatest service we can render to the Pennsylvania-German Society is to find real talented young men, to give them a chance, put them on the program and set them to work cultivating these unexplored fields. If we will do that it will mark a new era in the history of our Society. Those of us who are turning gray and who are beginning to be among the old men of the Society can do no more gracious act than to pass that proposed amendment of the Constitution, which will put new persons in the Executive Committee. We can do no more gracious act than to find bright young men and set them to work to develop the talent they may have, to think through the pen and chronicle in proper historic form the achievements of the Pennsylvania-Germans.

DR. EVANS: "Pennsylvania German Wives, New Style and Old Style."

Mr. Toastmaster, ladies and gentlemen: Now I don't know what inspiration it was that put this subject in the shape it is, Pennsylvania-German wives, new style and old style. When we speak of Pennsylvania-German wives we mean wives, mothers and daughters. We don't speak of them as new style; they are all the good old style. Our wives are simply a reproduction of their German mothers and they preserve their identity.

When I speak tonight, and I am going to say only a few words, of the German wives the new style and the old style, I want you to think of your mother while I think of my mother, and I want you to think of your wife as I think of mine. God made our wives and our mothers, and God put greater hearts in our wives and mothers than he did in us men. God gave them greater love and more persevering affection than he did us. When you were little and had your troubles why did you go to mother? You always did, and you remember too that mother was always accessible. You had no trouble to get into her presence. She was never too busy, and when you came rushing in to her she heard you, and that trouble hurt her more than it did you. She dropped everything and you were in her arms and she kissed away the tears and it was all right. No one, next to the Master, has laid down her life for her children and husband as our Pennsylvania-German wives and mothers. And all these things that our wives and mothers are now doing for our boys and girls, let us say something of these things to our wives and mothers if they are still living. Let us not bring it in in a belated way. Let us tell our wives and our sweethearts that we appreciate them.

I regret to say that this is the next to the last topic. A theme like this to be at the tail end of a program! Next year let us have this topic away up at the top, for our wives and mothers are always at the top, where they should be kept. Long live our wives and our daughters and our sweethearts. May they always be found with us and may we realize what we see in that beautiful little verse of Schiller's when we look at them in their imperial glory and majesty and sway of their dominion.

Truly we may sing of our Pennsylvania-German wives and daughters, as Schiller sings of his Laura:

“Deine Augen-wenn sie Liebe laecheln,
 Koennten Leben durch den Marmor faecheln,
 Felsenadern Pulse leihn;
 Traeume werden um mich her zu Wesen,
 Kann ich nur in deinen Augen lesen:
 Laura, Laura mein!”

Nun “ehret die Frauen, denn sie flechten und weben Himmlische Rosen in's irdische Leben.”

DR. JACOBS: “The Future.”

Mr. Toastmaster, fellow members of the Society and friends: I cannot help but express my great gratification for all that I have seen and heard at this meeting. It was a special gratification for me to greet here your President, whom I have learned to know in Virginia, a representative of that immigration of the eighteenth century, as it went beyond the boundaries of Pennsylvania and Maryland and roamed up the Shenandoah Valley.

I am convinced that the work of this Society is only at its beginning, that the monuments that have been left of those who founded this Society and who have coöperated with so much success can be made the foundation of a still more extensive and richer display of that which is offered in this Society, an opportunity to trace the history of our people, not simply as they have gone out of Germany, but in their relation in the country from which they came, to trace that history in the development of our country in its earlier period. The pioneer period is an important one, and there is one particular section of our history that has not been properly presented. I do not want to cast any reflections on the gentlemen of our Society, but there is a field which it is our duty to bring to the attention of our friends around us, and that is the important office which the Pennsylvania-Germans performed in the foundation of our country in the declaration of that great struggle, the Revolutionary War, when it was the Pennsylvania-Germans, occupying the very center of the country, standing in the midst of an English-speaking community which in many of its parts was either disloyal to the cause of the Colonies or felt only feebly on its side, who decided that question. The monument that was unveiled last week in Philadelphia is a proper memorial of that fact, only in connection with the exercises on that occasion there was one feature that I did not like. Not only in the public exercises but in the various press notices the name of General Peter Muhlenberg was given prominence as though he were a foreigner, whereas he was an American of German birth. That is the office of our people. That is simply the position which I understand this Society holds, a Society composed of those who glory in our American citizenship, whose eyes are not turned back to Germany as an earthly Paradise, but who are as fully alive to what is occurring in America as any who are around us, only we differ in this respect: that we have brought a particular element into the development of this country from Germany. It is our duty, and so solemn a trust it is to me that I mean to preserve faithfully the history of all that our forefathers have done, and if in the future the Society will work on these lines, it will be doing a great work, both for our own people and the country itself.

Abraham F. Hostetter, Esq.

Abraham F. Hostetter, the son of Simon (born January 21, 1821) and Mary Frantz Hostetter, was born May 29, 1851, near Millport, in Warwick Township, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. His paternal grandfather was Jacob Hostetter (born February 20, 1794, died February, 1862), son of Christian Hostetter (born December 2, 1761, died October 26, 1838), son of Abraham Hostetter (born 1723, died 1796), son of Jacob Hostetter (died 1761), who came to this country with Mennonites from Switzerland in 1709 or 1710.

After attending the schools of the district, he continued his studies at the State Normal School at Millersville, of which institution he was a graduate. He began his legal studies under Hon. John Dean, subsequently a Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, at Hollidaysburg, Pa., and took a full course in the Law School of the University of Michigan, from which institution he also was graduated. In the fall of 1878 he was admitted to practice law in the Courts of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hostetter was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Millersville State Normal School, Chairman of the Board of Censors of the Lancaster Bar Association, and for many years a member of the Purchasing Committee of the Law Library Association. He was also a member of the Board of Trustees of the Young Men's Christian Association and of the Young Women's Christian Association. He also was connected with the Pennsylvania Forestry Association, the Lancaster County Historical Society, and the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

After a gradual decline of some months, Mr. Hostetter died on June 15, 1911.

He was admitted to membership in the Pennsylvania-German Society January 18, 1898.

Samuel M. Sener, Esq.

Samuel M. Sener, Esq., was born in Lancaster, Pa., October 5, 1855. His father, Henry C. Sehner (Sener), born February 6, 1828, was the son of John Sehner (born January 4, 1798, died October 24, 1864), who was the son of Johannes Sehner (born October 17, 1765, died July 11, 1814), who was the son of Gottlieb Soehner, who came over from Germany, landed in Philadelphia October 17, 1749, and died about 1780.

His father, grandfather, great-grandfather, and great-great-grandfather were carpenters and joiners. Gottlieb Soehner subscribed to the oath of allegiance to the Colonies on August 2, 1778, and Johannes Sehner subscribed on May 30, 1778.

His mother, Frances A. Coggsdall, was born August 27, 1834, the daughter of Mary Kline (born December 24, 1810, died March 10, 1887), whose mother was Elizabeth Leonard (born March 20, 1768, died May 11, 1853), who was a daughter of George S. Leonard of Revolutionary fame. (See Rupp's "Lancaster County," page 425.) The early ancestors of Mr. Sener were staunch Lutherans.

Mr. Sener was educated in the public schools, studied law, and was admitted to the Lancaster Bar in 1877. He did not, however, devote himself closely to the practice of his profession, but at various time was engaged on the local newspapers, being at one time court reporter for "The New Era." He was very prominent in local historical and scientific circles, and for many years was the librarian of the Lancaster County Historical Society. He was a trustee of the A. Herr Smith Memorial Library, and a member of the Sons of the Revolution, of the Society of the War of 1812, of the Lancaster Press Club, and of the Linnean Society.

Mr. Sener was the author of a "History of the Catholic Church in Lancaster County," "The Sehner Ancestry," and other works, and was a contributor to the United States Catholic Historical Researches and other publications. Since 1874 he had been a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church of Lancaster, Pa.

He died June 26, 1911.

Mr. Sener was a charter member of the Pennsylvania-German Society.

PRIOR JAEBEZ (REV. PETER MILLER),
OF THE EPHRATA COMMUNITY, IN HIS ANCHORITE CELL,
THE WRITER OF THE LETTER TO BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

FROM AN OLD SKETCH IN POSSESSION OF JULIUS F. SACHSE.

A UNIQUE EPHRATA MANUSCRIPT BY
REV. PETER MILLER (PRIOR JABEZ),

PREPARED FOR AND SENT TO BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

At the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania-German Society, held at York, Pa., Friday, October 14, 1910, the retiring President of the Society, John E. Roller, Esq., of Harrisonburg, Rockingham County, Va., stated that he had obtained a heretofore unknown Ephrata Manuscript folio of some 120 pages from a dealer in England, which he now presented to the Society.

Upon examination this proved to be entirely in the handwriting of Prior Jabez (Rev. Peter Miller) who had succeeded Father Friedsam (Conrad Beissel) as Prior or Superintendent of the Ephrata community.

This manuscript was prepared for Benjamin Franklin by Peter Miller some three years after his election (April 8, 1768) as a member of the American Philosophical Society and was sent to Benjamin Franklin, who was then the president of the society, and the book was undoubtedly at one time the property of that venerable scientific institution.

The contents of this manuscript consists of a letter to Franklin, two pages of which are here reprinted:

FIRST PAGE.

TO BENJAMIN FRANKLIN ESQUIRE:

Sir:

Being prevented by many interruptions, the Discharge upon your worthy Letter was so long postponed. I send you hereby a collection, which for the most part uncommon: I do not pretend, that they Word for Words hath been the Father's Tenets; for he himself would never publish any, and protested against others, which, by doing also, hath increased the Division in the Church. Yet can I give Assurance, that if the Father was alive, and would read them, that he would own them. I wish, that it hath been in my Hand, to make all palatable according to the modern Taste: but Truth hath haired Lipps, & used in its utterance a rough Tune. I offer the whole to your Freedom, either to burn or publish the same, or to make such alterations, as you think best: for altho' I am convinc'd of the Veracity of the Substance of the whole, yet must I sue for Pardon when the Expressions are defective, for I am a Foreigner to the Idiotism of the Language, which I hope to obtain from your Clemency. I hope, the whole will be forwarded by the Care of your Lady, with which and her Family we have in your Absence cultivated the same Friendship, which was established for many years: but I gave Mr. Christ: Marshal,<sup>1</sup> Liberty, to peruse said writings, and even to copy of for his Friends, if he would, which have inquired for such Things, which I thought necessary not to conceal from you.

The Present, which I have added, was the Father's musical Book, wherein are contained the most part of the Musical Concerts, by himself composed. It did cost three Brethren three Quarters of a Year Work to write the same: by the Imbellishment thereof it will appear, what a great Regard we had for our Superior, in the whole Book there is no musical Error. And as it was written before the Mystery of Singing was fully discovered, therefore are not all the Keys therein mentioned. The Masters of that Angelic Art will be astonished to see that therein a Man, destituted of all human Instruction, came therein to the highest Pitch of Perfection, merely through his own Industry. Also, that when he did set up a School in the Camp, not only the Members of the Single Station were therewith occupied for many years: but also the Family-Brethren were also thereby enamoured, that their natural Affection, to their Family suffered a great Loss.

It is a Wonder, how the even Notes and few half-notes can be so marvellously transposed, as to make thereby 1000 Melodies, all of 5 Tunes, and some of 6 Tunes, yea some of 7 Tunes, also that they came not one the other in the Way. In the Composition the Father had the same Way as in his Writings, viz: he suspended his considering Faculty, and putting his Spirit on the Pen, followed its Dictates strictly, also were all the Melodies flown from the Mystery of Singing, that was opened within him, therefore have they that Simplicity, which was required, to raise Edification. It is certain, that the Confusion of Languages, which began at Babel, never did affect Singing: and therefore is in Substance of the Matter in the Whole World but one Way of Singing; altho? in particulars there may be Differences.

As concerning our Oeconomy: It is true that it received by the Father's death a severe Shock; yet have we through the Grace of God, both Brethren & Sisters, hitherto maintained our Ground and a visible Congregation. But shall not propagate the Monastic Life upon the Posterity; since we have no Successors, & the Genius of the Americans is bound another way.

I have your kind Greeting communicated both to the Brethren & Sisters in the Camp: Which all send you their humble Reciprocation, the number of Brethren being 12— and of the (3) Ladies 26, all good old Warriours. We all wish, that God would grant you in your high Age the Spirit of Rejuvenescency, and that, when satiated with Years, you might occupy your Lot in the Lord's Inheritance: in which humble wishes I in particular remain

EPHRATA in

Sir

the 12th of June 1771.

Your obedient Servant

PETER MILLER.

P. S. Please to tell Mr. Neate the humble Respect from all the Camp, especially from Brother Obed & me.

This is followed by an introduction, three pages; then follows an elaboration of Beissel's Dissertation on Mans Fall, "Printed in Ephrata in 1765, and sold by Christopher Marshall in Philadelphia." This consists of nineteen chapters of 104 folio pages.

In conclusion of this dissertation the writer states:

CONCLUSION.

These Sheets were by no means written with an Intention, to sell them for infallible Truths: but to stir up the capacity of the Reader, and therefore is every line submitted to Judgment Supernatural Things, if proposed even in the best method in Words, carry not with them that Impression, which they had, before they were uttered: and therefore are the Words of the h. Scripture defective. The Father would never publish any Creed, and was not well pleas'd with the many, we have now: I hope therefore the Reader will use in Reading those Lines the same Freedom, which I have used in writing the same. For altho' the Substance of the matter stands firmly, yet am I a Foreigner to the Language, and have not sufficiently Words at Command to express clearly the Ideas of the Mind. And if any Expression should seem offensive, or destroy any Article of our common Faith: I shall not refuse to acknowledge my Fault, knowing well that our own self is nothing else, but a concatenated Series of all Errors. With this I take my humble Leave from the Reader.

Written at Ephrata in Lancaster County in Pennsylvania in the Year 1771.

Then follows: A translation of Beissel's Ninety and Nine Mystical Proverbs, after which comes a "Supplement to the Antecedent Discourses, 9 pages," and an appendix of a collection of 57 "Apophthegens taken from the Father's Writings."

Peter Miller's translation of the 99 Mystical Proverbs unfortunately does not cover the whole of Franklin's imprint of 1730, but only the first fourteen (14) pages, of the original book. These are here reproduced upon opposite pages with a fac-simile of the German-Franklin Edition of 1730.

In the original as printed by Franklin, these 99 Mystical Proverbs are followed with Sixty-two Poetische Gedichte (poetical poems), pp. 14-23. Lection eines Christen, welche ihne sein Chrmeister zu lernen auff gegeben (A Christian's Lesson—imparted for study by his instructor), pp. 24-25.

Eine sehr nachdenchliche unter werffung, und bevgung unter diese lehr (A very impressive submission, and obedience to this doctrine under this rule), pp. 26-27: Andere Section (Another lesson), pp. 28-32.

Conrad Beissel and sectarian associates were among the earliest patrons to encourage and patronize Benjamin Franklin in his efforts as an independent printer in Philadelphia, after his return to America from England in 1726. According to the Chronicon Ephratense, the first book issued by these Sabbatarians, was Beissel's Buchlein von Sabbath. This was printed, according to the Chronicon, in 1728, the year when Franklin formed the partnership in the printing business with Hugh Meredith. As no copy of this book in the German has thus far been found, nor known to exist, it is impossible to even surmise by whom it was printed.

As the book aroused considerable attention, Michael Wohlfarth (Welfare in English) later Brother Agonius of the Ephrata community, translated the book into English. This was printed in the following year, 1729, by Andrew Bradford. It bore the following title:<sup>1</sup> |Mystyrion Anomias, |The |Mystery of Lawlessness |or |Lawless Antichrist |Discovered and Disclosed. |

At the same time a book of Wohlfarth was issued from the same press, under the title: |The |Naked Truth |Standing against all Painted and Disguised |Lies, Deceit, and Falsehood |or the |Lords Seventh-Day |&c.<sup>2</sup>

But a single copy of above books is known to exist, one being in the library of the writer.

In the year 1729 there were no less than four printing offices in the infant City of Philadelphia. These were: Andrew Bradford, at the Sign of the Bible in the Second Street; Samuel Keimer, in Second Street; David Harry, printer in Philadelphia in Second Street; Franklin and Meredith, New Printing Office in High Street near the Market.

A careful examination of the above two issues absolutely proves them to be issues of the press of Andrew Bradford.

At an early day an acquaintance had been formed between Conrad Beissel, Michael Wohlfarth, Samuel Eckering and Benjamin Franklin. This resulted in Beissel engaging Franklin to print a new work for him in 1729 under the title: Mystische, und sehr geheyme Sprueche. Usually known as the "Nine and Ninty Mystical Proverbs." This book bore Franklin's imprint and date 1730.

Franklin's earliest business journal, which has come down to us, begins July 4, 1730. A careful examination of the issues of Franklin's press for the year 1729 shows that he had but two paid commissions besides Conrad Beissel's Mystical Proverbs, viz: Ralph Sandiford—A Brief Examination of the practice of the times &c.,<sup>1</sup> and John Thompson—An Overture Presented to the Reverend Synod.<sup>2</sup> All other issues of his press during that year appear to have been ventures of his own. Neither the Mystische Sprueche, nor the Göttliche Liebes und Lobes Gethöne, bearing the Franklin imprint of 1730 are mentioned in his journal, consequently both were finished and paid for before Franklin began his business journal, July 4, 1730.

There is but a single original copy of the Mystische Sprueche known to exist. This was formerly in possession of Mr. Henry S. Heilman, of Lebanon, who lately sold it to a Philadelphia dealer for the sum of five hundred and fifty dollars. Several years prior to the above sale, the present writer secured photographic negatives of every page of this unique Franklin imprint, fourteen pages of which are reproduced in connection with this paper.

When Prior Jaebz sent this manuscript to Franklin, he also sent him one of the illuminated Manuscript Music Books. No trace of this book is now to be found in the Archives of the American Philosophical Society.

In the latter part of his introduction to this unique manuscript Rev. Peter Miller directly states that all of this music was composed by the "Father" (Conrad Beissel), and that in the whole book there is no musical error. Further that "The Masters of that Angelic Art will be Astonished to see therein a Man, destitute of all human Instruction [i. e., musical knowledge], came therein to the highest Pitch of Perfection, merely through his own Industry."

A careful perusal of this part of Rev. Miller's introduction will show that it substantiates and verifies the translations and statements in the paper on the "Ephrata Music" in Vol. XII of the Proceedings of the Pennsylvania-German Society and Sachse's "German Sectarians," Chapter VI., Vol. II.

As before stated Beissel's Ninty and Nine Mystical Proverbs are followed with 62 Poetische Gedichte (poetical poems) these Peter Miller did not translate but in their place added fifty-seven short, pithy, instructive sayings, selected from Beissel's writings, as these have never been published, they are printed here as a fitting conclusion to this paper.

NINETY NINE

MYSTICAL SENTENCES, PUBLISHED FOR THE SCHOLLARS OF DIVINE WISDOM BY THE REV:
FATHER CONRAD BEISSEL AND PRINTED AT PHILADA. BY B. FRANKLIN

ANNO 1730.

1. To know truly himself, is the highest Perfection: and to worship and adore right the only, everlasting and invisible God in Jesus Christ, is Life eternal.
2. All wickedness is Sin: yet is none so great, but to be separated from God.
3. Whosoever loveth God, is from God, and hath the unigenite Son remaining in himself, for the same did proceed from God.
4. The highest Wisdom, is, to have no Wisdom: yet is he the highest, which possesseth God, for He is alone Wise.

( 4 )

5. Alle wercke die ein mensch thut, bringen ihn an das ende, worzu sie geschehen, es sey um Gottes oder um sein selbst willen.

6. Baue Gott keinen tempel, auffser Jerusalem, damit du keinem fremden deine gabe bringest, und er dir auch lohne.

7. Trage kein feuer in einem hölzernen gefäß, damit es dich nicht verschre. Baue aber einen Altar von neuen steinen, und lege sein rauchwerck darauff, und laß es durchglüen von dem feuer der liebe Gottes, so wird ein lieblicher geruch aufsteigen vor seine heilige nasen.

8. Sey allezeit klein, und niedrig im hohen stande, und baue ja nicht übersich, ehe du die tiefen gemessen, du mögtest sonst über die maasz kommen, in deinem aufsteigen, und dein bau zerbrechen.

9. Und baue dir ja keinen stul in den Himmel, ehe du die erde zu deinem fusbanck hast; du mögtest sonst die erde für den Himmel erwählet haben.

10. Streite wieder nichts, daß dir zu mächtig ist, doch halte wache bey dir selbst, damit du nicht von deinem eigenen Hausgesindt ermordet werdest.

11. Baue dein Haus mit emsigkeit, und lege den grundt niederwerts, und setze es auf feulen; und wann du auf die höhe kommest, so wende fleiß an, daß du ein gut dach darüber deckest, damit du dich darunter verbergest, wanns trüb hergehet, und nicht verberben müßtest zur zeit der noth.

12. Bewahre dein hertz vor den nacht-dieben, doch sehe wohl zu daß der mittags-teuffel nicht mit seinen Engeln in deinen garten komme, und den weinstöcken die augen abbeissen, welches schlimmer, als wen die wilden schweyne hinein brechen, den dieselbige zerwühlen nur die erde.

13. Zur nacht wanns trüb und finster ist, so wende dein aug allezeit gegen aufgang, dann wann die sonne aufgehet, so verbergen sich alle wilde

5. All Works, which a man Worketh, bring him to that End, for which they are calculated, either for God's or his own Self's sake.

6. Build no Temple without Jerusalem, lest thou mightest offer thy Gifts to a Foreigner, and he also might reward thee.

7. Carry no Fire in a Wooden Vessel, lest it might burn thee but build an Alter from new Stones, and put thereon good Frankincence, and let the Fire of divine Love penetrate the same: then shall a pleasant Odour raise before his holy Nose.

8. Be always little and humble in a high Station, and raise not thy Building high, before thou hast measured the Depth, lest thou mightest in thy ascending come above the Measure, and thy Building be destroyed.

9. And build not for thyself a Seat in Heaven, before thou hast made the Earth thy Footstool: lest thou mightest have chosen the Earth for the Heaven.

10. Fight with nothing, which proves to mighty for thee: yet keep good watch with thyself, lest thou mightest be killed by thine own Domestiks.

11. Build thine House with Industry, and make its Foundation in the Depth, and let it be supported by Pillars: and when thou comest to the Roof thereof, study to make a good Covering, whereunder thou mayst hide thyself in Cloudy Seasons, and mightest not perish in Time of Distress.

12. Beware thine Heart against Night-Thieves, yet take good care, lest the Noon-Devil with his Angels might enter into thy Garden, and bite off the Eyes of thine Vines: which is worse, than when the wild Boars break in, for those only rout the Soil.

13. At Night-Time, when it is cloudy and dark, turn thy Eye continually towards Son-raising: for when the Sun raiseth, then wilde thiere, und verkriechen sich in ihre höhlen.

14. Und wann dir die sonne aufgegangen, so gehe an deine arbeit, und arbeite sehr emsig in deinem tagwerck fort, und wende dein aug sehr oft gegen auf und niedergang, damit du sehest wie weit der tag verlossen, auf das dir die sonne nicht untergehe und die nacht dich überfalle, ehe du dein tagwerck vollendet, und du müßtest hauffen auf dem feld bleiben, wann die thüre der Stadt verschlossen sind. So du aber dein tagwerck vollendet am liechten-tage, so gehe hin und helffe deinen brüdern; so wirst du eine Schöne wohnung im lande der lebendigen haben, und dein gewächs wird grünen und blühen zu seiner zeit, und wirst dich erkühlen am abend des tages, da dich keine sonne mehr stechen wird.

15. Sey nicht träge in deinem thun, damit du dein maatz erfülltest, es sey zum guten oder zum bösen, so wirstu desselbigen lohn empfahen; doch laß das beste allezeit das liebste sein.

16. Vertrau, noch vermuthe niemal das beste zu dir, damit dich dein feind nicht fahe mit deinem eigenen netz; dann niemand ist gur als der einige Gott.

17. Wer bey sich selbst weise ist, der ist ein narr, dann alle weißheit ist von Gott, und die ihn lieben ehren dieselbige.

18. Alles was der mensch thut, das bringet ihn zu demselbigen ende, worzu es geschiehet, es sey das leben, oder der todt. Darum, so laß keine wercke an dir gefunden werden, die den todt zu ihrem besitzer haben.

19. Nicht ist das grofs und hoch, wo man davor hält: Sondern das ist hoch zu achten, wo in der niedrigkeit des sohns Gottes ersunden wird.

20. Es sind weder höhen, noch tiefen gemessen, doch hat des beyde gcschen, wo wenig von ihm selber bält. Weir all wild Beasts hide themselves in their Holes.

14. And when the Sun raiseth to thee, go about thine own Business with Industry, and Labour in thy Task, and turn thy Eye often towards Sun raising and Setting, to see, how far the Day is passed away: lest the Sun might Set, and Night overcome thee, before thou hast finished thy Task, and thou art forced, to tarry the Night on the Fields, when the City-Gates were shut. But if thou hast finished thy Task with Day-Light: then go and help thine Brethren, and thou shalt have a fine Abode in the Land of Living, and thy Fruit shall be verdant and blossom at her proper Season, and thou shalt refresh thyself at the Evening of the Day, when the Sun shall scorch thee no more.

15. Be not lazy in thy Doings, that thou mayest fill thy Measure either in good or evil: yet prefer allways the best.

16. Never have a good Confidence to thy own self, lest thine Enemy might catch thee in thine own Net: for none is good but the only God.

17. Whosoever is wise with himself, is a Fool: for all Wisdom is from God, and all those, which love him, honour the same.

18. All actions of a Man bring him to the same End, for whose sake they are done, either for Life or Death: therefore let no Works be found on thee, whose Possessor is Death.

19. Not is he great and high, which is looked upon as flesh: but he is highly to be esteemed, which hath his Conversation in the Meekness of the Son of God.

20. Neither the Heights nor Depths are yet measured; but he hath seen both, which thinketh little of himself.

21. Weit ist der gereift, der nahe bey ihm selber ist, hoch ist der gestiegen, der allezeit in der tiefen wandelt.

22. Gehe richtig vor dich hin, nach Jerusalem, und sehe nicht hinder dich, dann in Babel sind die sprachen verwirret.

23. Sey richtig in deinem thun, und besuche dein Haus des nachts, damit du am tage könnest wandeln.

24. Hast du deinen saamen gesäet, so bringe ihn bey zeiren unter die erden, es mögten sonst die vögel des Himmels ihn auffressen, und du in der erndte müßtest mangel leiden.

25. Baue kein Haus außer deinem vatterlandt, und habe keinen wohn-platz, wo du nicht daheim bist; doch wohne allezeit in dem Tempel zu Jerusalem, so hast du eine sichere wohnung, denn daselbst verheißet der Herr friede seinen einwohnern, und ist selbst in der mitten.

26. Wer seinen gedanken nachfolget, der fehlet des rechten weges, und wer auf das geschrey der vögel achtet, der wird nimmer weiß.

27. Alle wercke des Herrn, sind löblich, bey den weisen, aber die narren wandeln im finsternus; wann ihnen schon eitel gutes wiederfähret.

28. Güte, und treu begegnen einander auf dem wege, wahrheit und gerechtigkeit küssen sich einander.

29. Wer auf den wind achter, der säet nicht, und wer um der kälte willen nicht pflüget, der erndtet nicht, und wer unnöthigen händeln nachgehet, muß verderben.

30. Wer fallen soll, der muß zuvor stehen, und wen der Herr aufrichten soll, der muß zuvor gefallen sein.

31. Der ist groß und hochgelehrt, der allezeit gem die niederste stelle vertritt.

32. Hast

21. Far hath he travelled, which is come to himself: and he raiseth himself very high, which hath his Conversation in the Depth.

22. Go strait forwards to Jerusalem, and do not look back: for in Babel are the Languages confused.

23. Be upright in thy Doings, and visit thine House at Night-Time, that thou mayest walk on the Day.

24. If thou hast showed thy Seed, bring the same in due Time under Ground; lest the Birds of Heaven will eat it up, and thou shalt suffer Famine in Harvest-Time.

25. Build not a House without thy native Country, neither have a Dwelling-Place, where thou art not at home: but dwell continually in the Temple at Jerusalem, then thou are sure in thy Habitation, for there the Lord promiseth Peace to his Inhabitants and is himself in their Midst.

26. Whosoever followeth his own Thoughts, misseth the true Way, and whosoever taketh Aside from the Singing of Birds, shall never grow wise.

27. All works of the Lord are commendable with the Wise: but the Fools walk in Darkness; altho' they richly are loaded with all Sorts of Goodness.

28. Benignity and Sincerity meet one another on the Way: Truth and Righteousness kiss one another.

29. Whosoever observeth the Wind, will not sow: and whosoever will not plough because of the cold Season, shall also not reap. And whosoever meddled with unnecessary Things, must perish.

30. No man can fall, except he stood before: and whom the Lord shall erect (lift up) must have been before fallen.

31. The same is great and high learned, which allways willingly occupieth the lowest Station.

( 7 )

32. Hast du deinen acker gebauer, und deinen saamen gesäet, so gib dich in ruh; doch nimm der zeit wohl wahr, damit du deinen saamen nicht im winter säest, wann die sonne keine krafft hat.

33. Laß frieden wohnen, in deinen thoren, und gerechtigkeit in deinen gängen, so wird keine plage zu deiner hütten sich nahen, und kein unglück wird dein Haus treffen.

34. Wer sich zu den gottlosen gefellet, der ist ein narr, und wer spötereiy liebet, der tödtet seine eigene seele.

35. Die frucht der weisen ist friede, und eintracht; aber nartheit wird gefunden, bey denen die den frieden hassen.

36. Die thore Jerusalems werden offen stehen, den kindern meines volcks, bis zur mitternacht, aber die heuchler werden müssen draussen bleiben, ob sie auch schon am lichten tage wandeln.

37. Wer sein Haus bauet mit anderer leut gut, der sämlet feuer, dasselbe zuverzehren.

38. Wer Gott diener, in einem fremden kleidt, dessen thorheit wird vor der gemeyne offenbahr werden.

39. Mein sohn, hüte dich vor diebstahl, damit du keinem andern das seine verprassest, und du selber dabey verderbest, laß aber deine seele satt werden, von deiner eigenen hände werck; so wirst du den segen empfangen von Gott dem allerhöchsten, dan geraubet und gestohlen gut gedeyet nicht.

40. Laß dich von niemand loben noch schelten, als nur von deinen eigenen wercken die in deiner seelen aufgebohren werden.

41. Greiff in kein fremdes Ampt, und mische dich nicht in fremde händel, sondern warte des deinen, damit du dein eigen tagwerck vollendest, und nimm dich stets dessen an, was dir befohlen, so wird endlich das gewächs deiner gerechtigkeit dir dienen

32. Hast thou cultivated thine Acre, and fitted him, then sow thereon thy Seed, and rest thyself: but take good Care of the Time, lest thou mayest Sow thy Seed in the Winter-Season, when the Sun hath no Strength.

33. Let Peace dwell in thy Gates, and Righteousness in thy Passes, then no Pleague shall approach to thy Tents, and no unluky Accident Shall touch thine House.

34. Whosoever associateth himself to the Wicked, is a Fool: and whosoever loveth Mockery, killeth his own Soul:

35. The Fruit of the Wise is Peace and Concord: but Folly is found there, where Men hate Peace.

36. The Gates of Jerusalem shall be open for the Children of my People until Midnight Time: but Hypocrites must remain without, altho' they walk at Day-Light.

37. Whosoever buildeth his own House with the Goods of others: gathereth Fire for its Destruction.

38. Whosoever worshipped God in a foreign Garment: his Folly shall be revealed before the whole Congregation.

39. My Son! beware of Thievery: lest thou mayest wast anothers Goods, which might tend to thine own Destruction: but let thy Soul be satiated of the Works of thine own Hand, then shall thou have blessing from the highest God; for stolen and robbed Goods will never prosper.

40. Let none praise or despise thee, but thine own Works, which were begotten in thy Soul.

41. Meddle not with a foreign Office, neither mix thyself with strange Business; but take care of thine own, that thou mayest finish thy Task; and take care of that, which is put to thy Charge, so shall at last the Growth of thine Righteousness serve thee in the Time of Necessity, and shall have Abundance in Time of Scarcity and Famine. But whosoever meddled with unnecessary Things, must perish.

42. Sey nicht doppelhertzig, noch zweyzüngicht, dan eine zweygabelichte zunge machet fürsten un- eins, und ein doppeltes Hertz verstört die, so gro- sen frieden haben, und hat selber nimmer keine ruh.

43. Höre allezeit lieber, dann daz du redest, dann die ohren des weisen mercken auf, aber des narren Hertz lieget auf seiner zungen.

44. Wer seine zunge bewahret der bewahret sein leben, darum sehe wohl zu, daz sie nicht dein Herr werde : und wo sie es ist ; so lege sie in stock, bis der Herr ihr gefängnus wendet ; alsdann werden der stummen zungen loblagen.

45. Eine sache mag so unschuldig sein als sie will, so soll man den überflus der worte meiden : soll also nie mehr worte machen, als was zur sache gehörer.

46. Ein weiser ist in dem allem geübt, und weiß, daz, wer wohl reden will, daz der erst wohl schwey- gen lernen musz.

47. Ein verständiger mercket zu erst, ehe er fra- get, ein narr aber bricht heraus, wie wasser in ein- em zerbrochenen damm.

48. Reden bringet ehre, und reden bringet auch schande, ein weiser weiß sich in beydes zu schick- en, und harret der zeit

49. Desgleichen auch, hat schweygen seine zeit, zur ehre und schande, der weise aber trifts, dann er wartet der zeit.

50. Die wercke des Herrn sind löblich, bey den einfältigen ; Die aber verkehrtes weges sind, müssen zu schanden werden.

42. Be not doubled-hearted, neither have a two-forked Tongue: for a two-forked Tongue sets Princes at Variance, and a double Heart destroyed such, which enjoy great Peace, and hath for itself never any Rest.

43. Be more prone to hear, than to talk: for the Ears of the Wise man attend to; but the Fool's Hearth lyeth on his Tongue.

44. He that guardeth his Tongue, guardeth his Life: therefore take good care, lest she might become thy Master; but if she is it already, put her into the Stocks, until the Lord changed her Captivity, then shall the Tongue of the Speechless give Praise.

45. Let a Thing be as innocent as ever it will: the Superfluity of Words must be avoided: therefore shall we never make more Words, than what belongeth to the Matter.

46. A Wise Man is in all this very exercised, and knoweth, that whosoever will speake well, must first learn well to be silent.

47. A Man of Understanding taketh first Notice of the Matter, before he asketh: but a Fool breaketh through like Water in a broken Dam.

48. To Speak bringeth Honour, and sometimes to speake bringeth Shame: a wise man knoweth to yield to both, and waiteth for the Time.

49. The Works of the Lord are praise-worthy with the innocent: but they which travell on perversed ways, shall be ashamed.

50. Also to be silent hath its Time, and sometimes inserves to Honour, sometimes to shame: but a wise man will hit the Mark in both, for he waiteth for the Time.

51. Whosoever despiseth Wisdom and the Rod, is unhappy: for his Works are lost, and his End is Death.

52. Wer sich zu seinem schöpfer kehret, und nicht recht, der wird mühe zu lohn, und wetter zur einernde bekommen.

53. Die weißheit ist ein schön ding, doch findet sie nicht viel liebhaber, dann sie ist keuseh.

54. Der mensch bricht viel lieber die Ehe mit eines andern weib, als daz er sich vergnügen läset, an dem weibe, daz ihm Gott zugefelle.

55. Kein hurer, noch Ehebrecher geht ein, ins reich der Himmeln, sondern nur die, so in der heiligen Ehe leben.

56. Kein einzeler wird das angesicht Gottes schauen, dann er lebet ihm selber, und bringet keine frucht. Wer aber in der heiligen Ehe stehet, der lebet ihm selber nicht, dann er suchet seinem weibe zu gefallen, dieweil er in ihr fruchtbar ist.

57. Wer ohne Ehe lebet, der ist gleich einem baum, der zwar blühet, und auch Schöne blätter hat, Aber bringet keine frucht.

58. Darum soll der mensch früh darzu thun, daz er sich eine ersehe, womit er könne in liebe pflegen, und also in ihr fruchtbar werde. Musz aber mit allem fleisz zusehen, daz er sich nicht verhänget an eine heftliche bauren-tochter, oder an eines armen bürgerers in der Stadt, allwo man sein brod mit saurer arbeit erwerben mus, sonst musz er ein knecht und schlaf sein, sein lebenlang, und musz zuletzt noch hüßen danck zu lohn haben.

59. Darum sehe dich um, nach einer schönen reichen, und Edelen, als die da ist von Adelichem gebürt, da darff man nicht hart arbeiten, um sein brod und kleyder, und kan leben in grossem friden und ergötzlichkeit an ihrer schöne, und ist von ihrem reichthum versorget, daz einem an nahrung nicht mangeln wird sein lebenlang.

60. Wann du aber erwachsen, und zu deinem vollen alter kommen, kinder zu zeugen, und hast

52. Whosoever converteth himself to his Maker, and not right: shall have pains for his Reward, and Tempests for his Harvest.

53. Wisdom is a fine Thing: yet hath she not many Courtiers, for she is chaste.

54. Men are more prone to commit Adultery with another's Wife: than to content themselves with that Wife, which God hath associated to them.

55. No adulterer neither whoremonger shall enter into the Kingdom of God; but only those, which live in holy Matrimony.

56. No single man shall see the Face of God, for he liveth for himself, and bringeth forth no Fruit: but whosoever liveth in holy Matrimony, liveth not for himself, for he studieth to please his Wife, for in her he fructified.

57. Whosoever liveth without Matrimony, is like a Tree, which blossometh, and hath fine Leaves: but beareth no Fruits.

58. Therefore shall we in early Time concern ourselves for one, which we may love, and also fructify in her. Yet must we take good Care, not to marry an ugly Farmer's or a poor Citizen's Daughter, where we must gain our Bread with hard Labour all our Life-time, and yet shall at last receive an evil Reward for all our Labour.

59. Therefore concern thyself for a fine, rich and noble one, which is of noble Blood: there thou needest not to work hard for thy Bread and Rayment; but canst live very contentedly, and canst rejoice thyself in her Beauty and provide thyself with her Riches, also that thou shalt not be in Want of thy Allowance for all thy Life.

60. But if thou art grown up, and arriv'd to the Years of Maturity, also that thou art fit to begot Children, and hast not yet die schöne und Edle noch nicht funden. So reise mit Jacob in deiner Mutter, Vatters-hauß, zu deiner Mutter Bruder, derselbe hat zwey tóchter, die eine heißet weiszheit, die andere thorheit. Die wirst du durch deinen harten dienst zu weibern erwerben, wiewohl dir nur die schöne als die weiszheit (oder Rahel) belieben wird, so wirst du doch zu erst der thorheit (oder Lea) müssen beyliegen, dann mit derselbigen wirst du erst fruchtbar werden. Aber sehe wohl zu, daß du den erst gebohrnen sohn nicht zum erben machest; dann er wird durch hochaufsteigen dein bett befudeln. Der zweyte und dritte ist auch nicht, dann sie werden durch gleißnerey lügen redener sein, und durch falschen schein zu mörder werden. Genes xxxv. v. 17, 25, 26. Juda, der ist, den werden seine Brüder loben. Zuletzt wird Joseph, der Sohn der weiszheit gebohren, Dieser ist Keusch, Züchtig, und Jungfräulich. Und wann du diesen hast, so mache dich auf, und zeuch nach deinem Vatterlandt; Dann Gott, der dich bisher gesegnet hat, wird mit dir sein auf deinem wege, und wird dir auch deinen erstgebohrnen Bruder unterthänig machen, damit du der erbe seyst und bleibest, immer und Ewiglich.

61. Habe deine Mutter in ehren, und vergiß nicht wie sauer du ihr worden bist, dann sie hat dich unter ihrem hertzen getragen, und vor dich gesorget, daß dir das loß auff's liebliche fiel, und hat dich zum erstgebohrnen sohn gemacht, auf daß dir ein gut erbe werde im lande der lebendigen.

62. Verlaß nicht das weib deiner Jugend, und hüte dich mit allem fleiß, daß dein Hertz keinem fremden weibe zufalle.

63. Der sonnen schein, halte allezeit höher dänn des monden schein. Doch sehe zu, daß du reine augen habest, daß dich das helle liecht nicht blende, und müßest hernach im tunkeln wandeln, und durch falschen schein verführet werden.

found that beautiful and noble Woman: then go with Jacob in the House of thy Mother's Father, to thy Mother's Brother, which hath two Daughters, the one called Wisdom, the other Folly. Those shall thou gain by thine hard Labour for Wives. But altho' the beautiful or Wisdom (:Rahel:) shall please thee, yet must thou lay by first with Foolishness or Lea; for with her shalt thou fructify: Yet must thou take good Care, not to make the first-born Son thy Heir, for he shall through Self-Elevation stain thy Bed. Neither is it the second or the third: for Instruments of Cruelty were found in their Habitations Gen: 49-5. But Judah is it, whom his Brethren shall praise. At last will be born Joseph, the Son of Wisdom: the same is chaste and virginal: and if thou hast acquired him, go on thy Journey to thy native Country. For God, which hath blessed thee hitherto, shall be with thee on the way, and shall also make subject unto thee thy first-born Brother, that thou mayest be the Heir for Ever.

61. Honour thy Mother, and forget not her Travells about thee: for she carried thee under her Heart, and took Care for thee, that the Lines fell unto thee in pleasant Places, and hath made thee a first-born Son, that thou mightest have a good Portion in the Land of the living.

62. Forsake not the Wife of thy Youth, and be carefull, lest thy Heart might adhere to a foreign Woman.

63. Thou shalt allways prefer the Shine of the Sun before the Shine of the Moon: yet take Care, that thy Eyes be pure, lest the clear Light might dazle the same, also that afterwards thou must travell in Darkness, and be deceived by a false Shine.

64. Darum sehe wohl zu, daß du keinem weib<sup>e</sup> zufaltest in dem lande da dich deine Mutter gebohren hat, damit du keinet aus-landischen deinen saamen gebest, und also deiu gesegnetes loß, und ertheil gemeyn machest.

65. Wann du siehest die sonne untergehen, so sehe ihr nicht nach, daß sie soll von da wieder kommen, sonst ergreiffet dich die finsternus, dann dieselbe folget allezeit dem licht nach. Kehre aber um, und wende dein angesicht gegen Aufgang; so wird dich ihr helles licht wiederum umgeben, und wirst erquicket werden mit einem lieblichen Morgen-thau.

66. Dem blinden stell kein licht vor, und bey dem dauben mache nicht viel wort. Dann die kosten sind umsonst, und die mühe ist verlohren. Doch setze iam auch keinen anstoz, damit du nicht, um seynet willen müßtest schuld tragen.

67. Der Herr ist feind, allen doppelhertzigen und zweyseeligen, weh denen! die damit verstrickt sind, wie will es ihnen gehen auf den tag, wann Gott die seelen richten wird?

68. Das straffen der weisen thut wol, dem der es zu hertzen nimmet, aber das liebkosten des heuchlers, bringet würme und motten.

69. Die worte der weisen sind ein feuer, und brennen den spötter, bis in sein eingeweydt hinein. Aber das küßzen des heuchlers thut ihm wol.

70. An der frucht siehet man wie des baums gewartet ist, also siehet man einen Mann, an seinem wesen und thun, was er im sinn hat.

71. Lobe niemand in seinen wercken, vor dem ende und aufgang. Dann in dem todt und ende der wercke, siehet man, was einer vor ein Mann gewesen.

72. Der todt ist der sünden sold, darum sind alle wercke die vor dem todt hergehen, vorbatten des

64. Therefore have good Care, not to join with a Woman in the Country, where thy Mother hath begotten thee: lest thou mayest bestow thy seed upon a foreign on, and also make common thy blessed Lot and Portion.

65. If thou dost see the Sun setting, do not look after her, as if she would raise from thence again, or else Darkness will catch thee, for the same followeth allways the Light: but turn thy Face towards East, then shall her clear Light again surround thee, and thou shalt be refresh'd with a pleasant Morning-dew.

66. Before the blind put no Light, and with the deaf do not talk much, for the Costs are loss and the Pain for nothing: yet give them no Offense, lest a Guilt in his behalf might be laid upon thee.

67. The Lord hateth all, which have double Hearts and two Souls: wo unto them, which are insnared therewith! how will they fare at that Day, when Souls shall be judged by God.

68. The Reprovings of the Wise are acceptable with those, that take them to Heart: but the Flattery of the Hypocrite created nothing but Worms and Motts.

69. The Words of the Wise are a Fire, and burn the Morker to his very Bowels: but the Kissing of the Hypocrite doth please him.

70. By the Fruit is to be seen, how the Tree was tended: also is a man known by his Behaviour, what is his Intention.

71. Praise nobody in his Deeds before the End: for in the Death and End of the Works it appeareth, what a Man he was.

72. The Death is the Wages of Sin: therefore are all Works, which precede Death, foretellers of the same; but they, which totdes, und die nach dem todt folgen, Zeigen an, dasz ein neues leben gebohren.

73. Wol denen, die um der gerechtigkeit willen leyden, die sterben einen seeligen todes, denn der todt der heiligen, ist theuer geachtet.

74. Darum sehe zu, dasz du eines seeligen todes sterbest, dann alle wercke vor dem todt, sind eine ursach, zu einem seeligen, oder zu cinem unseeligen todt.

75. Wir empfahen, was unfere thaten werth sind, sagt der mörder: Wol dem, der sich nicht selber rechtfertiget, der kan eines seeligen todes sterben.

76. Wer sein leben lieb hat, der wirds verlieren, und wer es verlieret, der wirds finden.

77. Der spötter und heuchler muß viel leiden, dann er will zwey leben zugleich besitzen.

78. Todt und leben wohnen nicht zugleich in einem Hauß beysammen, dann wo das eine kommt, da geht das ander weg.

79. Darum, so nimm dir nicht vor, zwey Herren zugleich dienen, sie müßten dir zuletzt beyde übel lohnen.

80. So viel an dir ist, so diene Gott mit ganzem hertzen, oder du wirst nur ärger dardurch, und mußt zuletzt doppelte streiche leyden.

81. Wer Gott mit halbem hertzen dienet, der wird würme und motten zu lohn haben.

82. Alles was du thust, so gedencke an das ende und ausgang deiner wercke, so wirst du auch den anfang erkennen lernen.

83. In allen dingen wo du siehest, dasz dir Gott am ende nicht lohnen kan, so verlaß den anfang, so kommest du zu keinem bösen ende.

84. Ein jeglicher Herr, lohnet seinem knecht nach seinem dienst, darum sehe wohl zu, dasz keine werke an dir gefunden werden, die einen bösen lohn zugewarten haben.

85. Seelig

follow after Death, indicate, that a new Life is born.

73. Happy are those, this suffer for Righteousness sake, they dye a happy Death: for the Death of the Saints is very precious.

74. Therefore take good Care, to dye a happy Death: for all Works preceding Death, are a Cause of a happy or unhappy Death.

75. We receive the due Reward of our Deeds, saith the Murderer: happy is he, which doth not justify himself, for the same can dye a happy Death.

76. Whosoever loveth his Life, shall loose it; and whosoever loseth the same, shall find it.

77. The Mocker and Hypocrite must suffer much, for he wanted to possess two Lives at once.

78. Death and Life do not reside together at once in one House: for when the one cometh, the other goeth away.

79. Therefore do not propose to serve two Masters: for both might at last give thee evil Wages.

80. Strain all thy Faculty, to serve God from the whole Heart: or else thy Situation turns worster, and at last thou shall receive double Stripes.

81. Whosoever worshippeth God with a half Heart: the same shall have Worms and Motts for his Wages.

82. In all, what thou dost, consider the End and Issue of thy Works, so shalt thou also learn to know the Beginning thereof.

83. In all Things, of which thou knowest, that God at the End can not reward thee: leave also thee Beginning, then shalt thou not come to a bad End.

84. Every Master pays out his Servant according to his Merits: therefore take Heed, that no works might be found with thee, which have merited bad Wages.

( 13 )

85. Seelig ist, der in seinen wercken kein böses end zu gewarten hat.

86. Wol dem der ein gut gewissen hat, und verläset allen bösen anfang, so findet er ein gutes ende.

87. Darum verläse alle wercke, die Gott nicht zu ihrem anfang haben, dann in einer sachen wo Gott der anfang nicht ist, da kan er auch am ende nicht lohnen.

88. Und sehe zu, dasz du in deinen wercken dich nicht selber zum zweck habest, sonst verfehlest du des rechten weges, und bringest wohl deine wercke ans ende, aber dich selber nicht.

89. Sey nimmer müßig, sondern arbeite fleißig in deinem ruff, auf dasz du was zu geben hast dem dürfftigen

90. Vor allen dingen hüte dich, dasz du keinem andern umsonst sein brod abestest, es mögte ein hunger ins land kommen, und du müßtest es hernach theuer bezahlen.

91. Darum verlasz dich auf keines andern tisch, ob du es schon haben kanst. Dan der höchste vergelter der alles siehet, mögte dir es rechnen, und du mögtest alsdann nicht zubezahlen haben.

92. Liebe den schlaff nicht, auf dasz du nicht verarmest, dann ein schlaffer muß zuriffene kleyder tragen.

93. Darum, so sehe zu, dasz du stets des deinen wartest, und dein brod essest von deinem eigenen ackerbau. Und kleidest dich, von den heerden deiner schafe, und werdest warm von den fellen, deiner lämmer, und essest honig aus den felsen, und Milch und Butter von den zygen, und werdest fett von den Hämmeln und böcken, und also darfst weder kälte, noch sehne, noch hunger fürchten. Dan dein gantzes Hausz hat eine zwey sacho decke, und deine kammern sind voll alles voraths auf viel Jahr. Dasz du auch in der grofen theurung

85. Happy is he, which needeth not to expect in his Work a bad End.

86. Happy is he, which hath a good Conscience, and quitted every bad Beginning: also shall he find a good End.

87. Therefore leave all Works, which have God not for their Beginning: for in a Thing, wherein God is not the Beginning, he can also neither reward at the End.

88. And be carefull, not to have thy own self for a Scope in thy Works, for also thou missest the true way, and bringest thy Works to an End; but not thyself.

89. Be never idle; but work with Industry in thy Calling: that thou mayst have something to give to the needy.

90. In all Things take care, not to eat anothers Bread for naught: lest a Famine might come in the Country and thou must pay dear for it.

91. Therefore put not thy Thrust upon another's Table, altho thou canst have it: for the highest Recompenser, who doth see all Things, might put it on thy Account, and thou mightst then have nothing to pay for it.

92. Love not Sleep, lest thou might be impoverished: for a drowsy Fellow must wear Suits worn out.

93. Therefore take Heed, never to neglect thine own Business, and to eat Bread of thine own Farm; that thou mayst cloth thyself from the Herds of thy Sheep, and growest warm from the Skins of thy Lambkins, and mayst eat Honey from the Rock, and Milk and Butter from thy Goats, and growest fat from the Rams and he-goats: and needest not to fear neither cold nor Snow or Hunger. For all thy House hath double Coverings, and thy Chambers are filled with Provisions for many Years, which shall ung und hungers-noth wirst genug haben.

94. Sey auch kein Schlemmer und Praßler, damit du das deine nicht im wohlstand verzehrest, und hernach in der noth, müßest mangel leiden.

95. Theile dein brod dem hungerigen, und wo du einen nacket siehest so kleyde ihn. So wirst du einen schatz sammeln in der noth, und einen vorath auf viel Jahr

96. Sey nicht weise, hey dir selbst, ehe du den weg der thorheit durchwandelst hast Du mögtest sonst die thorheit vor weisheit besitzen.

97. Und traue dir selber nigs gutes zu, bis du in deinen besten wercken bist zu schanden worden. Dann niemand ist gut, dann der einige Gott.

98. Streige ja nicht übersich, ehe du die tiefen gemessen, du mögtest, sonst in deinem aufstiegen zu hoch kommen, und ein anderer müsse dich stürzen.

99. Klein und gering sein, in seinen eigenen augen. Das ist der sieg in Gottes-krafft.

APPENDIX TO PETER MILLER'S MANUSCRIPT

TO THE AFOREGOING SENTENCES, CONTAINING A COLLECTION OF APOPTHEGMS TAKEN FROM THE FATHER'S WRITINGS.

1. Be still and retire within thyself. In all Things, which thou undertakest to do: let not move thee from any Thing; except which bringeth thee from the quiet Chamber of thine own Essentiality. For from the stillness of Zion proceedeth the Brightness of God: therefore be allways still, and attend to what the Lord Speaketh within thee.

2. In all thy Doings carry thyself as poor and a Possessor of nothing in this World, which by the Providence of God can be every Hour transposed into an utter Dereliction on God, Angels and Men, O what a happy Gain! when a Heart is emptied from the Comfort of all Creatures, and O! what Gladness & Comfort will it cause on the Day of the happy Eternity both on God and his Grace.

3. If thou art mournfull, then be joyfull with the houfull: and when thou art hoyfull, then be mournfull with the Mournfull, lest thou mayst in an unbecoming Manner cumber others with thy Burdens. Assist them, which were in Distress, and be merciful towards the helpless. Comfort them, which were dejected, and help the afflicted: so as thou wishest God to be toward thee, be thou towards others.

4. Despise not those, which are in Favour with God, and love not, which are by him hated. Let not thy Vessel be moved from the Winds of thine own Thoughts: but when it is calm stretch out thy Sails. When thy Time is over, Sleep: and when thou awaked, look about after the fine Day-Spring.

5. In dark Times be bold and magnanimous: Prosperity be afraid: if it goes mediocriter, be thou the same. In glad Days be mournfull: in Prosperity Sorrowfull: if it goeth after thy Wishes, mourn for it. And in all this have no other Concern: but that thou mayst not neglect the Sufferings, which God hath ordained for thy Salvation, as long thou livest on Earth.

6. Be of low mind, and cloth thyself not into a strange Form, lest thou mightest be puffed up by something, which thou art not. Also mind not, what thou art thyself, lest thou mayst abuse another's Goods: therefore be emptied both of what thou and others are, for an emptied Mind is a Tabernacle of God, and a possessor of Nothing is His Property.

7. Cloth thyself in White, and have no Blood-coloured Garment, except what clotheth thee for the Cross (:the Purple-Cloak of Christ:) What hath in itself no remaining Substance, tell not to others. Thou shalt not lie neither against God nor Men; but study both to talk, and to keep Silence well, then shall thou be acceptable both before God & Men.

8. Thou shalt not rest securely in thine own Station. The more thou thinkest to be safe, the more dubious thou shalt be thereon, especially when thou art not yet returned from weeping, for it is written: He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious Seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his Sheaves with him Ps: 126-6. O how many dangerous Irregularities are found in our well-meaning contentedness with our own-Self. Therefore, if thou will be sure, entertain a continual Disagreement with thyself: yet have the most Confidence unto God and thy Nighbour and the last of thy self.

9. Whosoever concerned himself for thee in thy Distress, for him shalt thou concern thyself in his Wellfare. If thou dost prosper, bewail thyself: if Things do ill with thee, be glad. Carry no Burdens, which are heavier, than thou art, or else thou shalt have no Wages for thy Labour, and shalt besides forget thyself, and neglect that, which is the most necessary. Only carry thyself well, and thou hast worked well.

10. Thou shalt in all thine Words and Deeds have no other Will and Intention, but to make thine Nighbor happy, and to be unto him useful and edifying: and thou shalt between him and thee neither be his or thine own Judge, lest thou mayst pass Judgment for him too severe and for thee too Mild.

11. Thou shalt in all thy Life meddle with nothing else; but to love the only God from thy whole Heart, above all Visible and invisible & Created Things. And if this seemeth to thee too tedious: then spend thy Time in such Things, wherein thou canst be to thy Nighbour usefull and edifying. But thine own Things do also, that thou mayst be clear in thy Conscience at the Day of Judgment.

11. Be not over-happy in passing Judgment over that, which is good or evil, before thou hast known anothers Scope, and the Issue thereof: for perhaps the one hath with an imperfect Thing a good, and the other with a perfect Thing a bad Intention. Therefore be carefull at all, not to imbarke into another's Affairs, whereby thine own suffereth Detriment.

12. Be never idle, watch, contemplate and meditate, who governs thy Doings: whether it be the chastising Spirit of God, or thine own perverse Nature. Besides this be easy, and meditate only such Things, which transcend thy Comprehension: then shall thou be qualified to receive advises from God, & sinnest not.

13. Be peacable in all Things: art thou despised, content thyself therewith, thou art safe: art thou put in Eminence, suffer it as a Malefactor, and watch thyself narrowly. Whosoever hateth thee, for him make Attonement: bear him, which loveth thee, and of him, which prayeth thee, hold mediocriter.

14. Be not against any Person, except thy own self: for thou canst bear this, without hurting another. Whosoever is not against thee, against him thou shalt be neither. And if any is thy Adversary: him shalt thou love, like thyself, and thank him, for he laboureth for thee gratis. Him, which is concerned for thee, thou shalt neither praise nor revile, for thou hast from both no Reward.

15. Rejoice at thy God; rejoice at his Love; rejoice, that he is so marvellous in his holy Councils; rejoice, that he hath so marvellously forseen thee to everlasting Salvation; rejoice at that great Work of Grace in the new Covenant; rejoice that a naked

Jesus, nailed on the Cross hath acquired for thee such a high Warfare to thy own Salvation: and therefore be glad at all Times.

16. Not a better Proof have we of the Way to God, but this, viz: if one gets rid of himself: for as much a man possesseth himself, as much is he an Evildoer, and hath an unlawful Property, & can therefore not escape being punished. And therefore so far as a man is emptied from himself, so far is he free from Sin, & so far he is free from Sin, so far beginneth he to love God.

17. Before all Things be watchfull not to loose the Love of the holy Being of God, when thy Nighbour, Brother or Friend Sinneth against thee: and, what is the most, beware of that Sin carefully, of which the Good is the Cause; for this Sin is the Pleauge, which spoileth at Noon-Time, because we think to render God thereby a Service. In all Winds and Storms sit thou calmly in thy Hut, and Think on God.

18. If thou wanted to be sure of thy Salvation, it will be necessary to raise sometimes within thee a Doubt and Mistrust against that good, which thou hast acquired by thy Conversion, viz: whether it is deriv'd from Grace or thy own own Natural Property, and if thou findest, that thy Good is too much mixed with Nature: thou owest yet God a Conversion; therefore take heed not to be too careless in thy Life.

19. Love to be in a low Station: yet be not alone low, but also upright; lest thou mightst fall into Hypocrisy. For as it is necessary for thee, to be low-minded, even so shall thou learn therein to boast upon thy Greatness, or else robbest thou God of His own.

20. Do not neglect the Time of thy Youth: that thou mayst recommend thy Age unto God. Thou shalt neither mourn or rejoice at any Thing, which hath in itself no Cause for Life eternal. If thou art distressed, then remember the Vanity of this and the Joy of the Life to come: and be for nothing more concern'd; but that thou mayst possess thy Soul with God in Peace.

21. Be neither a Glutton, nor luxuriant: thou shalt neither in temporal or Spiritual Things elevate thyself, lest thou mightest appear in another Form, than thou art, and might afterwards at another Time be humbled. A Greater Perfection is not, but not to appear in a strange Shape: yet must Holiness have a Covering.

22. If thou art in Sufferings, and art Sorrowfull in thy Soul, then take Care, not to burden therewith thine Nighbour, neither in Words, nor Deeds or Gestures, or else thou robbest thine own Crown: for in as much as thou disburdenest thyself from Sufferings, thou deprivest thyself of the Crown of Life eternal. And when thou cumberest therewith thy Nighbour, and he beareth the same willingly, he will gain that, what thou loolest.

23. If thou prayest, be free from all Images, and empty thyself from all created Things. Thou shalt not pray for any Thing, which thou canst comprehend with thine own Thoughts, or else thou adorest the Creature, and not the Creator. But will those truly pray, then shall thou penetrate with thy will without the World and Time: for also shalt thou come to the Godly Magia, where thou will find all, for which thou hast prayed. And hast thou attained to the Will of God, then thy Petition is granted.

24. If thou will find the way to Wisdom: then meddle meerly with such Things, which thou understandest not. And from what thou understandest not, thou shalt not speake: and if thou understandest the same, yet esteem the matter itself higher, than that, what thou understandest thereof.

25. If thou wilt please God, dis-please thyself in all thy Doings and levell all thy Designs against thine own Inclination: and believe of God only such Things, which are against thee. What thou likest, on the same shalt thou die, lest thou mightst change Death into Life, and Life into Death. Make a Doubt of thine own Doings whether right, and of thine Nighbours Doings, whether wrong, and thou shalt please God.

26. Build not thine House with Sins, neither thine Apartments with unrighteousness. Paint not thyself white with another Man's Blackness, neither cloth thyself in another's Beauty. In all Things let thy Soul be satiated of thine own Works, whether they be good or bad, and according to them thou shalt be rewarded.

27. In all thine Adversities be easy, and have no Thoughts, lest thou mightest Sin against God. If thou farest wall, remember God, and be carefull, not to forget him. Neither shalt thou esteem any Thing for thy Best, unless thou sufferest thereof Sorrow of thine Soul: nor hold any Thing evil, except thou hast suffered thereon Dammage in thy Salvation, or in the Hope to God.

28. Have no other Thoughts of thy own Self; but that thou art against God, neither have any other Thoughts of God; but that he is against thee: Yet shall thou think of God nothing, but what is good, and suspect of thy own Self all Evil, and therefore have a Dislike on thyself, and esteem greatly what commeth from God, Also shalt thou please God, and hast fought a good Battle.

29. Be not envious or uncharitable against thy Nighbour, Brother or Friend: for an envious Heart is bound with Ropes of the Hell, and can not reach future Comfort, and an uncharitable Heart is separated from God and his Communion. Therefore take Care, that thy Light be not extinguished, and thou must travell in Darkness.

30. Be friendly to all Mankind, without Assimilating thyself to the World, and Communicate not with the Sins of others. Thou shalt wrong nobody on thy Side with thy Doings, neither cumber any with thy Burdens. Him, that wrongeth thee, recompence with Kindness, and pray for him, which aggravateth thee: and therefore be in thy whole Life edifying both to Friends and Enemies.

31. Fight against nothing, which proves too mighty for thee: neither shalt thou oppose that, which is lesser than thou; but thou shalt like to be least. Thou shalt act in no Thing, as thou thinkest to be right: but shalt observe, what is right before God, altho' thou hast a different notion thereof, for it is written: that the Imaginations of the Thoughts of Man's Heart are only evil continually Gen: 6-5.

32. Whosoever watched well over himself, ought to be praised: and whosoever can quit himself, is honourable. Whosoever forgets himself, is rich: and whosoever will loose himself, shall be found again in God.

33. Be with all thy Heart concern'd for thy everlasting Salvation, and let the Days of the longanimous Visitation of God not pass by in vain. O! what a Treasure canst thou gather, when thou layest hold on Life eternal, and dischargest all Cares and Sorrows of this World.

34. Be not a Backbiter among thy People, or else thou shalt not ascend to the Mountain of God. Before all Things love Sincerity and Truth from thy Heart, and have not a two-forked Tongue: for also shalt thou be assimilated to God and his Image. Neither talk nor think an Evil against another: or else thou art the same, what thou talkest or thinkest. For whosoever is evil, thinketh Evil: and whosoever is good, thinketh good.

35. Love all Men without Difference; but let the Saints, which are acceptable before God, bestow upon thee as much Love, as they have, also thou be acceptable before God, and Men shall honour thee, And take good Care, not to refuse the Love of the Saints, or by hurting them to make them cry to God because of their Love. But the Wicked and refractory thou shalt love.

36. Carry no Burdens on the Sabbath-day: but when God resteth within thee, thou shalt also rest within him. And when, God worketh within thee, thou shalt also work within him.

37. A solitary Life, which is separated from the World and Creatures, ought to be thy greatest Treasure: for we can easily forfeit our Fortune in this World. Whosoever doeth so, as he is from his Nativity, is already in his Place: therefore shall Man learn to know himself and his Creator, and what the Grace of the new Covenant is.

38. Take Heed, not to allow thine own Productions a free Course to bring thee to their intended End, or else thou shalt gather a great Heap of Fire-wood, which will make thee hot at that great Day. But if thou wantest to be sure, be suffering and dying in all thy Doings, that of thy Doings might remain nothing, of which thou canst not take an Advantage at the Day of Eternity, For all, what we gather here, we must spend there, be it good or bad.

39. Have not a precipitant Anger, and be zealous for nothing, but what can again attone thy Zeal, i. e. the Love to the holy Being of God. Whosoever disjoined himself from thee, him shalt thou maintain, and wait for him, under the Patience of God, to his own Reconciliation, that he might not perish on the Day of Judgment. For the Love hath the Shield of everlasting Salvation.

40. Talk nothing without Faith, in order to fructify on that great Harvest-day; for it is written: that men must give an Account from every vain Word. Hear not that, what thou darest not to say: and what thou dost not like to hear, thou shalt not tell it to another. In all thy Doings regulate thyself after thy Nighbour's temporal and eternal Welfare, and thou shalt live.

41. Be mercifull, and have Compassion with the distressed: remember in all thy Doings, what a Reward thou hast to expect for thy Labour. Judge no man, before thou knowest his Thoughts, perhaps hath he a good Intention: therefore take care, not to condemn an innocent.

42. Hate not neither thy Nighbour, Brother or Friend, and take Care not to wrong the Elects of God, for they are his Orphans, and their Supplications ascend through the Clouds before him, which helpeth them and therefore despise them not.

43. Whosoever acted prudently with his Tongue, is a wise Man; but which followeth his own Thoughts, is a Fool, whosoever taketh too much Care of himself, shall loose his Soul: but whosoever neglected himself, shall find himself again in God.

44. In all thy Life concern thyself for a good End, because all our Works shall be brought before the Judgment of God, let them be good or bad. Therefore love only such Things, from which thou canst expect a Benefit at the Day of Judgment. And let all, what increaseth not thy Harvest on the Day of Eternity, pass by, then art thou safe.

45. In affliction of thy Soul let thine Heart rejoice: but when thou hast Gladness, then are Sorrowful for the Life to come. Thou shalt neither want, nor know or desire any Thing of God; but shall allways think; I understand not, neither do I know, what is good, because I am not yet a Child. For these know alone, what the Father wanted: and when they, being hungry, ask from him Bread, he will not give them a stone.

46. Be not wise with thyself, and have no other Thoughts of thyself, but such as thou art thyself: that thou mightst not sustain a Loss. In wellfare, and when thou hast a good Cause, think little of thyself: but when thou art low and despised, then boast upon thy Greatness.

47. Be carefull and solicitous in all Things: and meditate only about such matters, which appertain to thy Salvation & Peace. Forget all Things and thyself: then shalt thou get clear from vain transitory Things, and shalt be taken up from God and the incomprehensible Eternity. All what we do and work out, is deficient: but what do not work, is of great Value, and remaineth for Ever.

48. Thou shalt do neither Good nor Evil for thy own Ease: but die, that thou with a clear Conscience mightest live, and live, that thou with a clear Conscience mightest die: For whosoever doth any Thing for his own Ease, is in that, what he doth, not in the Communion of the Son of God.

49. Never reprimand thy Nighbour, Friend or Brother about any Thing except thou canst answer for his Defects, and atone him before God: or else instead of reforming him, thou lodest him with heavier Burdens, also that his Debts and Burdens grow heavier than his Defects. Therefore be carefull, never to talk or think any Thing from thy Nighbour Brother or Friend without Love and Mercy.

50. Love not the Sleep, lest thou mightst impoverish thyself: neither be too precipitate in thy Running, lest thou mayst neglect any Thing. In all Things, which thou takest in Hand, make thereof the Beginning so, as thou wishest to have the end. Happy is he, which in all his Doings hath not to expect a bad End. Therefore take Care in all Things, not to make a bad Beginning, then shalt thou come to a good End.

51. Thou shalt not leave the right way for the sake of others: neither shalt thou because of the great Multitude of them, which are Wicked, let the Love of God grow cool within thee. Nothing shall disturb thee, to recede from the true Way: and if the Sins and Iniquities of others over-whelm thee, be not disturb'd, but make thereof Advantage to thy own Reformation.

52. Let none reprove thee, but thine own Evil, and reprove thou nobody, except thine own Folly. Fly both from the Praising of the Wicked, and from the Reproach of the Pious. Neither shalt thou do any Thing either for temporal Honour's or Profits' sake: but study alone to please God, that thou mightst live for Ever.

53. Happy is the Man, which in his Calling soon becometh poor both in Body and Spirit: in all Things, which we do besides this, appeareth not the Image of God, but our own; but by Poverty and Nakedness a man is free'd from all adherence to himself. For every Man hath within himself a Selfishness, from which, if he is not free'd, he can not see the Face of God.

54. There is no other Sin, but to live without the Nature of God; it is written of Abraham: he kept my Laws and Statutes. God is longanimous, merciful and friendly, and possesseth himself not: and thou shalt neither possess thyself, nor have any Property, if thou wantest to be found within him. God is righteous, and therefore doth he never enter there, where we have yet something to loose.

55. Whosoever possesseth earthly Things, can not possess himself; and whosoever possesseth himself, can not possess God; and whosoever possesseth God, hath found his true Property. O how happy is he, which came home, and rested also on his Mother's Bosom. He hath travelled well, which left his own ugly Seat: and he sitteth well, which hath Feasted at all Times that, which is the most bitter.

56. Thou shalt value thyself neither too high, nor too low: neither shalt thou in thy Judgment too much exact or suppress thy Neighbour, that also (to his Character) both something better or lesser might be added without perceptible Alteration. If thou appearest to thyself much despised then have great Regard for thyself; and if thou seemest to thyself to be honourable, then humiliate thyself.

57. I know for the Future no other Labour, but to rest & to bear the Work of God: if in former Times I hath not paid too much Regard for myself, and instead of that exercised myself more in quitting myself, I might have obtained that Peace, which my Heart sought for. But now my Nullity is publicly revealed: God have Mercy upon me, that I may Succeed.

AMEN.

THE WAYSIDE INNS ON THE LANCASTER ROADSIDE.

IN provincial or colonial days the most important institution in our commonwealth, next to the church and school-house, was the wayside inn. Scattered as they were along the roadside throughout the province they were important beacons for the weary traveller, as well as a haven of rest and refreshment for the sojourner, whether farmer, drover, teamster or traveller upon business or pleasure bent. Many of these taverns or inns became important landmarks in both our social and political history, growing in the course of years from the lowly log tavern, to the stately stone turnpike inn of later years, in which important social functions were held. In many instances they were also polling places, and the meeting place of Masonic Lodges and similar organizations. Some also were favorite places for mass meetings and political rallies, where the candidates held forth, occasions upon which the barrel of hard cider was ever in evidence to slake the thirst of the prospective voter.

Many of these wayside inns in Pennsylvania became known throughout the land for their good cheer, cleanliness and hospitality. The hosts or landlords of these houses of the better class were almost invariably Germans or Pennsylvania-Germans, and the culinary department was supervised by the wife of the innkeeper.

Everyone of these wives was a hausfrau in every sense of the word. Upon her devolved not alone the culinary department but the care and oversight of the whole establishment, except the bar, stable yard, and supervision of the hostlers and reception of the guests, which fell to her husband the landlord.

The meals at these inns, such as the Spread Eagle and Warren presided over by the Pennsylvania-German matron, as served were entirely different from the fare set out in the houses kept by other nationalities, for instance where in the other wayside inns, even of the better sort, regular fare consisted of fried ham, cornbeef and cabbage, mutton and beef stews and mush and molasses, bread half rye and corn meal, with occasional rump steak and cold meats, and tea. In these Pennsylvania-German inns we had such dishes as Kalbskopf (mock turtle) soup redolent with the odor of Madeira; Sauer braten a favorite dish of the Fatherland; Schmor braten (beef a la mode); Spanferkel (sucking pig stuffed and roasted); Kalbsbraten (roast veal filled); Hammelsbraten (roast mutton); Kuttelfleck (soused tripe spiced); Hinkel pie (chicken pot pie); Apfelklöse (apple dumplings); Bratwurst (sausage); applecake, coffee cake with its coating of butter, sugar and cinnamon, and many other dishes unknown to their English competitors.

To conduct one of these stands in turnpike days required quite as much executive ability as is required to manage one of the pretentious hostelries of the present day. The proprietors in many cases were men of intelligence and prominence in the community; even members of Congress and State Representatives are to be found among their number.

So closely were the lines drawn between the classes of the stage tavern and the wagoner, that no stage tavern would on any account permit a teamster to put up there for the night, for if it became known that a wagoner had stopped there it would be considered a lasting disgrace and would result in the loss of the better class of patrons.

From the earliest days in our history there were sharply defined lines in these wayside inns, as each class catered for special custom. Thus those of the better class were known as "stage stands," inns where the travelling public by stage stopped for refreshment, meals, and sometimes rest over night. Here also the relays were changed. Next in the scale came the "wagon stands," taverns patronized by wagoners or teamsters: here they "put up" for the night, feeding their tired teams, and in many cases sleeping upon a bag of hay upon the floor of the bar-room or barn. Another class were the "drove stands," where special accommodations were to be had by the drovers for their cattle, which were here watered, fed or pastured, until they were again upon the hoof towards their destination. Lastly, come the lowest class of the passing wayside inns, the "tap house," where the lowest class of the passing or resident public was catered to. These houses harbored such as none of the other classes would entertain. The chief income of these "tap houses" came from the sale of bad spirits or whiskey. They were invariably kept by Irishmen.

In olden times all distances between cities and places were computed from inn to inn. Thus by referring to any old provincial almanac, tables like this will be found.

Another feature of these old inns of the days gone by were their sign boards which swung and creaked in their yoke, high upon a mast or pole set in the roadside. These sign boards were all figurative and in some cases painted by artists of note. The cause for the figurative feature was twofold; first, they were more ornate and could be better understood by the two different nationalities which made up our population than signs lettered in either German or English. Thus, take for instance, "The Black Bear"; a representation of this animal was known at once to either German or Irishman, while the words "Black Bear" would have troubled the former, while the latter certainly never would have recognized his stopping place if the sign board bore the legend: "Der Schwartzze Bär." Secondly, but few of the teamsters or wagoners, irrespective of race, could read; nearly all had their orders to stop at certain houses, and they knew them by the sign board when they came to them. Then again, in some cases the name of the subject would be different in the High or Palatinate German dialect; thus, twelve miles from Philadelphia, there was a wagon stand upon whose sign board was painted a sorrel horse, and among the English-speaking teamsters the inn was known by that name; referring to a High German distance-table, we find it scheduled as "Braunes Pfed," the "Brown Horse." To the Palatinate wagoner, however, it was known as "Der Fuchs," "The Fox." This was not an isolated case, the inn often receiving a nickname which eventually found its way into the local distance tables.

Many of these signs were of a homely character, such as The Hat, The Boot, The Wagon, The Eagle, The Lion, The Cat, The Turk's Head, etc.

The drove stands usually had signs pertinent to their class of patrons, such as The Bull's Head, The Lamb, The Ram's Head, The Swan (black or white), etc.

The tap houses were known by such names as "The Jolly Irishman," "Fox Chase," "The Fiddler," "The Cat," etc.

The better class of inns or stage stands were usually named after popular heroes, such as "The King of Prussia," "St. George and the Dragon," "General Washington," "General Paoli," "Spread Eagle," and the "Indian Queen." The names were sometimes changed, owing to political changes; thus, one of the most noted taverns on the Lancaster roadside, the "Admiral Warren," after the Revolution had the coat on the figure of the sign board changed from red to blue, and henceforth it was "The General Warren," in honor of the hero of Bunker Hill. Similar cases are upon record where the head of "King George," after the struggle for Independence, was, by aid of the painter's brush, metamorphosed into "George Washington."

The highest development of the wayside inn was reached when the Lancaster turnpike became the chief highway and the model roadbed in the United States.

Pennsylvania merits unquestionably the praise of having contracted the first stone turnpike in this country. It led from Philadelphia to Lancaster, it was 62 miles long; was commenced in 1792, and finished in 1794, at an expense of $465,000, by a private company, and it became the pattern for all subsequent hard roads in this country.

Originally nine toll bars ("Schlagbaume") were erected between Philadelphia and Lancaster, at the following distances, beginning at two miles west of the Schuylkill, viz., 2, 5, 10, 20, 29½, 40, 49½, 58½, Witmer's Bridge.

The Lancaster turnpike replaced the old Conestoga or King's road, which connected Philadelphia with Lancaster, the chief inland city of Penn's colony.

The following is a copy of an old distance-table giving a list of the taverns and landmarks on the old Lancaster road or King's highway, which was the predecessor as it were of the turnpike:

It was the purpose of this series of papers* to give the history of some of these old public houses, landmarks as they were, both legendary and documentary, showing the developments from the earliest hostelry, the "Blue Ball," in Tredyffrin Township, Chester County, established half way between the Schuylkill river and Brandywine creek, when yet the pack-horse reigned supreme, to the multitude of public houses for the entertainment of man and beast, often so close together on the turnpike that several could be found within a mile.

How the roadside inns and taverns increased on the new road between Philadelphia and Lancaster upon the completion of the turnpike between these two points, owing to the great increase of travel, is best seen by a comparison of the above list of the King's or "Old" road with a list compiled by the writer and appended to this paper, where it will be seen that the number of roadside inns between the two cities had increased from fourteen on the old road to fifty and more on the turnpike.

In this list are given some of the names by which these landmarks were known to the German teamsters, drovers or travellers of that day.

The hard stone road, its white surface glistening in the sunlight, with its ever changing scene of life and activity, formed a picturesque and diversified panorama. In later days we have the Troy coach, swinging upon its leather springs, rolling along the hard road, drawn by four prancing horses; the Conestoga wagon with its broad tires; the slow-plodding six-horse team with tinkling yoke bells; the large droves of cattle being driven from the green pastures of Chester and Lancaster to the seaboard; the accommodation stage-wagon in contrast to the mail coach, and the farm wagon or "dearborn," with the farmer going to or from the city market; and many other features all contributed to this ever changing scene.

With the advent of the railroad with its iron horse the scene changed until within a few years the various turnpikes virtually became deserted highways, giving up to mere local travel—with road-bed neglected or abandoned until in some cases they became dangerous to travel.

While the wayside inns, once so important a landmark, gradually went out of existence, many of them struggling for some time as country boarding houses, or degenerating to the level of an ordinary country tavern, which in colonial times were places of importance, and now merely live in the traditions of the county, and vaguely in the memory of a few of a former generation still amongst us, it was to perpetuate such records and traditions that the writer gathered such as were available relating to the various hostelries as were, or had been on the Lancaster road and turnpike within the bounds of Chester County. These records, forming a series of papers, were published in the "Village Record" of Chester County during the "80's" of the last century.

The two following papers, "The Spread Eagle" and "The Warren" have been selected for republication in the PROCEEDINGS of the Pennsylvania-German Society, as these hostelries were strictly representative Pennsylvania-German houses, kept by the Siter and Fahnstock families respectively. These two houses, stage-stands of the first order, where "entertainment was dispensed for man and beast," had not only a local reputation for elegance, but a national one as well, during the former turnpike days, until supplanted by the state railroad from Philadelphia to Columbia about the year 1836.

What is true of the old Lancaster turnpike applies also to the roads leading out from Philadelphia to Bethlehem and the northeast, and to the road to Baltimore and the south; many of the hostelries on these roads were kept by Pennsylvania-Germans, or men of German birth.

Of late years, long after the following stories were written, a new factor appeared with the advent of the twentieth century, namely the horseless carriage, which has had an unexpected effect upon our old turnpikes, so sadly neglected for many years, and in certain localities abandoned as unfit for travel. The advent of this factor, with power derived from gasoline, electricity or denatured alcohol, brought about a demand for good roads. The agitation for safe roads spread over the land, and resulted in many delapidated and neglected turnpikes being again surfaced and put in good condition for safe and speedy travel; among these reconstructed roads there is none finer than the Lancaster Turnpike from Philadelphia, through what is known as the suburban district on the Pennsylvania main line; and it is now again, as it was when first built over a century ago, quoted as the model and specimen piece of road building, second to none in the state.

Whether this new condition of travel will eventually bring about the rehabilitation of any of our old colonial hostleries in a manner suitable to the needs of the twentieth century, or whether they will be supplanted by establishments like those at Bryn Mawr or Devon, remains to be seen.

In the meantime, these sketches of days gone by may prove of interest to the autoists, both male and female, as they gaily spin up or down the old highway, in a luxury and speed undreamed of by the old wagoner, teamster or stagers of a century ago.

NEAR THE SEVENTH MILE STONE, IN THE VILLAGE OF ARDMORE.
FROM AN OLD PHOTOGRAPH SHOWING A PUBLIC VENDUE.

IN the old distance tables published prior to the building of the Philadelphia and Lancaster Turnpike the distances are given from the court house formerly at Second and Market streets. This course was followed in the early days of the turnpike. The milestones on the turnpike, however, commence from the Schuylkill River. Consequently in the later distance tables the locations of the old landmarks appear to be two miles less than on the older tables, the two miles being the distance from the court house to the west bank of the Schuylkill.

The following list of inns on the Lancaster turnpike is based on notes made by the writer during the year 1886-1887, when most all of the photographs were taken.

Many of these old landmarks have been changed since that time; some remodeled for the use of wealthy suburban residents; others, half in ruin, are occupied by foreign laborers; some have been demolished, and a few have descended to the level of an ordinary country tavern.

In compiling this list every effort has been made to give the proper location of the various old wayside inns between Philadelphia and Lancaster.

Shortly after the turnpike and the permanent, or Market Street bridge, over the Schuylkill was completed, the stage coaches started on their journey from the corner of Eighth and Market streets.

The traveller after crossing the Market Street (permanent) bridge over the Schuylkill at Philadelphia, on his journey westward, first passed:

1. The Fish, on the west side of the Schuylkill, which was kept by the Boone family.
2. The Lamb Tavern, built and kept by John Elliot. The exact location of this old inn is not known.
3. The Rising Sun. This was in Blockley Township, about two and a half miles west of the bridge.
4. The Columbus Tavern, built in 1798, by Col. Edward Heston for his son Abraham. It stood on the turnpike in Blockley Township, just east of Meetinghouse Lane, the present 52d Street.
5. The White Lamb. Opposite the fourth mile stone near the present Wynnefield Avenue. This building is still standing.

In this vicinity, in later years there were several taverns of minor importance, which are not to be included in our list of the Wayside Inns. They were known as:

HUGHES TAVERN.

THE DURHAM OX.

LUDWICKS.

SHEEP DROVE YARD.

exact location be given with certainty at the present day.

6. The Flag Tavern. This was the first inn on the turnpike in Lower Merion Township, Montgomery County. The College of St. Charles Borromeo now covers part of the site. Near the fifth milestone.
7. The Black Horse Tavern. Also in lower Merion, Montgomery County, about four miles west of the river. It is said that the original Black Horse Inn was built on the old Lancaster road by a progenitor of the Wynne family. This is about one mile east of the old Friends Merion Meeting-house just over the city line.
8. The Three Tuns. In Lower Merion Township, Montgomery County, about two miles above Merion Meeting, seven miles from Philadelphia.
9. The Green Tree. In same township, about half a mile west of the Three Tuns.
10. The Red Lion. Also in Ardmore. This inn was for many years kept by the Litzenberg family. It is still kept at the present day as a saloon and tavern. It is about a quarter of a mile west of the seventh milestone.
11. The Seven Stars. In the village of Athensville, now Ardmore, also in Lower Merion, Montgomery County. Kept for many years by the Kugler family. It was upon the south side of the turnpike, near the seventh milestone.
12. The Prince of Wales. In Haverford Township, Delaware County. About half a mile west of Ardmore.
13. The Buck Tavern. On the south side of the turnpike, between Haverford and Bryn Mawr, in Haverford Township, Delaware County,  $\frac{1}{4}$  mile west of the eighth milestone, on the extreme verge of the county. This inn was a stage stand of the first order, and was renowned for its good cheer. It was kept for many years by the Miller family, and was appointed a post-tavern at an early day. In 1832 Jonathan Miller, the tavern keeper, was the post-master.

14. The Sorrel Horse. In Radnor Township, Delaware County.
15. The Plough. Also in Radnor township. In later years, after being remodeled, became the residence of a Philadelphia capitalist. The location is about eleven miles west of the Schuylkill.
16. The Unicorn. Also known as "Miles Tavern," after the family who kept it for many years. It was also known as the "Irish" Tavern. The location of this old hostelry was a short distance below the fourteenth milestone on the turnpike, where both the old road and turnpike cover the same ground.

[Note. These three taverns—the Sorrel Horse, Plough, and Unicorn—all appear as landmarks on the old Lancaster road. Also on the early distance tables of the turnpike this would lead to the inference that at least the Sorrel Horse and Plough were reopened on the pike.]

17. The Spread Eagle. Radnor Township, Delaware County, on the border of Chester County, a few rods above the fourteenth milestone on the turnpike. This was a stage stand of the first order, and renowned for its cleanliness and good cheer. It was a post tavern and relay station. For many years this inn was kept by the Siter family. The hamlet of eight or ten dwellings and shops that grew up around the old inn was known as Siterville. In 1832

Edward Siter was the postmaster. During the eighth decade of last century, the property was bought by the Drexel and Childs operation at Wayne and demolished.

18. The Lamb Tavern. The first inn on the turnpike in Chester County. It stood a short distance east of the fifteenth milestone, and was kept by the Lewis family. Many of the reminiscences of this vicinity were told the writer by George Lewis, then in his ninetieth year.
19. The Stage Tavern. On the hillside a little west of the fifteenth milestone. It was located upon what was claimed to be the highest point west of Philadelphia. Here the town of Glassly was laid out about the year 1800. The old inn was a wagon and drove stand, and was kept by the Beaumont family.
20. The Spring House. In the hollow, just east of Reeseville, now Berwyn. Kept for a time by a branch of the Kugler family. It was between the fifteenth and sixteenth milestones. In later years it was known as Peggy Dane's. The site is now covered by an artificial ice and cold storage plant.
21. The Drove Tavern. In Tedyffrin Township, Chester County, opposite the sixteenth milestone. It was kept by the Reese family, from which the settlement took its original name "Reeseville," now the flourishing town of Berwyn. The old signboard is now in the Pennsylvania Historical Society.
22. The Blue Ball. Prissy Robinson's, on the turnpike near the seventeenth milestone, now known as Daylesford. For years this old inn was kept by the notorious Prissy Robinson, who for years was a local character in this locality.
23. The Black Bear. For a time known as the Bull's

Head. This old inn stood on the south side of the turnpike where the road from Newtown Square to Howelville crosses the turnpike. It was a wagon and drove stand during the turnpike days and was torn down in 1877. The barn stood on the southwest corner of the road.

24. The General Jackson later The Franklin. On the north side of the turnpike at the eighteenth milestone. This old inn, still standing, was kept for years by a branch of the Evans family. Prior to the Antimasonic craze (1828-1832), the inn was known as a lodge stand, as a special room was set apart for society meetings, among which was "Farmer's Lodge, No. 183, Free and Accepted Masons," who met there from 1822 until about 1830. This inn is in Trydeffrin Township, Chester County.
25. The Paoli. Another of the celebrated stage stands on the eastern end of the turnpike. It was in Trydeffrin Township, Chester County, on the north side of the turnpike, just west of the eighteenth milestone. For many years it was kept by the Davis and later by the Evans family. It was the polling place for several townships, also the chief postoffice for this district. Samuel Davis was the postmaster in 1832. In later years the Paoli was used as a summer boarding house, presided over by Joshua Evans and Mrs. Davis. It was destroyed by fire some twenty odd years ago.
26. The Green Tree. Near the nineteenth milestone in Willistown Township, Chester County. This was a wagon stand in the early days. Its last boniface was Davis Gill, sheriff of the county. It was demolished in 1877 when the Pennsylvania Railroad was straightened.

27. The Warren Tavern [Admiral Vernon, Admiral Warren, General Warren]. In East Whiteland Township, Chester County, on the north slope of the South Valley Hill. It was near the twentieth milestone, and the first inn on the turnpike in the Great Chester Valley. It was one of the oldest inns west of Philadelphia, being on the King's Road in Provincial days, twenty-two miles west of the court house in Philadelphia. After the Revolution it was kept by a branch of the Fahnestock family from Ephrata, during whose régime its reputation was second to none in the state. In 1832 Charles Fahnestock was the postmaster. They were also the first innkeepers who refused to sell liquors on the Sabbath.
28. General Wayne. A wagon stand, near the twenty-second milestone, at the north side of the turnpike. On the inside of the barroom door the marks of the teamsters' whips could be seen, where, in former years, they tried their strength, and the cutting power of their whip lashes. This building is now used as a dwelling.
29. The Steamboat. On the north side of the turnpike, half a mile east of the twenty-fourth milestone. It is in West Whiteland Township, near the present Glen Lock Station on the Pennsylvania Railroad. At present writing the house is unoccupied and fallen into decay.
30. The Sheaf of Wheat [Sheaf—Barley Sheaf]. A wagon and drove stand near the twenty-sixth milestone.
31. The Ship Tavern. Near the twenty-seventh milestone in West Whiteland Township. Originally west of Downingtown, at a point where the Old Lancaster road and the new turnpike occupied the same ground. When the original ship was closed, the old sign was taken to the new location, and there for many years swung and creaked in its yoke by the roadside.

32. The General Washington. In East Caln Township, near the thirty-first milestone. Also known as Downings or the Stage office and on the old distance tables as Downing's Mill, thirty-three miles from the Philadelphia court house. This noted hostelry was at the eastern end of the village of Downingtown, on the north side of the turnpike at the junction of the Lionville road. This inn was the halfway station between Philadelphia and Lancaster, and occupied the same position on the successive roads between those two points. "Downings" was a "stage" stand of the first order. It is not known what effigy the signboard bore during provincial days. After the Revolution, however, it became known as the "General Washington," and the swinging sign portrayed the general and a civilian standing side by side. In early days this inn was also a postoffice. Isaac Downing was the postmaster in 1832. The building is now remodelled and used as a private residence.
33. The Halfway House. A wagon stand on the south side of the turnpike, a short distance west of "Downings." The site of this old inn is now occupied by several store buildings.
34. The Swan Tavern. Also in Downingtown. It is on the south side of the turnpike, a short distance west of the above two hostleries. The old Swan has of late been remodeled and is now the chief tavern and saloon in East Downingtown.

36. The Ship Tavern. The original Ship Tavern was on the south side of the turnpike in West Whiteland Township, Chester County, about one mile west of Downingtown, near the thirty-second milestone, at a point where the old Lancaster or Conestoga road and the new turnpike occupied the same ground. When the original tavern was closed, the old sign was taken to the new location, near the twenty-seventh milestone, where for many years it swung and creaked in its yoke by the roadside, perforated as it was by the bullet holes made by continental soldiers during the Revolution. The original building is still standing, being used as a summer residence. Thomas Parke was the proprietor during Revolutionary times, and later was acquired by the Edge family.
37. The Prussian Eagle. On the east bank of the West Branch of the Brandywine, in Valley Township, now the flourishing town of Coatesville. In 1860 the inn was kept by J. T. Minster, since which time it has been enlarged and is now known as the "Speakman House." It is west of the thirty-sixth milestone.
38. The Midway House. Formerly on the turnpike just beyond the West Branch of the Brandywine. It was just east of the thirty-seventh milestone. The inn took its name from the fact that it was just half way or midway between Philadelphia and Columbia, the original termini of the old state railroad. In 1860 it was kept by A. Bear. Henry Conroy was also a former innkeeper.
39. Hand's Pass. (The Cross Keys.) This old inn, a wagon stand, was so named after its location. It stood in what was in former days a wild and lonely spot on the hill side, then covered with heavy timber. It was near the thirty-eighth milestone. Tradition tells us that it received its name from the fact that General Hand had encamped there with a portion of Washington's army. The old hostelry was surrounded by a dense wood, and for some reason had an uncanny reputation, so much so that many teamsters avoided remaining there over night as much as possible. There were also a number of ghostly traditions current about this old inn during turnpike days.

40. The Rainbow Tavern. Between the thirty-eighth and thirty-ninth milestone. This was also a wagon and drove stand.
41. The Barley Sheaf. Noted on the distance table in Carey's Almanac for 1803 as being eight miles west of Downingtown. This would be near the thirty-ninth milestone.
42. The Washington Tavern. West of the fortieth milestone.
43. The States Arms (also United States Arms). This inn was in Sadsbury Township, on the north side of the turnpike, at the intersection with the road leading from the Conestoga and Pequea country to Wilmington. This inn, in the early years of the nineteenth century, was the last tavern in Chester County, where stages going west changed horses. The old inn was also known as a "lodge" stand, as here at the beginning of last century "Unity" Masonic Lodge, No. 80, held its meetings. It was between the fortieth and forty-first milestones.

45. The Black Horse Tavern. Near the forty-second milestone in West Sadsbury Township. This inn was also used as a postoffice. In 1832 Samuel Jackson was the postmaster. House now owned by John Wallace Boyd.
46. The General Wayne Tavern. At the forty-third milestone. At the close of the war of 1812 John Petit was the owner of the Wayne with fifty acres of land. Being beautifully situated a company was formed to lay out a town in 1814. Petit sold his tavern and farm to Abraham & Company for $16,000, whereon they laid out a town and called it "Moscow." The turnpike became Cossack street for the nonce, while parallel and cross streets were given Russian names. The plot was gotten up in fine style, but flourished only on paper. After the bubble bursted the tavern property became the celebrated Moscow Academy, for many years presided over by Rev. ——. Latta. The milestone in front of this house is the first giving the distance both ways, viz., 43 m. to P.; 19 m. to L.
47. The Cross Keys. A wagon stand near the forty-fourth milestone from Philadelphia, the eighteenth from Lancaster.
48. The Mount Vernon. In Sadsbury Township, Lancaster County, between the forty-fifth and forty-sixth milestones, a short distance west of the Chester

- County line. The inn is still kept as a licensed house, and stands at the intersection of the road leading from Christiana to Limeville.
49. Clemson Tavern. "The Continental." Formerly west of the forty-seventh milestone. This was also known as the "Gap Tavern." The house stood on the north and the barn on the south side of the tavern; and it was currently reported there was a tunnel leading from one to the other. It was the rendezvous of the notorious "Gap gang" broken up by the conviction of Amos Clemson, who died in prison, and others of its leaders.
50. The Rising Sun. Also known as "The Sign of the Rising Sun" and "The Sign of the Rising of the Sun." A tavern on the turnpike near the forty-eighth milestone at the crossing of the pike by the Newport road. The locality is still known as the Gap. The inn was a wagon stand for the teamster and wagoner. In 1801 it was kept by John Young, and for a time was the meeting place for a Masonic Lodge.
51. Slaymaker's Tavern. A noted stage stand and post house, on the north side of the turnpike between the forty-eighth and forty-ninth milestone. It was kept by a family from which it took its name. Amos Slaymaker was a member of the firm of Reeside & Slaymaker, who operated a line of stages on the turnpike before the time of railroads. In 1832 Wm. D. Slaymaker was the local postmaster.

This inn was a stage stand of the first order, and was the scene of many important gatherings, social, political and Masonic. The regular meetings of Lodge No. 43, F. & A. ### THE SPREAD EAGLE TAVERN NEAR THE 14TH MILESTONE

IN the extreme northwestern part of Radnor township, in Delaware county, on the Lancaster Turnpike, fourteen miles west of Philadelphia, formerly stood at the base, as it were, of the South Valley Hill, a large three-story stone building with porch and piazza extending along the entire front.

By the date stone, high up in the gable the wayfarer could still plainly see the year when the house was completed, the legend read "1796." This building, one of those monuments by which we may be able to trace the past, was formerly the justly celebrated "Spread Eagle Tavern," known far and wide to travellers from both continents; built, as the stone informs us, in the year following the one in which was completed the first link of what was to be the first great National highway to the West, and at the date of the building of the Inn connected Philadelphia, then the Capitol City of the United States, with Lancaster, the second important town of the Commonwealth, and it may here not be amiss to say that to Pennsylvania's private citizens who subscribed almost half a million dollars to complete this great work of internal improvement, belongs unquestionably the praise of having constructed the first stone turnpike in the Union.

The turnpike at this point for a short distance occupies the bed of the old Provincial or King road. The present building supplanted a small rude stone house, which was kept as a house of entertainment by one Adam Ramsower as early as 1769. The following year he petitioned to have his license renewed. In his petition to the Court August 28, 1770, he says: "Your Honors hath been pleased for these several years past to grant me your recommendation to the Governor for a license to keep a public house of entertainment," &c. Anthony Wayne appears as one of the subscribers to this petition.

The following year Ramsower advertised the place for sale as shown by the following advertisement in a Philadelphia newspaper:—

"TO BE SOLD

on Thursday the 26th of December instant A Valuable messuage, plantation and tract of land, situate in Radnor Township, Chester County adjoining the Lancaster road, Containing near 100 Acres of good land, about 16 miles from Philadelphia, about 70 acres are cleared and the remainder exceedingly well timbered about 14 acres of very good watered meadow, and an excelent Orchard that bears plentifully every year; the dwelling house is a large well finished stone building, and a well accustomed tavern, known by the name of the "Spread Eagle" and is well accommodated with a barn, stables, sheds, gardens &c a pump of good water near the door, with trough to water creatures. Any person inclining to purchase may come and view the premises before the day of Sale, at which time the Conditions of Sale will be made known by

"ADAM RAMSOWER."

(Pennsylvania Gazette, Dec. 19, 1771.)

The next official knowledge we have of the tavern is the following curious petition, together with the quaint "certificate of character" which accompanied it when handed into Court.

"To the Worshipful Justices of Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, held and Kept at Chester the 25th day of August, 1772:

"The petition of Jacob Hinkel of Said County, Humbly Sheweth:

"That your petitioner hath lately purchased the messuage and plantation where Adam Ramsower lately dwelt, situated in Radnor township, in said county, at which place a house of public entertainment hath been kept for a number of years past, known by the name of 'Spread Eagle;' your petitioner therefore prays that your honors will be pleased to grant him a recommend to his honor, the Governor, for a license to keep a public house of entertainment at the place aforesaid and your petition shall pray.

JACOB HINKEL."

"LANCASTER COUNTY SS.

"Whereas, Jacob Hinkel, tanner, the bearer hereof, who hath resided within the County for the term of 12 years, is now moving to Chester county with the intention to keep a house of public entertainment on the road leading from Philadelphia to Lancaster at the noted tavern of the 'Spread Eagle' and whereas, the said Jacob Hinkel did petition to us subscribing magistrates and other inhabitants of Lancaster county for a testimony of his character whilst he lived in the said county, and also for a recommendation to the magistrates of said county of Chester.

"This is therefore to certify that the said Jacob Hinkel whilst he lived in said county acted the parts of a true and honest member of the civil government, and as such by virtue of our underwritten names, we do heartily recommend him to the worshipful, the Judges of the Peace of the County of Chester, etc, etc.

EDWARD SHIPPEN,
EMANUEL CARPENTER,
JAMES CLEMSON,
and ten others,

Lancaster, the fourth day of August, 1772."

At the commencement of the Revolutionary period the house was known as the gathering place of the patriots of the vicinity, while "Miles" old tavern, a short distance below, which had been rechristened "The Unicorn" and was then kept by a loyal Irishman, was patronized by the citizens who were either Tory or Loyalists.

During the alternate occupation of this territory by the opposing forces 1777-8, the house became somewhat of a land mark, several reports and letters in reference to the military situation being dated at, or mentioning the "Spread Eagle" tavern. During the encampment of the American army at Valley Forge the inn for a time was used as an outpost, when the large chestnut tree on the West side of the Valley road, about fifty feet North of the present turnpike, was utilized as a signal station, or outlook for that picket; this tree still standing may easily be recognized on the road leading to the present railroad station; it also marks the boundary line between Delaware and Chester counties.

The inn continued in the possession of Jacob and Daniel Hinkel until 1778 and possibly until 1781, although no records are known to exist, stating who kept the house between those years. We know that one Alexander Clay was in charge, from 1787 until 1791, when Adam Siter appears, and he was followed by John Siter, during whose time the new house was built.

As soon as the turnpike was finished it at once became the main artery of travel between the East and West. As the line of the new road at some points deviated a considerable distance from the old provincial road many of the colonial inns which had been landmarks for a century became useless on account of their distance from the new turnpike, others which were still accessible did not come up to the needs or demands of the increased travel brought forth by the new state of affairs.

Of the numerous inns which were at once projected and built along the line of the new thoroughfare, the "Spread Eagle" Tavern was one of the largest as well as the most pretentious public houses between Philadelphia and Lancaster.

The first sign board of the tavern was supported by two tall masts planted on the south side of the road; and is said to have been painted by one of America's most distinguished artists. It was a representation of the outspread American eagle as depicted on the silver dollar of that date with the shield of the Union on its breast, the wings extended, and grasping in one talon the arrows of war, while in the other the olive branch of peace; a blue scroll in his beak with the emblazoned legend "E Pluribus Unum" and thirteen stars for an event completed the gorgeous sign of the new candidate for the patronage of the traveling public.

Shortly after Martin Slough's successful attempt in 1795 to run a four-horse stage between Philadelphia and Lancaster, stage coach lines continued to increase on the new road, and the Spread Eagle at once sprang into popularity with the traveling public, as well as with the "wagoners" and "teamers"; for at that early day the furnishings and cuisine of the hostelry were probably unsurpassed in the State. It is said that during the summer and fall of 1798 when the Capitol city was again visited by the yellow fever scourge, our inn was crowded with members of the Government, as well as attaches of the accredited representatives of the foreign powers in Philadelphia.

It was not long before quite a hamlet grew up in the vicinity of the busy inn, besides the usual blacksmith and wheelwright shops, livery stable, barns and other out-buildings attendant to an inn of the first rank. There was a flourishing saddlery as well as a village cobbler and tailor. The large "Eagle" store on the opposite side of the turnpike still does a flourishing trade to this day. A post-office was located here at an early day and the hamlet became known to the world and on the maps and gazetteers of the day as "Sitersville."

The inn on account of its distance from the city became the stopping place of both mail, post and accommodation stages for meals and relays, it being the first station west and the last relay station eastward.

It also was the usual breakfast station for the stages leaving Philadelphia at four and five o'clock in the morning. In 1807 the price charged stage passengers was  $31\frac{1}{4}$  cents per meal while others were only charged 25 cents. The reason given for this discrimination was, that being obliged to prepare victuals for a certain number of passengers by the stage, whether they came or not, it frequently caused a considerable loss of time, and often a waste of victuals, whereas in the other case they knew to a certainty what they would have to prepare.

The expense of traveling by the stages from Philadelphia to Pittsburg at this period was \$20 and  $12\frac{1}{2}$  cents for every pound of luggage beyond fourteen. The charges, by the way, for meals and lodging were about \$7. The whole distance was 297 miles, and was performed in six days.

The expense by wagon was $5 per cwt. for both persons and property, and the charges by the way amounted to about $12. It would take twenty days or more to perform the journey by wagon.

The favorite liquid refreshments dispensed over the bar and drank by the hardy "wagoners" and travelers in these early times besides whisky, brandy, rum and porter, were such as "cyder" plain, royal or wine; "apple" and "peach" brandy; "cherry bounce," &c. Among the better class of stage travelers a good bowl of "punch" was always in order and never out of order.

It is not known just how long John Siter remained in charge. He was succeeded by Edward Siter, who for two years retired from the old inn, as is shown by following advertisement.

“EDWARD SITER

Late of the Spread Eagle on the Philadelphia and Lancaster Turnpike road, takes the liberty of informing his friends and the public in general that he has taken that large store on South East corner of Market and Eighth Sts Number 226 in Philadelphia where he is now opening a good assortment of groceries, wholesale and retail on the most reasonable terms, where country produce will be bought or stored and sold on commission with punctuality.

He believes himself from his former conduct in business to obtain a share of publick patronage.”

(Federalist, Dec. 9, 1812.)

Edward Siter was succeeded by James Watson for two years. But the venture of neither proving successful we find Edward Siter again in charge of the inn until the year 1817.

The following five years—1817 to 1823—David Wilson, jr., was the host. Zenas Wells kept the inn 1823, 1824 and 1825.

For a short time during the first quarter of the century, most probably while the house was in charge of Wilson or Wells, a change was made on the old signboard, another neck and head being added by a local artist, thus changing our glorious bird of freedom into one of those nondescript birds with two heads as used in ancient heraldry; this change is still fresh in the memory of several octogenarians who yet live in the vicinity. It is further said that this change was caused by some political excitement rife at that time. The new signboard, however, caused much merriment among the neighbors and wagoners, who could not see the utility of the change, and by them the house was nicknamed the “Split Crow,” and in an article written about 65 years ago by Mr. George W.

Lewis (still living) the house is referred to by that name. After Edward W. Siter came in possession, in 1825, the signboard was again Americanized, and after being repainted remained until it was finally effaced by the action of the elements about the time the usefulness of the house as an inn had passed away.

Among the curious customs prevalent at this time, was for the smiths to burn their own charcoal, and it was not an uncommon sight for the traveler to see a charcoal kiln on fire back of the shops.

The continuing increase of travel and patronage soon necessitated the erection of more taverns; it is said they eventually averaged about one to the mile between the Eagle and Downingtown. The first of these new turnpike inns stood about three quarters of a mile west of the Eagle, on the eastern end of what was then known as the "Glassley Commons." The inn was known as the "Lamb"; it was established by John Lewis about 1812 or 13, who remained there for two years, when he was succeeded by the "Clingers," father and son, who remained in charge until the necessity for a public house there had passed away.

A few hundred rods east of the Eagle where the old road intersects the turnpike stood an old provincial inn, "The Unicorn." This house was built in 1747 by one James Miles. A license was granted to him in the following year. This inn was known on the early distance tables as "Miles Tavern," being 16 miles, 1 qr., 26 perches from the Court House in Philadelphia on the road to Lancaster, and is noted on the quaint pamphlet published by Wm. Bradford in Philadelphia in 1751. This building is no doubt still recollected by the residents of the township; also its destruction by fire on St. Valentine night, February, 1872, attended unfortunately by the loss of a life, an old man being burned to death in the attempt to save some of his effects.

These two taverns just mentioned took most of the overflow which could not be accommodated at the Spread Eagle, still it is yet within the recollection of many persons when the yards of all three inns were filled to their utmost capacity with wagons, stages and teams, while the bar-rooms within resounded with the roystering song or ribald jests of the hardy wagoner.

The travel on the turnpike reached its height probably during the latter part of the '20's, just previous to the building of the Philadelphia & Columbia Railroad by the Canal Commissioners of the State. During this era all was life and bustle about the Inn; there was hardly a moment during the twenty-four hours of the day that there was not some travel past the Inn. It was a frequent sight to see long lines of Conestoga wagons going towards the city loaded with the products of the West or going in the opposite direction freighted with the productions of Eastern mills or foreign merchandise; these wagons were usually drawn by five stout horses, each horse having on its collar a set of bells consisting of different tones, which made very singular music as the team trudged along at the rate of about four miles an hour. Emigrants could also frequently be seen on their way, generally in companies for mutual assistance, going with their families and worldly possessions towards the new West—there to settle and found homes for their posterity. Large herds and flocks also furnished their quota to this ever moving living panorama.

Within the tavern all would be life and animation, on warm, fair nights the porch as well as the piazza above was illuminated by large reflecting lamps, when on such occasions congregated the ladies and gentlemen who were stopping there either permanently or merely temporarily to while away the time and watch the life and bustle on the road in front of the Inn, as well as in the yard beyond; the shouts and activity of the hostlers and stablemen at the arrival or departure of the mail or post coach, the rapidity with which the horses were unhitched, or replaced by fresh relays after the passengers had refreshed themselves, the number of travelers on horseback or private conveyance, the occasional toot of a stage horn or ringing of the hostler's bell, all tended to form a continuous change of scene. In 1823 there were no less than eleven principal lines of "Land Stages," daily running on the turnpike to and from Philadelphia past the Eagle. These were known as the "Berwick," "Downingtown," "Harrisburg Coachee," "Harrisburg Stage," "Lancaster Accommodation," "Lancaster Coachee," "Lancaster and Pittsburg Mail," "Mifflin, Lewistown, via Harrisburg," "Philadelphia and Pittsburg via York," "Pittsburg via Harrisburg," "Philadelphia and West Chester" besides numerous lines of accommodation stages. The fare for way passengers was usually six cents per mile; through fare from Philadelphia to Pittsburg was $18.50 each way, meals and lodging extra.

The "Coachee" was a carriage peculiar to America, the body was rather longer than that of a coach, but of the same shape. In the front it was left open down to the bottom, and the driver sat on a bench under the roof of the carriage. There were two seats in it for passengers, who sat with their faces towards the horses. The roof was supported by posts placed at the corners, on each side of the doors, above the panels; it was open and to guard against bad weather; there were curtains made to let down from the roof and fasten to buttons placed for the purpose on the outside. There was also a leathern curtain to hang occasionally between the driver and the passengers. The Coachee had doors at the side, since the panels and body were generally finely finished and varnished.

As an instance of the importance of the Spread Eagle as a post town, a comparison of the receipts of the United States post office for the year ending March 31, 1827, shows there was a larger amount of postage collection there than at any other tavern post office on the turnpike east of Downingtown, viz.: $60.25. During the same period the collections at the Paoli were but $6.54.

In the year 1825, Edward W. Siter became the landlord of the Spread Eagle and remained until 1836, when Stephen Horne appears as the lessee, who had for some time been connected with the house.

On the evening of September 15th, 1834, an incident occurred which probably caused more excitement and sensation in the immediate vicinity of Siterville than had ever been known on any previous occasion within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. This was caused by the descent of Mr. James Mills' balloon, which had started on an aerial voyage from Philadelphia at half-past four o'clock in the afternoon. The following is the bold aeronaut's own description of what took place:

"Warned by the increasing obscurity of the world below I began to descend and at six o'clock and twenty minutes reached the earth in a fine green field, near the Spread Eagle, on the Lancaster Turnpike, 16 miles from Philadelphia. As I descended very slowly, two young gentlemen and Dr. M——, of Philadelphia, came to my assistance, and laying hold of the car in which I remained towed me about a quarter of a mile to the tavern, where I alighted, balloon and passenger, safe and sound. Before discharging the gas, several ladies got successively into the car and were let up as far as the anchor rope would permit. The gas was let out and the balloon folded. In doing this a cricket was unfortunately included, and having to cut his way out he made the only break in the balloon which occurred on this expedition. Mr. Horne, of the Spread Eagle, treated me with great kindness, and Dr. M—— politely offered me a conveyance to the city, which I reached at one o'clock this morning."

After the completion of the railroad which was located at this point, about half a mile to the north of the turnpike, and the successful attempt at steam transportation, the decline of the Inn was rapid, the glory of the once noted hostelry waned year after year, and it soon became merely a cross road country tavern with no patronage except what the laboring population in the vicinity supplied.

The only exception to this desolation was during the winter when the sleighing was good then for a time the old tavern would for a short period be galvanized into a new life as it were. Open house would be held all night; four to six musicians were in attendance, and as sleigh load after sleigh load of young people would arrive to refresh themselves and enjoy a dance or two, some of the old scenes of life and activity approximating the former glories of the tavern were reproduced. To such as participated in any of these parties the cheerful rubicund face of the host will no doubt be recalled, whether it was Ned Siter, Steve Horn, or Benny Kirk. However even these sleighing parties are now things of the past, and almost unknown to the present generation in the vicinity.

After changing ownership many times the Inn finally came into possession of George W. Childs, of Philadelphia, who bought the property so as to prevent anyone obtaining a license for the sale of liquor so near his venture at Wayne station, a short distance below on the turnpike.

In the following Summer the use of the building was given by its benevolent owner to the Managers of the Lincoln Institution of Philadelphia as a Summer home for the large number of Indian girls who were being trained and educated by that Institution. Fears had been entertained by the Managers and patrons of the Institution that a hot Summer in the city might prove disastrous to the Indian children, so it was determined to try the experiment of sending the girls to the country for half the year provided such removal would in no way interfere with their training or studies. Therefore the Managers of the school concluded to accept the kind and opportune offer of Mr. Childs allowing them the use of the old Inn and surrounding grounds free of charge. It, however, cost the Institution over a thousand dollars to make the former hostelry habitable and suitable for their purpose. It was not long before almost a hundred girls were so established in their new temporary home and the experiment from the very start proved itself a complete success.

The old Spread Eagle once more became a point of attraction, not only with the residents or sojourners in the vicinity, but also for the curious and sympathetic, some from a remote distance. Public religious services were held every Sunday at Wayne Hall; these services were always largely attended, on which occasion the choir, music and the responses, according to the ritual of the Protestant Episcopal Church, were entirely rendered by the Indian girls, who seemed to thoroughly comprehend the meaning of the services.

It was a beautiful, yet strange spectacle to see these dusky maidens, descendants of the aborigines, going two by two, from their services, as they trudged along the smooth white turnpike, sober and demure with their prayer book and hymnal in their hands; where but a little over two centuries ago their people had roamed and hunted free and undisturbed by anything approaching civilization, as monarchs of these glorious hills and valleys. Now no vestige of this former race remains but an occasional arrow dart ploughed up by the husbandman as he tills the soil. During these two summers several traveling Indian bands that visited Philadelphia also visited the school at the old Inn, and it is said that the impressions made upon their minds, and the reports they made when they returned home were of the greatest use to the school. Probably the most noteworthy and interesting of the visits was the one when the celebrated "Sitting Bull" accompanied by his band, all resplendent in scarlet blankets, leggings and feathers, with faces and hands daubed and streaked with vermilion and chrome yellow, came and spent a few hours at the old inn; quite a feast was prepared for them by the Indian girls which they seemed to enjoy, still not a muscle moved in their stolid countenances which could be construed as either showing approbation or displeasure.

One of the most interesting events during the sojourn of the Indian girls at the old tavern was the entertainment given on the evening of September 24, 1884, at Wayne Hall. It consisted of a series of twenty-two tableaux illustrative of Longfellow's beautiful poem of Hiawatha. The Rev. Joseph L. Miller, chaplain of the institution, read those portions of the poem descriptive of the scenes as presented by the dusky children. There were 10 characters represented in the tableaux. All the scenes passed off successfully, and were well applauded by the large audience present. Among the most vivid pictures were "The Indian's Home," Hiawatha's "infancy" with an Indian Lullaby, and "Hunting," "The Ambush," "Hunters' Return" and "Lover's Advent." The "Wedding Feast," with its songs and dances were the crowning features of the evening. In this scene the stage was filled with the girls and boys of the institution all in striking costumes brilliant in color and beads, feathers, tassels, fringes and other trinkets. A wedding song was sung, then came the dance, after which a chorus of over thirty Indians sang a hymn in the Dakota language.

The old tavern was used by the Lincoln Institution during the years 1884-5, when after several vain attempts on part of the managers to buy the property from Mr. Childs, they vacated the old Inn and purchased ten acres of woodland on the northern slope of the south Valley hill, about 1 ½ miles northeast of the old inn, where they erected three large buildings as a permanent summer school; this is now known as "Po-ne-mah."

The suburban village and improvements which have sprung up on all sides of the old hostelry, with the attendant pleasure travel, on the turnpike now again put in first class condition by the Lancaster Avenue Improvement Company, so far have had little effect on old "Siterville." At the present writing (1886) the old inn though in good repair is closed and without an occupant, and looms up on the roadside like a dark and sombre relic of the past, with nothing to remind the present generation of its departed glories.

other, there may be seen in the small valley thus formed a commodious house, of ample dimensions, two stories in height, capped by a sharp gable, pierced with three dormer windows, the enclosure within the bounds of the snow-white picket fence (1888) dotted with numerous outbuildings—the evergreens of stately growth, all tend to attract the attention of the traveller of the present day, and give the stranger an impression that the structure is one of more than ordinary importance, and a well-preserved relic of a former period—perhaps dating back to the Colonial period, and that it was the home of some brave, sturdy soldier of the Revolution, who wore the blue and buff, and on many a field performed deeds of valor and prowess while opposing the hireling invader.

In the first surmise the stranger would be correct. The house in question, and the more primitive structure which it replaced, was for over a century one of the best known landmarks on the Lancaster roadside. When first opened as a public house in the fourth decade of the last century, the sign-board as it swung and creaked in the wind bore the image and name of Admiral Vernon. This was, however, soon changed to the Admiral Warren. After the Revolution, in turnpike days, it was known to all travellers as the “Warren,” the British Admiral giving place on the sign-board to the patriot general, who died for his country on Bunker Hill. After the turnpike was completed toward the close of last century, it was not long before the house became a tavern stand or stage house of the first class, being equaled in reputation and patronage only by the “Eagle,” “Paoli” and “Downings”; the reputation of the “Good-cheer” and the cleanliness of the bedding made it one of the most desirable stopping places on the thoroughfare. Among the guests who patronized the inn, and who found shelter under the hospitable roof-tree, drank the wines, and enjoyed the products of the larder, were to be numbered presidents, judges, foreign potentates, and the most distinguished travelers from this and foreign climes.

The scenes of life and activity then to be seen daily in the "tavern yard" in front of the hostelry were not surpassed at any other point on the road; the arrival and departure of the stagecoaches, the genial host "Funny-stock" always present to greet the new arrivals, or to wish the departing ones bon voyage; the bustling hostlers and stablemen, together with the shouts of the drovers, busy in the large cattle pens, stables and shelters, then on the opposite side of the turnpike, the passing teamsters, with strings of tinkling bells on the horse yokes, all tended to make up the ever-recurring scenes of excitement at this renowned halting place on the Lancaster roadside.

When, however, in the course of time the stone age of travel, as the turnpike days may well be called, was superseded by that of iron and steam, the Warren, in common with its chief competitor the "Spread-Eagle," was left stranded far from the new road, and soon the inn from being one of the most busy spots between Philadelphia and Lancaster rapidly fell into decay, and after the withdrawal of the stagecoaches dropped to the level of an ordinary cross-road country tavern, and at the present day all that is left to remind the present generation of even the existence of such a noted landmark is the name of the local postoffice, viz.: "Warren Tavern," and even this is in danger of being before long a thing of the past, as lately there has been started a movement looking to a change of name, as was the case with the "Spread-Eagle" by some supercilious newcomers, on whose sensitive ears the word “Tavern” seems to grate harshly, and who have no idea of the derivation of the name, and who if they achieve their object may perhaps succeed in replacing the name of the revolutionary hero with that of one of his British or Hessian opponents, a proceeding which would be entirely in keeping with the course pursued by the Anglo-maniacs who have lately cropped out among us.

How in 1733 the great road from Lancaster was laid out to a point in Chester County, near the “Sign of the White Horse,” and the action taken by the residents of Tredyffrin, Easttown and Willistown and adjoining townships to have the road completed to the Schuylkill has been set forth in the preceding articles. It was not until November 6, 1741, when the final return of the commissioners giving the route to the Schuylkill was presented to Lieut. Governor George Thomas and Council. By this report we find that the new road was laid out eastward from the “Sign of the White Horse” along the old road “until near Robert Powell’s House, then leaving the old road, and on George Aston’s land south 72 degrees, east 200 perches to a run, thence 80 perches, whence it again meets the old road, then on it south 33½ degrees, east 21 perches, then in Willistown south 33½ degrees, 20 perches, &c., &c.”

By the above survey it will be seen that at the time there was no house on the site of the Warren, or mention would certainly have been made of it. It is safe to assume that George Aston built the house as soon as the road was open for travel, at the point where the road crossed the run, and the ascent of Valley Hill commenced through the notch, or gulf before described. This was not until 1743-4, and in the latter year we find Aston a resident of East Whiteland, as well as a prominent member of St. Peter’s congregation in the Valley. He was also an active factor in building the stone church (St. Peter's) in the Valley. The church records state that: "April 15th, 1745, was held a vestry in St. Peter's Church, which was the first there ever held." George Aston is among those chosen as vestrymen, and in the subsequent allotment of pews No. 4 fell to his lot. He was the eldest son of George Aston, who purchased 500 acres of land, and settled in Caln. He was a prominent citizen, and served as one of the justices of the county from 1724 to 1729. In the administration of his office he, however, seems to have been too zealous by encouraging litigation where it should have been avoided. Complaint of this fact being made, and coming to the knowledge of Hon. Patrick Gordon, the Governor acquainted the board that it was necessary that a new commission of "the Peace for Chester county should be issue, and that he had some very good reasons for leaving out one, viz: George Aston, who had acted but too much, &c."

George Aston, the elder, died in 1738, leaving two sons and three daughters. George, the eldest, and builder of the old wayside inn, married a daughter of Owen Thomas, of East Whiteland, and became the owner of the property now known as the Warren property. Application for license was no doubt made to the Court as soon as the house was ready for occupancy. This was granted in 1745. The inn was located, as was then the universal custom, near or at a running stream of water, and situated about midway between its rivals—the "Blue Ball" and the "Sign of the White Horse"—became from the start the stopping place for the churchmen and missionaries as they journeyed along the road. The house when first licensed was named the "Admr. Vernon," after a celebrated British naval officer, Sir Edward Vernon, the hero of Porto Bello, and who in view of his achievements was then the idol of England. With the outbreak of the French and Indian troubles, the gallant capture of Louisburg, June 17, 1745, followed by the victories over the French fleet in 1747 by Admiral Peter Warren, K.C.B., the latter soon became the ideal hero of the war party in the province, of which Aston was a prominent member; and it was not long before the former hero was supplanted in the minds of the people by the latter, whose deeds of valor were performed really to protect the colonies.

The change on the sign board of our wayside inn was probably made in 1748 when Aston relinquished the house to one Daniel Goldsmith, who rented the inn. It appears from the records that for some reason, not stated, the new host was refused a license by the Governor in the next year, 1749. George Aston then again took charge, but when the French and Indian troubles broke out in 1753, threatening the lives and homes of the inhabitants of the Chester Valley, while the Governor and the council were squabbling as to whether there should be any defence or not, George Aston was among the first men in the county to form a company for the defence of the province, and with them did his duty well in checking the infuriated savages in Northampton County.

In the account of the public expenditures of the day we find an entry, March 2, 1756, where the Assembly voted £240, 15s. 4d. "to Captain George Aston for himself and his companys pay."

On account of Captain Aston's prominence as a military man, the house now became a rendezvous and center for the military as well as the church party in this section of the county. In most of the local military documents from

Braddock to Stanwix we find "George Aston's" noted as a landmark and stopping place. Aston's son, Owen, became the County "Wagon Master," while in Roger Hunt's account book of 1759, who was a brother-in-law of Captain Aston's, we find frequent reference to "George Aston at ye Admiral Warren."

Aston appears to have kept the house during these troublesome times, when the French and Indians inspired so much fear in the community, until 1760, when he was succeeded as host by one Peter Valleau. Three years later Aston and his wife sold the property to Lnyford Lardner, of Philadelphia, a brother-in-law of Richard Penn, and who was the agent of the Penn family in America. Valleau continued until 1767. Nothing of note is known to have occurred during his occupancy.

He was succeeded by Caleb Parry, who deserves more than a passing notice. He was the son of David Parry, of Tredyffrin, whose father, James Parry, donated the ground on which the Great Valley Presbyterian Church was built. During the French and Indian times David Parry was one of the associators, and the lad, Caleb, no doubt imbibed much of his military spirit from him, and at the very outbreak of the Revolution we find Caleb Parry commissioned as Lieutenant Colonel in Colonel Atlee's "First Regiment of Pennsylvania Musketry," recruited mainly from among the Presbyterians in the Chester and Pequea Valleys. He was active in all the military operations around New York, which culminated so disastrously to the patriot cause, and on the memorable 27th of August, 1776, in the engagement known as the Battle of Long Island, Colonel Parry was numbered among the slain, as his brother officers stated, "Dying like a hero." An account of the affair states:

“The men shrunk and fell back, but Atlee rallied them and Parry cheered them on and they gained the hill. It was here, while engaged in an officer’s highest duty, turning men to the enemy by his own example, that the fatal bullet pierced his brow.”

To return to the roadside inn during the second year that Parry was in charge, a danger threatened the inn. This was nothing more or less than the petition for license of a new house between the Warren and the Blue Ball. Parry fearing this would injure his business appealed to his landlord, Lynford Lardner, to use his influence with the Governor to prevent a license being granted to Joshua Evans, the new applicant. Lardner in pursuance to the request sent a protest to the Court, in which he states that about six years before he had purchased the estate of George Aston and wife, three and a half miles from “Blue Ball” and three miles from “White Horse,” and he feared the establishment of another tavern between his and the Blue Ball would discourage his tenant, &c. The protest, however, did not avail, as the license was granted and the “General Paoli” was the result. Parry remained at the Warren for another year after the Paoli was opened, when he resigned in favor of Isaac Webb, who was there 1771-2-3. He was also a renter and was followed by Samuel Johnson, in 1774. In this year Lynford Lardner, the owner of the property, died October 6th, and his will, proved October 25, 1774, following curious provision is made. He orders that his executors “do sell and dispose of the iron works newly erected, known as the Andover Iron Works, in the Province of New Jersey, and also my messuage and tenniment, commonly called by the name of Warren Tavern, in the county of Chester, and the plantations and lands thereunto belonging, which I purchased from George Asheton and wife, for the payment of just debts, and for other purposes in this, my last will, &c., &c."

In pursuance with the above provision, Catharine Lardner and John Lardner, the executors, November 2, 1776, conveyed the "Admiral Warren plantation, in Whiteland township," to Hon. John Penn, of Philadelphia.

Samuel Johnson was the tenant until the property was transferred to the new owner, when he was succeeded by Peter Mather, a man of strong Tory proclivities.

During the term of Webb and Johnson the old inn seems to have lost prestige. This was partially caused by the "General Paoli" becoming the favorite gathering place of the patriot spirits, with which the locality abounded, while the Warren and the Unicorn, seven miles below, had the reputation of being loyal houses.

Local tradition tells us that the Warren became the gathering place for the Tories in the vicinity, and such persons as were disaffected to the patriot cause. Further that after the outbreak of active hostilities, meetings were frequently held in the house, where British envoys, or officers, were present, and information which had been obtained was sent to the enemy. Notable among the visitors to the inn at the time was the talented, but unfortunate, Major Andre, who was then a paroled prisoner of war at Lancaster, and who had the liberty of certain roads, among which was the Philadelphia road to within a point twenty miles from the city.

What good use Andre made of his parole may be surmised, when it is known that he is said to have mapped the country and suggested the capture of Philadelphia by way of the Chesapeake and Great Valley, the plan so successfully carried out by Howe and Cornwallis in the Fall of 1777.

In the year 1777, when it was destined that the tide of war should surge through our fertile valley—then the garden of Pennsylvania—the house was in charge of Peter Mather, who, if our traditions be true, was like his predecessor, a strong tory. This is further strengthened by the fact that when the British Army was quartered in the valley Mather was one of the few who appears to have suffered no loss, while his immediate neighbors lost almost all of their possessions.

On the eventful night of the 20th of September, when the cohorts of the enemy under Grey, accompanied by his aid, Major Andre, silently marched up the Swedeford road, they wheeled to the left at the road which led to the Warren, where a halt was made, and to divert suspicion from the real traitors who guided the advance, the patriotic blacksmith at the shops, then situated on the south side of the old Lancaster road just north of the present turnpike bridge, was forced to get out of his bed and accompany the column. This dreadful occurrence of this dark night it is unnecessary to repeat here, as they are well-known in history as the “Massacre at Paoli,” and have been graphically described by more able pens than that of the writer.

After the British had left the vicinity Mather, the inn keeper, was publicly charged by his neighbors as being responsible for the massacre, also of having guided the British. Both of these accusations he strenuously denied, producing proof that he had not been out of the house during the night. In confirmation of his statements are the two facts, viz.: First, that in no known British letter, report or account is mention made of Peter Mather, or his connection with the attack; second, that notwithstanding the suspicion attached to him he was permitted to continue to live in the house and keep the inn for a number of years. The place, however, was shunned and avoided by most of the residents of the vicinity, and the inn keeper drew his patronage from the chance travellers on the road, who knew nothing of the odium common report attached to the unfortunate Boniface. From these facts it may be surmised that the enterprise was not a financial success.

About the close of the Revolutionary war there was considerable excitement throughout the county in reference to the proposed removal of the county seat from Chester, on the Delaware, to a more central part in the county. There were three points suggested, all being public houses, viz.: "Downing's," the "Turk's Head" (now West Chester), and the "Admiral Warren," with the chances in favor of the latter on account of its position in the Great Valley, and being within easy reach from all points in the county; but the fact that the property was owned by one of the Penn family, together with the state of the popular feeling towards anything which savored of the old régime, precluded the acceptance of the locality on any condition. Notwithstanding the activity of John Penn's agents and friends the agitation of the matter only tended the more to incense the populace against the old inn; consequently, when in 1783, the Assembly passed an Act (March 19) doubling the rates of all tavern licenses, the outlook became still darker for Mather. He, however, held out until the property was sold, when he made a sale of his personal effects and went to West Chester. Shortly after the removal of the county seat there he kept a licensed house within the new borough, again succeeding, it is said, the very man—Isaac Webb—who had occupied the "Warren" prior to Mather. In the new location his expectations again failed to be realized, so after remaining for a year or two he seems to have drifted to the city, where his ill fortune followed him; as the people who knew him were wont to say "God frowned on him," so he fell lower and lower in the social scale. First he drove team or dray, but finally in his old age came down to pushing a hand cart or wheelbarrow, and even here the boys were wont to make his existence miserable by calling after him "Here we are and there we go," and "Remember Paoli."

The ownership of the old Roadside Inn now passed into the possession of the Fahnestock family, in whose hands it was to remain for more than half a century, and reach a renown and popularity second to none of the sixty odd hostleries on the roadside between the city and Lancaster.

Many are the tales told of how Fahnestock bought the house; how the vendue crier refused his bid on account of his uncouth appearance as he stood there in his long coat of undyed homespun, secured by large hooks and eyes in lieu of buttons; his long straggling beard and hair but partly hidden by his broad brimmed hat, his homemade cowhide boots, and worse than all he was clad in a pair of pantaloons, a fact which made him the butt of all present. Then how he produced the bright jingling coin, and told the crier that if his bids wouldn't count his money would, and the subsequent discomfiture of the vendue crier. These tales and many more of a similar import were told and retold in the barrooms, and to travelers in stages along the road until they were as current on the pike as they were among the children of the cross-roads school, or among the old crones who sat besides the hearth, "A whirling their wheel, or quilting the coverlids."

The true facts of the case are that John Penn, the owner of the property, was anxious to dispose of the whole property. This by some means became known to Casper Fahnestock, a member of the German Mystic Community at

Ephrata, and resulted in Casper, accompanied by Brother Jabez (Rev. Peter Miller), the prior of the congregation, and another brother, making a pilgrimage down the Lancaster road in the last week of March, 1786, to Philadelphia. They traveled on foot, as was their custom, clad in the rough habit of their order with staff in hand, Casper, in addition, carrying a pair of saddle bags. When the trio arrived at the Warren they craved admittance, but received a rebuff from Mather, who told them "no beggars were wanted around there," so the three brethren continued on to the city. Penn, who was known to Brother Jabez, was at once called on, the price agreed upon, the conveyance made, executed and acknowledged in open court, March 31, 1786, before Hon. Edward Shippen, President-Judge of the Common pleas. This document states that the Hon. John Penn, Esquire, and Dame Anne, his wife, convey to Casper Fahnestock, of Cocalico township, Lancaster county, shopkeeper, the Warren Tavern plantation of 337 acres, the consideration being two thousand pounds lawful money of Pennsylvania in specie of gold or silver. This money was paid out of the saddlebags which Casper had carried all the way from Ephrata, the subscribing witnesses being Peter Miller and Joan Louis Patey. The trio immediately started west on their return in the same manner as they had come. Casper's saddlebags were lightened of their weight of coin, but contained the plantation in its stead. On their arrival at the tavern, it was long after nightfall. The mystic brethren, however, stopped and inquired for Mather, who had, it seems, already gone to bed. As the latter came down in gown and slippers, Casper told him that he was now the owner of the property, and intended to remain and examine his purchase in the morning, a proceeding to which there was no objection from the now obsequious Mather. In a few days the old Tory made a vendue, at which Casper was a frequent bidder, and ere the first week of April had elapsed the old Roadside Inn was in charge of the German Sabbatarian from the Monastery on the Cocalico. The new host, although an old man, being over sixty years of age, soon made his presence felt with the wagoners and travellers on the road. In view of the succeeding events, an extended notice of the first of the name in Chester county, as well as his successors will not be amiss.

Casper Fahnestock was a native of Germany, born in 1724. He was the eldest son of Dietrich Fahnestock, the founder of the "whole tribe of Fahnestocks" (in America), as the inscription calls him on his tombstone in the old God's Acre of the Sabbath-keepers at Ephrata, on the banks of the Cocalico. Dietrich, the elder, came to this country with his wife, child and two sisters, in 1726. His sole possessions consisted of an axe, a weaver's shuttle, a Bible and a German thaler. He first settled on the Raritan River in New Jersey where the family lived for a number of years, but becoming convinced of the truth of the Sabbatarian doctrine, joined that body of Christians, and about 1748 we find the family residents of Ephrata. In the next year, June 21, 1749, a patent was granted him by the Governor for 329 acres of land at ? ? ? ? as the founder of the "Chester County" Fahnestocks. Casper, as were the rest of the family, was a member of the Ephrata community; his aunt even entered the Convent Saron, and became known as "Sister Armilla"; they were all consistent Sabbath-keepers, Casper and his wife Maria in addition keeping several other mosaic laws, such as eschewing the use of pork, the use of meats and milk at the same meals, &c. It was from these peculiarities that the common impression arose among his English neighbors, that the family were of the Jewish faith.

The new owner had no sooner taken charge than the tavern at once became the stopping place for all of the Lancaster county Germans. Menish, Dunker, Omish, Lutheran, Reformist and Moravian all found shelter and entertainment with the old "Sieben-Tager"* from Ephrata. Casper was ably seconded by the members of his family; his wife Maria, and mother-in-law, Elizabeth Gleim, took charge of the kitchen, the oldest son Charles presided over the bar, Daniel, who was a cripple, and his brother Dietrich, assisted in the house and tavern-yard, while the two other children, Esther and Catherine, with Charles' wife Susan, attended to the wants of the house, table and guests. Just six months after the family were domiciled in the old tavern Casper's wife's mother, Elizabeth Gleim, died in her 75th year. She was buried on the plantation in a small clearing on the northern slope of South Valley Hill, about one fourth of a mile from the tavern, according to the custom of the Sabbatarians of that day; due north and south, with prayer and song, the ceremonies being conducted by the reverend Prior, of the Ephrata community, Brother Jabez. This spot was in the course of time surrounded by a low stone wall and became the burial ground of the Fahnestock family (Chester county branch) and now through neglect and the ravages of time has become about as gruesome a place of sepulture as it is possible to imagine.

At this period of history the German element had increased to so great an extent in our State, that it actually became a question whether the State should not become a German State, and that all judicial and legislative proceedings be held in that language. In 1787, the German high school was established with a grant of 10,000 acres of land. German was introduced into the different charity and township schools; all tending to lay the foundation for a German commonwealth; the plan cherished by the projectors was to eradicate the English language completely. The German element held together and won victory after victory at the polls over the "die dummen Irischer," as their English-speaking opponents were called. At last their preponderance became so great that everything seemed favorable to bring about the result, viz.: That the German language would be legally declared to be the tongue of the commonwealth, when the French revolution broke out with its attendant influx of French refugees, French ideas of atheism, (foreign to the German character), liberty, equality, etc., etc. This was followed by the general war in Europe, and the almost total cessation of emigration from Germany. During this state of affairs the English-speaking element gained strength from day to day, and the German struggle for supremacy, so auspiciously begun, soon declined; and it was not long before the high school at Lancaster, which was to have been the great university of America, became a thing of the past. Politically, however, the Germans for many years continued to hold the balance of power.

Among the wagoners and travelers on the turnpike the German element was so largely in the majority that no public house could succeed unless some one in charge was conversant with the German tongue. As there was no question about the nationality of the new host of the Warren, he being German to the core, his great difficulty was from the start to provide for those who sought his shelter. Further, by his attention to business and the cleanliness of the house, the Inn soon became a desirable stopping place for "Irisher" or "Gentleman," as well as for the "Deutscher." It even became a station for the professional express rider, a character and occupation long since passed away and forgotten.

Thus matters went on, the patronage and renown of "the Dutch tavern," as it was called by the wagoners, increased with the travel of the road, and the proprietor kept pace with the requirements of the traveling public. Casper kept the Corduroy Causeway through the swamp in better repair than it had been heretofore, a proceeding which pleased the frequenters of the road and proved another feature to attract custom to the Inn. This causeway was to the north of the present turnpike bridge, and before this time was one of the worst places on the Lancaster road, being often impassable in the spring and winter.

Some idea of the difficulties of the travel in that day may be gleaned from the following letters, written just a century ago by Miss Marie Penry, the daughter of a celebrated Welsh physician. She was one of the Moravian Sisterhood at Lititz, and gives a graphic description of her trip from Philadelphia to Lancaster. Nothing could illustrate more forcibly the great change which has taken place during the century in the time and manner of communication between the two places. Miss Penry writes that she set out from Philadelphia on a Friday morning in November, leaving the city at 8 o'clock. Her traveling companions consisted besides the driver of Mr. Tilt and wife, and two children, seven years old, twins. He was a British officer who had been a prisoner of war at Lancaster, and there married, and on his release went to Halifax, and was now on his way to see his relatives. This composed the load. When they arrived at Fahnestock's they stopped for refreshment for man and beast, and there met an Irish gentleman and his wife who had arrived in the country but a few days before, and were now on their way to the western end of the county. They had hired a chair and came thus far, when their driver refused to proceed on account of the bad condition of the roads, and being unable to procure any conveyance were in consequence stranded in a strange land. When the party started on their journey they took the "Irish Gentlewoman" as the letter calls her, in the stage with them, and as her husband could not even get a horse for hire, he was obliged to travel on foot along side of the stage. Thus the journey to the Brandywine commenced. It was, however, not destined to continue to the end of their goal, as the extra weight in the stage with the roughness of the road, had a bad effect on the vehicle, which proved unequal to the strain. The party had not proceeded far ere a crack was heard, and the hind axle broke, letting the stage down on the road. Fortunately the horses were stopped and the passengers gotten out of the wreck without injury. The party, the letter continues, now all footed it Indian fashion to the nearest inn, which was about two miles from where the stage broke down (probably the Sheaf of Wheat). On their arrival they partook of an ordinary wayside meal. The spirits of the party were clouded by the prospect of having to pass Saturday and perhaps Sunday there. However, after the meal was finished a countryman offered to take the party to Downing's for a consideration, as a great favor. His team proved to be a country wagon without springs or cover, with no seats other than bundles of rye straw. Into this vehicle, Miss Penry continues, we went with all our packages, and our Irish gentleman, who seemed to think that "humble riding was better than proud walking on foot" was but too glad to avail himself of the opportunity to join the party. Thus the party arrived long after dark at the hospitable house of the "Downings"; as the fair writer adds—"Politeness and good nature had lessened every difficulty."

The time, 1789, from Philadelphia to Downings, was over twelve hours, express time 1889 is one hour.

At this period there were two matters agitating the community, both of which seriously affected the usually imperturbable inn-keeper. One was the question of making a stone highway, chaussie, or turnpike, to take the place of the old road. The second was the action taken by the Federal government in taxing whiskey, a matter which was destined to lead to the most serious consequences.

A fact not generally known is, that the first organized opposition to the new excise law, took place in our Chester county, and the exciseman or collector was roughly used, barely escaping with his life. The rioters, however, were convicted and punished severely by the State Courts. On that occasion the foreman of the jury told the Attorney General "that he was much or more opposed to the excise law than the rioters, but would not suffer violators of the law to go unpunished."

This opposition thus started extended to the western counties, where it culminated in 1794, in what is known in history as the "Whiskey insurrection." When President Washington issued his requisition for military force to quell the incipient insurrection against Federal authority, Governor Mifflin, in response to the Federal proclamation, made a personal tour through the eastern part of the State to arouse the military spirit of the populace. In the progress of this trip he came through Chester county and addressed the people at various points, among others the

Warren Tavern is named, where, it is stated that, notwithstanding the protests from the proprietor, who, as a consistent Sabbath-keeper, was a non-combatant, a recruiting office was opened and a company recruited by Edward Pearce, which became known as "Captain Parker's Company" of Colonel Harris' Regiment, Edward Pearce being promoted to the Adjutancy. It was not long before the tocsin of war, the piercing note of the fife, and the heavy tread of armed men was again heard in our peaceful valley. Most of the troops, however, marched by way of the Swedesford, striking the Lancaster road a little below the "White Horse." The baggage and supplies came out over the new turnpike, which had been made here and there in sections between the Warren and the city, but which on account of the ignorance displayed by those having the enterprise in charge was almost impassable, even for the baggage trains. However, the incipient war in Western Pennsylvania was soon over, when the efforts to perfect the new turnpike were redoubled; the long bridge was built and the new road at the "Warren" occupied almost all the roadbed of the provincial thoroughfare. Casper, to be up to the times, and foreseeing the large increase in the travel, at an early day set about to prepare materials for a new house on as large a scale as the Sifers had built six miles below. This new house was built so as to face on the north side of the turnpike. The old "Admiral Vernon," similar to all of the inns on the Lancaster road, was built on the south side of the road, and it was not long ere the new sign board of the "General Warren" swung in its yoke on a high mast near the southeast angle of the new turnpike tavern.

With the native thrift of old Casper and his family all the work had to be done by themselves—trees were felled, hewed and sawed, lime burned, sand hauled and stone quarried—for the new hostelry. A curious anecdote is told about old Casper in connection with the latter labor: During the fine moonlight nights in summer “Old Cas,” as he was called, would make his men work in the quarry long after supper, or, at least, would go and swing the sledge by himself. This was not to the taste of the young generation, and several made up their minds that they would stop the old German and get him out of his Dutch notions. So the Pearce boys, the next night, rigged themselves up in horns and blankets, carrying heavy log chains, and quietly getting near where the old man was cracking the stone in the moonlight, jumped up, rattled their chains and uttered unearthly yells. The old man, startled for a moment, resumed his labor as unconcerned as if they were trees, merely saying: “I bees not afrait von yous if you bees der teufel,” finishing up with, “Wer auf Gott vertraut kan weder tod nocht teufel schaden,”* and calmly continued his work.

Another one relates how it would worry the old man during harvest when the mowers or reapers would sit down longer for rest or refreshments than he thought they ought to, and when he could stand it no longer he would come up and say, “Now, poys, youse takes a bissel grog (whiskey and water); es is not goot so long to sitz on de kalt grund; takes a bissel grog and youse goes on.”

The new tavern, however, was built and ready long before the turnpike was a complete success, for many were the trials of the public spirited projectors of the enterprise. With the completion of the turnpike there came a demand for increased mail facilities. The government then engrossed with the French question and the impending war with that power, yet found time to accede to the demand of the people. A post office was established in Downingtown April 1, 1798, the only one between Philadelphia and Lancaster, and the official announcement was made that there would be three mails per week between Philadelphia, Downingtown and Lancaster, closing one-half hour before sunset every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. This was hailed with satisfaction by everyone.

In connection with the French war excitement of 1798 there is a curious anecdote. Early in the year envoys were appointed to France by President Adams. One of these, Callender by name, in place of embarking for France left the city on a tour westward. Why or what for was not known at the time. He got as far as Fahnestock's and remained there several days, until on the morning of July 13th, when he was found by a teamster a little after day break laying over 21st mile-stone dead—drunk.

The explanation of Commissioner Callender's strange conduct is very simple when it is known that three fugitive French Princes, Louis Phillipe, Duke de Montpensier and the Count de Beaujolais, were at that time sheltered under the humble, but hospitable roof of the old German Sabbath-keeper. It would be difficult to imagine a greater contrast than the home of these scions of French royalty at that time with their former residence, viz., the Palais Royal at Paris. The humble Roadside Inn, however, had this great advantage, the three princes were as safe as the humblest laborer in the land; their heads were safe on the shoulders of their effete bodies.

It was to consult with these princes that Callender came to the old Roadside Inn. The princes naturally did all they could to favorably impress the Commissioner and gain him for their cause. In this attempt they drew heavily on their scant resources, plying the Commissioner liberally with numerous bottles of old Madeira, which had been bought by Casper at Mather's sale and which it was claimed had come over the water, while yet the signboard bore the legend "Ye Adm'll Vernon."

It was in this eventful year (1798) that the capital city was again visited by the yellow fever scourge. A camp for patients was established beyond the Schuylkill, and donations of farm and garden produce were solicited. The Fahnstocks at once took active measures to collect and send the needed supplies to the sufferers, vieing with the Downings and Joseph Moore, of East Whiteland, in supplying the necessaries and luxuries to the sick and convalescent poor of the fever-stricken city.

After the road was finished and by its advantages and superiority over the common roads came into universal favor, with teamsters and travellers, the old tavern stands soon had more patronage than they could accommodate; this was especially the case with the Fahnstock's. Old Casper although having long passed the allotted period of three score and ten, still continued as host and proprietor of the house, holding to the German maxim that "No father should give the reins of his hands to his child as long as he lived." However, in 1789, old Casper then in his 77th year, was forced by the infirmities of age to relinquish the house to his son Charles, who was then in his 37th year, and in whose name the license was granted for the last year of the Eighteenth Century.

In the next year (1800), the present blacksmith shops were built on the turnpike. As before stated, the old shop on the Lancaster road stood in the meadow, about five feet north of the turnpike bridge. The top of the roof of the old shop was on a level with the low parapet of the present bridge and stood there for many years.

As has been mentioned in a previous article, during the period of 1790-1800 when Philadelphia was the capital of the United States, there were frequently delegations of the Indian tribes, who travelled up and down the road in their journey to visit the "Great Father"; on one of these visits an occurrence took place, which caused much speculation, and remains to the present day an unsolved problem, notwithstanding the many attempts made by the Fahnstock family and many others to solve the enigma. It was as follows: A short time after the turnpike was finished an Indian coming down the road had broken something about his gun, and, when he came to the Warren asked the smith at the shops to repair it. The blacksmith had just run out of charcoal, which was the only kind of coal then used by smiths, and told the Indian that he could not fix his gun until he had burnt a new kiln of charcoal. The Indian asked him if he would do it if he got him coal, and getting an answer in the affirmative he took up a pick and basket which were in the shops, and giving a grunt started for the woods on the South Valley hill. He returned in about half an hour with a basket full of black rocks or stones. The smith tried to make the Indian understand it was coal that he needed. The Indian merely put some of his black stones on the hearth and pulled the bellows, and to the surprise of the smith the stones commenced to burn. The Indian merely said, "White man now fix gun." The now thoroughly surprised smith found the Indian's rocks equal to his best charcoal. The gun was repaired, and the smith was naturally anxious to know where the burning stones were found, but nothing could induce the Indian to divulge where he had found it except that he said "there was much—much," pointing towards the wooded hillside. Many were the efforts made from that day to this to discover the location, but so far without success.

Although with the advent of the nineteenth century Philadelphia had ceased to be the capital city the traffic on the turnpike showed no diminution; our road became the great highway to the West. Stage lines were started to all points, while wagoning and emigrants increased to such an extent that ere long the licensed houses on the road between Philadelphia and Lancaster averaged one to the mile, and even then the farm houses adjacent to the highway were often called upon to accommodate the overflow.

When the political question cropped out in relation to the western territory, which culminated in the "Aaron Burr" fiasco, it became imperative as early as 1804 that regular communication should be maintained between Philadelphia and the Ohio at Pittsburg, other than by the always more or less uncertain post or express rider. Satisfactory arrangements, however, were not consummated until after much effort on the part of the federal authorities. The first notice of the new enterprise was the following quaint announcement—it was published in but a single paper, and is here reproduced in full as a contrast to the railroad advertisements of the present day—viz.:

PHILADELPHIA & PITTSBURG

MAIL STAGES.

A contract being made with the Postmaster General of the United States for the carrying of the mail to and from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, in stage wagons, a line of stages will be in operation on the first of July next, on same route, which line will start from John Tomlinson's Spread Eagle, Market street, No. 285, Philadelphia, and from Thomas Ferree's, the Fountain Inn, Water street,

Pittsburgh; and perform the same route in seven days from the above places. Passengers must pay $20.00 each, with the privilege of twenty pounds of baggage, all above that weight, or baggage sent by above line, to pay at the rate of $12.00 per 100 pounds, if the packages are of such dimensions as to be admissible for conveyance.

The proprietors of this line of stages, well knowing the arduous undertaking of a new establishment, and aware of the laborious task and expense that the prosecutors of their necessary engagements will require, are determined that their conduct shall be such, as they trust will be sanctioned by a discerning public and receive their support.

Printed cards will be distributed, and may be had at the proprietors' different stage houses, giving a full detail of the distances and times of arrival at the several towns through which the line shall pass.

N. B.—Printers who shall think the above establishment a public benefit will please give the same a place in their respective papers a few times.

Philadelphia, June 13, 1804.

As announced in the above advertisement, promptly at 8 o'clock on the morning of the 4th of July, 1804, a fit day for the starting of the new national enterprise, the stage which was to be the first to run through from the Delaware to the Ohio was drawn up in front of Tomlinson's Spread Eagle stage office, then at the northeast corner of 8th and Market streets, the four prancing horses with bridles gaily decorated with red, white and blue ribbons. Long before the starting time the mail was in the "boot," the straps drawn tight, the booked passengers in their seats, while as a last precaution an extra keg of fistoil and tar was slung to the hind axle, the lynch pin examined and the dust proof covers fastened over the hubs. Then after another glass was drunk the driver and armed guard took their places on the box, the lines tightened, the whip cracked and the pioneer mail stage to the West left the stage office among the cheers of the assembled multitude and whirled rapidly out Market street towards Center Square, where another ovation awaited the stage and its occupants from the citizens who were preparing to celebrate Independence Day. The new permanent bridge was quickly passed and the ironclad hoofs of the four prancing steeds clattered on the smooth turnpike. At every tavernstand the passing mail was received with cheers and wishes of Godspeed and safe journey to the travelers. Stops were only made at such stagehouses as the Buck, Eagle, Paoli, and there for liquid refreshment only. It was near two o'clock in the afternoon, as the stage dashed down the Valley hill through the toll gate at the twentieth milestone, when the guard blew six sharp blasts on his bugle—this the signal to the host of the "Warren" how many guests there would be for dinner; then came the notes of "Independence Day," the "Yankee Doodle," the echo taking them up and returning them through ravines on the hillside a hundred fold. Hardly had the echo faded, when the four prancing steeds were reined up in front of the "Warren." The stage door was quickly opened, the passengers alighting and meeting with a greeting as only Charles Fahnestock was capable of extending to the wayfarer. The dust was quickly washed down with cold punch, when dinner was served, toasts drunk and ample justice done to the viands. In the meantime the anvil of the shops had been brought out into the road and improvised as a cannon, and load after load was fired in honor of the occasion. During the dinner the relays had been brought out, and the stage was once more ready for the journey westward. Another punch was drunk, hands shaken, and amid wishes of Godspeed, the reports of the improvised artillery, and the cheers of the assembled neighbors, mingled with the bugle notes of the guard, the stage with its freight started merrily up the hill on its way towards the Ohio.

This enterprise of running mail stages through to Pittsburg formed the theme of conversation for the balance of the week. Many were the different opinions pro and con—prophecies of failure and adverse criticisms; yet notwithstanding the headshaking and discouraging comments of Old Casper, the stage went through, arrived safely on time in a week, and the through mail was an established fact. These stages were what in later years was known as the "Good Intent Line." The route lay from Lancaster to Chambersburg, by way of Carlisle and Strasburg; arriving in Chambersburg in two and one half days, averaging about four miles an hour, from the latter place to the end of the journey; the progress under the most favorable circumstances was much slower, the distance from Chambersburg to Pittsburg, about 150 miles, taking four and one half days, or about two to two and a half miles an hour. There were thirty-five regular stopping places or stages between the two cities. At first the enterprise was slow in coming into favor with the traveling public. It was not until the following year (1805) that the proprietors were taxed to their capacity and were forced to run an occasional special or extra coach; this was necessitated by the excitement caused by the Burr Expedition, which had then reached its culmination; the success of the through stage line opened a new era for the Warren, and the house under the management of Charles Fahnestock, became known to travelers in this country and Europe, as one of the best kept houses in America. He was a rather spare built man, of 5 feet 11 inches, with a full beard, and always wore a brown or snuff-colored coat and spoke with a strong German accent. He was very particular in regard to the sale of liquors; ordinary local patronage and wagons were not encouraged. The bar was a small arrangement very high, and slabs running about 2 inches wide, and 3 inches apart, running from bar to ceiling. In front there was a small opening with an outside shelf holding about four glasses. The liquor was measured out by the gill or half gill and passed through this opening. When the landlord thought a patron had enough he would refuse him any more telling him quietly "to sit down awhile." The tavern keeper confined himself strictly within the old law of 1762 by which "Taverns were allowed to sell to regular inmates and travellers in moderation," (Acts Assembly, vol. 1, pp. 19-21—fol. Phila. 1762.)

The Fahnestock family had no sooner learned the principles and teachings of their guests than the Owens, Miss Wright and their followers were kindly and firmly informed by Charles Fahnestock that they would have to seek other quarters, that the house would afford them shelter no longer, nor would he harbor anyone who promulgated sentiments similar to theirs, which were so foreign to all religious and moral teachings. Another guest during the agitation of Owen's plan for colonization in the Great Valley was his Highness Bernhardt, Duke of Sachse-Weimar-Eisenach, who was then on a visit to this country. The attempt of Owen to interest the nobleman in his scheme resulted as did all of Owen's plans—in failure.

As before stated, local custom was not encouraged by the inn-keeper, regular habitues of the tavern were few, and such as there were were respectable and sober. Charles

Fahnestock was naturally a temperance man, and had the courage, when the house was at the height of popularity, to close his bar on Sunday. This was an unheard-of innovation at that day, which called down much adverse criticism upon him. He, however, persisted, and even went so far as to hang a sign over the bar and he had enough moral courage to adhere to the determination. Among the few of the neighbors who were frequently to be seen on the tavern porch was an Englishman of means, Thomas Bradley, between whom and the inn-keeper a strong bond of friendship had arisen. It lasted until death parted the two friends in 1829. Thomas Bradley was buried in the Fahnestock ground and is the only stranger who rests within the enclosure.

Another visitor who was occasionally to be seen at the Warren was Charles Fahnestock's cousin, Andrew. He was a Sabbatarian, and on account of his originality and appearance always attracted the attention of strangers. He always travelled on foot, dressed in a long drab coat, wearing a broad brimmed white hat, and carrying his long "Pilgerstab" (staff) in his hand. He was at one time quite wealthy, but gave all his wealth to the poor, saying "The Lord would never suffer him to want." He would never receive any salary for his services as preacher, trusting entirely in the Lord for his support. On these visits he would often take his cousin to task for joining the Presbyterian Church with his family and failing to keep the Sabbath (7th day), as had his ancestors before him.

The preacher on his journeys along the pike was often made the subject for the teamsters' jokes, who met him, but, as we would say at the present day, Andrew never got left. On one of these occasions, a teamster asked him if he believed in the devil. Andrew answered that "he read about him in his Bible." The wagoner then asked him if he ever saw the devil. The answer he got was, "I never want to see him plainer than I do just now." The ribald wagoner had no more questions to ask the German Sabatarian.

At the commencement of the fourth decade (1830) travel had increased to such an extent that greater facilities and shorter time was demanded by the traveling public. To meet this demand the proprietors of the stage line, S. R. Slaymaker & Co., from Philadelphia to Chambersburg, and Reside Slaymaker & Co., from Chambersburg to Pittsburg, increased their stock and facilities to so great an extent that in 1831 they announced that they would henceforth run two daily lines to Pittsburg, viz.: The U. S. Mail stage, the "Good Intent Line," would leave their office, 284 Market street, Philadelphia, above 8th street, every morning at two o'clock a. m., for Pittsburg, via Lancaster, Harrisburg, Carlisle, Chambersburg, Bedford, Somerset and Mount Pleasant, going through in three days; only six passengers being admitted to each stage, as many stages were to be run as called for by the passengers, they averaging about six daily.

The Mail Telegraph stage line left Philadelphia at 6.30 a. m. by way of Greensburg from Bedford, making the trip in four days. This service was especially recommended to families or ladies, as the telegraph line avoided the fatigue of night travel. Firstrate horses, careful drivers and splendid new coaches were held out as the inducement to the traveling public. In September, 1831, during the height of the traveling season the tavern was discovered to be on fire. It was first discovered over the kitchen, and is supposed to have been caused by a defective flue or chimney. The whole structure soon fell a victim to the destroying element.

A curious anecdote in connection with the fire was long current. As soon as the alarm was given Charles called on several of the willing helpers to carry down the old German chest, which had belonged to his father, Casper. It was so heavy that it took five men to carry it. The inn-keeper had it carried across the road. He then sat on it and calmly watched the destruction of his valuable property. His action at the time caused much comment. No information was vouchsafed. After the fire was subdued and the danger to the outbuilding over, Charles had the chest carefully carried to the house just east of the bridge, never leaving the chest out of his sight until it was again in a place of safety. The explanation to this was—the old German oaken chest was his bank, weighted down by the roleaux of gold and silver coin, which were stored between the folds of several old coverlids.

The house was at once rebuilt on the solid walls, which were unharmed by the fire, and on its completion enjoyed an increased patronage.

In the month of April, 1834, the Philadelphia and Columbia Railway was open for travel. For a time the Green Tree had been the eastern terminus for the stages. So far the Warren had not felt the effects of the new improvement. Within a month after the first train went down the road drawn by the "Black Hawk" matters changed. The stage coaches were withdrawn east of Columbia. It was the twentieth of May, a dark rainy day, when the last regular stage passed the Warren on its way eastward. The Fahnestocks, similar to many other tavern keepers who were off the railway, had no faith in its ultimate success. The various local stages still ran, so did the Pitt teams, but neither were accustomed to stop at the Warren, nor could the old tavernkeeper bring himself down to cater to that class of custom. For a while a stage was run from the West Chester intersection to the Warren for the benefit of such travelers who wanted to stop at the Warren, but the arrangement was soon discontinued. Charles Fahnestock, now well-advanced in years and disgusted with the existing state of affairs, turned the inn over to his son William, who had become a strict Presbyterian and member of the Great Valley Church, much against the wishes and advice of his "Uncle Andrew," who was wont to tell him that all of his plans would "go alee" unless he returned to the faith of his forefathers and kept the seventh day. William, however, turned a deaf ear to his relative, and became a prominent man in the church. Beside being active in all church matters, he was for some years the "precentor" and led the singing.

Wm. Fahnestock had presided over the inn not quite three years when his father was gathered to his people, and was buried with his father in the old family plot on the Valley hill, the Rev. Wm. Latta consigning the body to the grave. It is said that this was the last interment in the ground.

William now had full sway, and as he was a strong temperance man he at once stopped the sale of liquor, and to the surprise of the frequenters of the pike a new sign board appeared in front of the "Warren," not high up in the yoke as of yore, but flat in front of the porch. It was an oval sign hung on pivots and fastened with a hook. During six days of the week it read:

WARREN
HOTEL.

At sundown on Saturday the sign was turned and until Monday it read:

NOTHING
SABBATH.

The new departure did not meet with favor, and the patronage of the house rapidly decreased. The new host, in his temperance idea, eventually went so far as to cut down the large apple orchard which was in the field opposite the house, south of the pike. This was done so as to prevent the apples being used for cider. The year after the experiment of keeping a temperance hotel failed—summer boarders were tried with varying success. William also made several attempts to locate the traditionary coal mine of the Indian, shafts were sunk at different points on the South Valley hill, but were eventually abandoned. He also went extensively into the Morus Multicaulis craze* which ended in failure. It seemed, as if not only the glory of the house had departed, but that the prophecy of the old Seventh-day Baptist preacher, "Uncle Andrew," was coming true.† So in the next year, 1838, Wm. Fahnestock divided the tract up and sold it to various parties, the tavern and adjacent fields being bought by a Mr. Thompson, who kept it one year and then sold it to Professor Stille, of Philadelphia, who in turn sold it in 1846 to the present owners.

PREFATORY NOTE.

Of the interesting and attractive places in historic Bethlehem there is perhaps none which is more sought out by strangers and which we hold in greater veneration than the old Moravian Cemetery, "God's Acre," as our fathers called their burying ground.

Its central location, well kept walks, stately shade trees, rustic benches, and elevated position affording a fine view of the Lehigh Mountains, all combine to make it a pleasant resort for old and young. The solemn stillness which pervades the place, in contrast with the noise and commotion of business and travel on the adjoining thoroughfares, invites the passer-by to peaceful rest. The uniform simplicity of more than 2,600 graves arranged in parallel rows, with their plain tombstones and concise epitaphs marking the resting places of rich and poor, high and low alike, teaches an impressive lesson as to the common brotherhood of mortal man. Once a year, at the inspiring service held within its gates on Easter morning, towns-people and visitors gather in a vast concourse to give joyful expression to the faith in a blessed resurrection of all those who have died in the Lord. An additional interest attaching to this Cemetery lies in the remarkable mingling of races, the graves of men and women from different nationalities of Europe being interspersed with those of many Indians and Negroes who, through the labors of the Moravian Brethren, found salvation in Christ. The descendants of Bethlehem Moravian families, furthermore, can here trace their pedigree through a number of generations and find all the representative names of the past 170 years of the town's existence.

But the greatest attraction of this historic spot lies in the contemplation of the life records made by many of the men and women whose earthly remains have found a resting place here. Detailed biographies of all those prominent in the church and community, and a narration of the varied experience through which they passed, as outlined in the official Record of Interments, would fill several interesting volumes. For our purpose it will be sufficient to give brief abstracts of these biographies.

The original plot of the Cemetery, as laid out in 1742 and 1745, comprised the northwestern portion of the grounds only, the grave of Juliana Nitschmann, in the middle of the path, marking the center of the Cemetery; the first grave is that of John Mueller, who died on June 26, 1742, one day after the organization of the church at Bethlehem. We, therefore, begin at the northwest end, near Market Street, with Section A, Row I, and continue taking the Rows and Sections in regular order from west to east, and from north to south.

The dates after the names indicate the year of birth and death. When the death of a child occurred in the year in which it was born, but one date is given.

The Old Moravian Cemetery of Bethlehem, Pa.

SECTION A.

(Beginning at the north-west gate.)

ROW I.—MARRIED MEN.

1. NATHANIEL SEIDEL, 1718-82, a Bishop of the Moravian Church, and for twenty years the President of the American Provincial Board. He was born at Lauban, Silesia, on October 2, 1718, the son of a Bohemian emigrant, and learned the trade of cloth-weaving. Having found Jesus as his Saviour he joined the Moravian Church at Herrnhut in 1739, and came to Bethlehem in 1742 to engage in evangelistic work. He was appointed itinerant missionary among the Indians and white settlers, and to this end made many journeys, always on foot, laboring with great zeal and success. In 1748 he was ordained a Presbyterian. Five years later he was sent on an official visitation to the Danish West Indies, the next year to North Carolina (where he founded the church at Bethabara), and the following year to the mission in Surinam, S. A. In 1758 he was consecrated a Bishop, and after Zinzendorf's death became President of the Provincial Board of Elders in place of Bishop Spangenberg, who returned to Germany. He was married to Anna Joanna Piesch, a niece of Anna Nitschmann. They left no children. He departed this life on May 17, 1782.
2. JOHN ETTWEIN, 1721-1802. He was born at Freudenstadt, Würtemberg, on June 29, 1721, a descendant of protestant refugees from Savoy. Having joined the Moravian Church in 1739, he soon distinguished himself by his zeal and sound judgment, and was appointed to various offices in the churches of Germany and England. Coming to America in 1754, he here found a field of labor for which he was particularly qualified. For the next thirty years he served with unwearied energy in various places and capacities, among whites and Indians, attending both to the temporal and spiritual interests of the Church. In 1766 he became the assistant of Bishop Nathaniel Seidel and from that time on, and especially during the stormy time of the Revolutionary War, he was the accredited representative of the Moravian Church before the Government. In 1784 he was con- secrated a Bishop and became the successor of Nath. Seidel as President of the Governing Board of the Moravian Church in America. He lived to the age of 80 years. A street in Bethlehem is named after him. His wife, Joanna M. Kymbel, preceded him to the grave in 1789 (Section C, VI, 16); one married son died in 1798. One daughter married J. D. Kliest, a justice of the peace in Bethlehem.

3. DAVID DIGEON, 1722-77, a shoemaker from French Switzerland. He came to Bethlehem in 1743 in the ship Little Strength, with 120 Moravian Brethren and Sisters. His wife Mary, maiden name Bardsley, was from England. During the last twenty years of his life he was demented.
  4. JOHN TOBIAS HIRTE, 1707-70. He was born at Eybau, Saxony. He was converted while serving in the Saxon army, and Moravian Brethren purchased his freedom. He proved an efficient workman in building the first houses of the Church at Herrnhag, and was master carpenter at the building of Nazareth Hall. His wife, whose maiden name was Klose, died in 1767.
  5. GEORGE CHRIST, 1701-69, born at Neuhofmansdorf, Moravia, was spiritually awakened by the preaching of the carpenter and missionary Christian David. He married Anna Maria Schroller, and coming with her to Bethlehem in 1743, he found employment on the Church farm.
  6. MARTIN HIRT, 1729-60, born at Leinbach, Alsace. He came to Pennsylvania as a child, with his parents, and joined the Church, but proved a backslider, and remained rough and worldly, until he lost his eyesight and became a paralytic, when he repented of his ways. He was married to M. Beroth.
  7. JOHN GOTTLÖB KLEMM, 1690-1762, born near Dresden, Saxony. After attending the University of Leipzig for a short time, he became an organ-builder in Dresden and was married. Count Zinzendorf, who had rented the lower story of his house, engaged him to repair the organ at Berthelsdorf, near Herrnhut, and he went there to live; but in 1735 he emigrated with the "Schwenkfelders" to Pennsylvania. Here his wife died. He then returned to the Moravian Church, built an organ for the Nazareth Hall Chapel, and for a while taught also at the Hall.
  8. MICHAEL SCHNALL, 1715-63, a stocking-weaver from Speier, in the Palatinate. He had been a sergeant in the French army and heard of Herrnhut from his fellow-soldiers. Was received into the Church at Heerendyk, Holland, and came to Bethlehem with three companions in September of 1741, when the first house only had been built. He married in 1747, and left three sons. One of them, John Schnall, served as a missionary at Fairfield, Canada.

9. SAMUEL JOHANNES, 1730-63, of the Malay race, and the first Moravian convert from the Island of Ceylon, in the East Indies. Christian Dober, a surgeon on that Island, who himself was converted by the preaching of the Moravian missionaries, in 1742 brought him to Marienborn, Germany, where he was baptized. In 1754 he came to Bethlehem, and here married the widow Magdalene, m.n. Mingo, a colored woman.
10. ANDREW SCHOUT (Schaut), 1700-63, a seaman, born at Copenhagen, Denmark. Having risen to the rank of captain of a Dutch man-of-war, he in 1737 entered the service of the adventurer King Theodoros of Corsica (Baron Neuhof), who made him commander of a ten-gun-ship. Later he was first mate on a Russian admiral's ship. Meeting the Moravian Brethren at Reval, Russia, he became converted through their testimony, and was engaged as mate on their mission ship Irene, under Captain N. Garrison. In 1757 this ship was captured by a French privateer, and Schaut spent nine months in a French prison. Finally coming to Bethlehem, he served as constable and visitor's guide. His wife, m.n. Jungblut, whom he married in 1744, lived but a few years.
11. JOHN HENRY SEGNER, 1714-63, born at Steinhude, in Schaumburg-Lippe, Germany. A tailor by trade, he became body servant of Count Christian Rhenatus Zinzendorf. Later he served in the mission household on the Island of St. Thomas, W. I., and finally in the "clergy-house" at Nazareth and at Bethlehem. He was married to Christina Frey.
12. GEORGE PARTSCH, 1719-65, born at Langendorf, Upper Silesia. In 1743 he married Susan L. Eller at Herrnhag, twenty-four couples being joined in wedlock on the same day, all of whom came to Bethlehem in that year. In 1755 he and his wife were appointed to Gnadenhütten on the Mahony, Pa., where six days after their arrival the missionaries were massacred by hostile Indians. Partsch crawled through a window, and his wife leaping down from the burning house escaped with him. Both afterwards served in the "Economy" or common household of the Bethlehem congregation, and of the mission in St. Thomas.
13. WILLIAM ANGEL, 1729-69, born at Hanixerton, Wiltshire, England. Came to America in 1754 and was sent to Bethabara, N. C. After the death of his first wife, m.n. Holder, he returned to Bethlehem and took charge of the Burnside farm near Bethlehem. He died of small-pox.
14. RICHARD POPPLEWELL, 1718-71, born in Yorkshire, England; was brought here with three companions for the purpose of conducting a - cloth-weaving and fulling establishment. In 1757 he married Elizabeth Cornwell. He died suddenly, from a stroke of apoplexy.

15. GEORGE SCHNEIDER, 1716-73, born at Zauchtenthal, Moravia. He came to Bethlehem in 1742, and four years later married Gertrude Petersen. For some years he farmed the church-land at Nazareth and the Nain tract near Bethlehem.
  16. H. W. GOTTLIEB VON VIPPACH, 1713-73, a German nobleman, born near Gnadenfrei, Silesia, and early in connection with the Church. After living in various Moravian settlements in Germany, he resolved in 1769 to emigrate to America. His wife had died at Herrnhut.
  17. EPHRAIM CULVER (Colver), 1717-75, born at Lebanon, Connecticut. Coming to Pennsylvania in 1753 he built him a grist-mill north of the Blue Mountains. After the Indians had burned his house and mill, he moved to Nazareth and became landlord of "The Rose" Inn. Later he lived at Schoeneck. He was thrice married.
  18. ROBERT HUSSEY, 1713-75, born at Wiltshire, England. In 1743 he accompanied the itinerant missionary Leonard Schnell on a journey from Bethlehem to Georgia, on foot, proclaiming the Gospel in many places, where there had never been any preaching before. After his return he was appointed teacher in the school at Oley, Pa. He married Martha Wilkes.
  19. CHRISTIAN FROEHLICH, 1715-76, born at Felsberg, Hesse Cassel, learned the trade of a baker and entered the service of Count Zinzendorf in that capacity. In 1740 he came to America, in company with Bishop David Nitschmann and others, and in the Spring of 1741 helped in the founding of Bethlehem and the building of the first large house (Gemeinhaus). He also dug the first grave on this cemetery for John Mueller (A, VII, 12). After being married to M. E. Robins, he served the Church for a while as a missionary in St. Thomas, and among the Indians at Pachgatgoch, Conn. In 1752 he entered the employ of a sugar refiner in New York, where his wife died. He returned to Bethlehem in March, 1776, and died a month later.
  20. JOHN BECHTEL, 1690-1777, born at Weinheim in the Palatinate, emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1726, settling at Germantown, where, though unordained and simply a pious mechanic, he officiated as the minister of the Reformed Church for 16 years. In 1742 he was ordained by Bishop Nitschmann, but four years later, being dismissed from the Reformed Church, he removed to Bethlehem, and served in the "Brethren's Economy" as turner. He was also President of the Bethlehem Board of Trustees, attaining an age of 87 years.
  21. JOHN BRANDMUELLER, 1704-77, from Basle, Switzerland, a minister; arrived here in 1743, and two years later was ordained a Deacon of

- the Church. Served at Swatara, Allemængel, Donegal and Friedenthal, until after the departure of his wife, when he retired to Bethlehem. His father had foretold him that he would meet his death by drowning, and after two narrow escapes during his life he was actually found dead in the mill-race, where he had gone to bathe his head, as was his custom.
22. DANIEL KUNKLER, SR., 1719-77, shoemaker, born at St. Gall, Switzerland. Was twice cited before the government in his home country, because he spoke against "the Decree of Reprobation" and proclaimed Christ as the "Saviour of all men." Here in America he found employment at the Bethlehem ferry, at the Inn, and in the carpentershop of the congregation.
  23. JOSEPH MOELLER, 1713-78, born at Zittau, Saxony. He came here with the first "Sea Congregation," in 1742, and was employed at Nazareth, Gnadenthal and Bethlehem as gardener. He married Catharine Koch, and had two sons.
  24. JOHN CHR. RICHTER, 1712-78, a cabinetmaker from Saxe-Altenburg. He was married to Charlotte Eisen, who died in 1764, after the birth of her fifth child. Richter was a sacristan for 28 years.
  25. JAMES LANGLEY, 1708-78, an Englishman, a friend of the Church, but not a member. Being old and invalid he came to see his daughters in Bethlehem, who faithfully nursed him until his death.
  26. ANDREW, a negro, born in Ibo, West Africa, sold as a slave from place to place. In 1741 a New York Jew bought him and wanted to sell him to the Island of Madeira. Andrew being very anxious to remain, was advised to pray to God for help. The next day the New York merchant, Thomas Noble, one of the first members of the Moravian Church in that city, bought him. He came to Bethlehem, where he was baptized in 1746, Mr. Noble having given him to Bishop Spangenberg as a present. He married Magdalene, a native of Guinea, and had three children, † 1779.
  27. JOHN MATTHEW GRAF, 1747-79, born at Lancaster, Pa., a hatter by trade. Was married to Margaret Moore. In 1776 he became lieutenant of a company of militia, taking an active part in the Revolutionary War. He came here to be cured of a serious ailment.
  28. ANDREW BROCKSCH, 1703-79, born in Silesia. He was a widower since 1758, his wife Anna, m.n. Helwig, having departed in that year. For more than 16 years he served the town as a faithful night-watchman.
  29. VALENTINE HAIDT, 1700-80, from Danzig, Prussia. In 1724 he was married in London to Cath. Compigni, with whom in 1774 he celebrated a joyful golden jubilee. He served the Church in various capacities, but especially by executing many oil-paintings of our Saviour's birth, life, sufferings and death, for the use of the churches at Herrnhag, Herrnhut, London and at Bethlehem; many of the portraits preserved in the Archives are his handiwork.

30. CHRISTIAN EGGERT, 1714-80, born in the Uckermark, not far from Berlin. Having gone to Berbice in South America, in 1742, as superintendent of a plantation, he there met the missionary Theo. Schuman, was converted, and started for Bethlehem. Here he did faithful service for many years as a gardener. He was married to Apollonia Grosch, and left two sons and a daughter.
31. FREDERICK BOECKEL, 1716-80, born in the Palatinate. He came with his wife to Pennsylvania in 1736, settling in Berks County, heard Count Zinzendorf preach, and was one of the founders of the church at Heidelberg. Later he was employed in the school at Germantown and on the farms at Christiansbrunn and Bethlehem, at which place after the common household ceased he took charge of the farm entirely. Of his first marriage there were one son and five daughters; of his second marriage, one son.
32. JOHN JONES, 1714-81, a blacksmith from Skippack, Pa.; moved into the neighborhood of Bethlehem in 1749, and bought a farm. He left five sons and fifteen grandchildren.
33. NICHOLAS GARRISON, 1701-81, born on Staten Island, N. Y., went to sea in his thirteenth year, and did not return home for eight years, during which time he was three times made a prisoner of war. Having married after his father's death, he again followed seafaring. In 1736 he met Bishop Spangenberg in the West Indies, who came in Garrison's ship to New York. The next year Garrison taking sick on the Island of St. Thomas was tenderly nursed by the missionary Frederick Martin. In 1740 he was captured by a Spanish man-of-war and held as prisoner on the Island of Cuba for six months. In 1743 he went with Count Zinzendorf to Europe and joined the Church at Marienborn. The same year he brought 132 Moravians to America in The Little Strength, and soon after was twice captured by the Spanish and the French. Taking command of the missionary vessel of the Brethren, Irene, he continued to serve them as captain until 1756, going as far as Greenland and Surinam. Retiring from the sea he lived for some time at Niesky, Germany, but returned to America in 1763, and served the town of Bethlehem as cicerone or visitors' guide. He departed in the 81st year of his life. Garrison Street is named after him. He was twice married, and had twelve children.

34. JOHN HENRY MILLER, 1702-82, from Waldeck, Germany, a printer by trade. Came to America in 1741, with Zinzendorf, and set type for Benjamin Franklin in Philadelphia. The next year he accompanied Zinzendorf on his first journey to the Delaware Indians. Returning to Europe he founded the first Moravian printing office at Marienborn, and coming again to Philadelphia in 1751 he established his own printing office. He continued serving the public and the Church until 1780, but suffered many losses during the Revolutionary War. The last two years of his life he spent at Bethlehem, where his wife had departed in 1779.
35. MICHAEL HABERLAND, 1698-1782, born at Schoenau, Moravia; emigrated with 21 other persons to Herrnhut, and from there in 1734 proceeded to Georgia, as one of the nine Brethren who took up their abode near the Savannah River, as colonists and missionaries. Returning to Germany in 1740, he married A. H. Jähne, and found employment as a carpenter. Since 1749 he lived at Bethlehem and Nazareth, working faithfully at his trade as a mechanic.
36. DANIEL KUNKLER, 1753-92, son of Daniel Kunkler (A, I, 22), born at Nazareth; was engaged in the tobacco business, and after his father's death took charge of his store. He married Mary Colver.
37. LUDWIG STOTZ, 1710-82, from Lauffen, Württemberg, a weaver and farmer, who came here in 1750. He was married to Cath. Wolfer and had four children.
38. HENRY FERDINAND BECK, 1710-83, born at Pfuellingen, Württemberg; learned the baker's trade, and after the death of his parents emigrated to Georgia. There he married S. Barbara Knauer, with whom he had nine children, of whom five survived him. One son, David, died as a missionary in St. Thomas. Having become acquainted with the Moravian Brethren in Georgia, he followed them to Bethlehem, and served as a minister in various congregations. He was ordained a Deacon of the Church in 1754. Epileptic troubles compelled him to retire from active life in 1767.
39. JAMES HALL, 1724-83, born at Bradford, Yorkshire, England, was converted under the preaching of the Brethren Cennick and Ingham, and came to Pennsylvania in 1756. Being a cloth-weaver and fuller by trade, he found employment at the fulling-mill in this town. He was twice married.
40. JOHN GEORGE KLEIN, 1705-83, from Kirchartd in the Palatinate, emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1727, married Anna Bender, and settled on the spot where afterwards Lititz was built. Being spiritually awakened he helped to erect a chapel by the side of his farm, and in 1755 ceded his farm for the laying out of the town, and moved to Bethlehem.

41. ANTON SCHMIDT, 1725-93, a tinsmith, born near Pressburg, Hungary. His parents emigrated with him for conscience sake to America. He came to Bethlehem in 1746; was married first to A. C. Riedt, who bore him three sons, and then to Beata Ysselsteyn, with whom he had six children.

ROW II.—MOSTLY UNMARRIED MEN.

1. GEORGE HENRY LOSKIEL, 1740-1814, Episcopus Fratrum, born at Angermünde in Courland, Russia, the son of a Lutheran divine. He studied theology, and joining the Moravian Church filled various important offices in the ministry of the Church in Germany and Russia. He also wrote a history of the Indian Mission and "Etwas für's Herz." In 1771 he married Magdalene Barlach, of Wolmar, Livonia. They had no children. In 1802 he was consecrated a Bishop, and came to America, having been appointed President of the "Provincial Helper's Conference." In 1812 he was elected a member of the "Unity's Elders Conference" in Europe, but was unable to leave America on account of the war and failing health.
2. HENRY WILLIAM SCHEMES, 1726-77, born at Urholdsen, Germany, the son of an officer of the army. He went to St. Croix, West Indies, in order to escape military service in Denmark, and became overseer on a plantation. There he met the missionary Frederick Martin and became a converted man. In 1752 he removed to Bethlehem. After some years he was sent out to the mission in Jamaica and later to the mission in Surinam, in both of which he assisted in the work, mainly in temporal affairs. In 1775 he retired to Bethlehem.
3. CHRISTIAN CHRISTENSEN, 1718-77, a shoemaker, born at Christiania, Norway. He spent some years at Herrnhag and in Holland, and came to Bethlehem in 1762. He was unmarried.
4. CHRISTOPHER HENRY BAERMAYER, 1722-74, son of the burgess and town-captain of Feuchtwangen, Franconia, Germany. He taught for a time at Nazareth Hall.
5. JOHN GODFREY ENGEL, 1755-74, a Bethlehem youth, and a shoemaker by trade. He died of consumption.
6. STEPHEN VOLZ, 1747-74, an Alsatian; came to America as a child with his parents. He was an invalid.
7. BALTHASAR KOEHLER, 1740-58, a pious youth, born in Skippack Township. He moved to Bethlehem one year before his death.
8. CASPER BOECKEL, 1742-58, born at Heidelberg, Pa. He attended the Moravian schools at Germantown and Macungy, before coming to Bethlehem.

9. PAUL JENS SCHERBECK, 1726-58, from Holstein, Germany. Came to Bethlehem in 1750, with 80 other "Single Brethren" from Herrnhag.
10. JOACHIM BUSSE, 1736-58, born at Reval, Livonia; attended the Moravian school at Lindheim and learned the tinker trade; quiet and of retiring disposition.
11. JOHN RODGERS, 1704-58, born at Portsmouth, England. In his twelfth year he came to New York and spent eight years with a farmer, but found this manner of life too dull, and became a sailor, and later a Spanish soldier. Being stationed at Oran, in Africa, he was taken prisoner and sold to the Dey of Algiers as a Christian slave. Here, in 1746, Chas. Nottbeck, a Moravian missionary, brought him the message of spiritual redemption in Christ. When three years later he was ransomed, he joined the Brethren as soon as he could find them, and eventually came to Bethlehem. He spoke six languages, and translated several Moravian hymns into the Spanish tongue.
12. JOHN KAPP, 1735-59, a youth from Switzerland. He led a happy life of simple-hearted faith and Christian fellowship with his Brethren.

31. ADAM HOSFELD, 1719-66, a saddler from Saxe-Meiningen, was converted by the reading of Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress. He served

- here as foreman in the saddler-shop, almoner and visitors' guide, being at the same time a member of the Board of Elders.
32. JACOB SCHNEIDER, 1708-77, a Würtemberger with a checkered career, who had spent much of his life as a peddler and as a soldier, both in Germany and in Holland, and then repenting of his sins had gone about with a show-case representing the Saviour's sufferings in Gethsemane. He confessed himself "the greatest sinner of the Single Brethren's Choir, but the Saviour has had mercy on me."
  33. NIELS MOOS, 1727-77, a native of the Island of Moos near Jutland, Denmark. Worked here on the farm of the Brethren's House.
  34. JOHN EHRHARD, 1732-77, had been a soldier in Hesse-Cassel. A sea-captain took him to America, but compelled him then to serve three and one half years for his passage money. He closed his life here as a painter.
  35. J. MICHAEL RIPPEL, 1722-77, born at Zeulenrode, near Baireuth, Germany. In 1758 he made the beginning of the "Economy of Single Brethren" at Lititz, and since 1772 served as cook in the Brethren's House at Bethlehem.
  36. JOHN ETTWEIN, 1758-77, a faithful son of Bishop John Ettwein. Owing to the establishment of the Hospital here, during the Revolutionary War, typhoid fever became epidemic. John E. nursed the sick for seven weeks, until he himself was taken with the fever and died.
  37. JOHN ANTON SEGNER, 1754-78, a shoemaker, born at Nazareth. His father, John Henry Segner, died at Gnadenthal, near Nazareth.
  38. LUDWIG STOTZ, 1754-78, born at Gnadenthal, and educated in the Moravian schools; a hatter by trade.
  39. CHRISTIAN STIEMER, 1720-87, born in Preussisch Holland, Germany, was foreman in the shoemaker shop of the Brethren's House and a member of the Board of Trustees.
  40. JOHN FREDERICK BECK, 1751-88, born in Bethlehem, went to North Carolina as a house carpenter, and assisted in the establishment of Moravian settlements there.
  41. JOHN JACOB FRIES, 1708-93, born at Odense, Denmark. He studied theology in Copenhagen and taught in the Moravian Theological Seminary at Barby, Saxony. Coming to this country in 1753, he was appointed chaplain of the Single Brethren at Christiansbrunn and ordained a Deacon of the Church. He began the work which led to the organization of the Moravian congregation at Schoeneck, near Nazareth, and spent the remainder of his long life in preaching and teaching at Bethlehem and neighborhood, and as assistant in the city of Philadelphia. He remained single.

ROW III.—MARRIED AND SINGLE MEN.

1. FRANCIS THOMAS, 1732-1822, born in Württemberg, cabinet-maker, died at the advanced age of 89 years. His wife Anna C. Graeff, died in 1815, leaving no children. Well beloved and generally known as "Daddy" Thomas, he acted as visitors' guide for many years.

ROW VIII.—MARRIED MEN.

1. DAVID NITSCHMANN, born December 27, 1696, at Zauchtenthal, Moravia, emigrated to Herrnhut in 1724, and at once engaged in evangelistic work in Germany and Russia. In 1732 D. Nitschmann and Leonard Dober went to St. Thomas, W. I., as the first Moravian Missionaries among the heathen. In 1735 he was consecrated the first Bishop of the renewed Moravian Church, by Bishops Jablonsky, of Berlin, and Sitkovius, of Poland, the two survivors of the ancient Moravian Episcopate, and the following year he led a Moravian colony to Georgia. In 1740 he came to Pennsylvania, bought 500 acres, the tract of land on which Bethlehem now stands, and after having served in this place and elsewhere with much acceptance for 32 years, he departed this life October 8, 1772. He was married first in 1726 to Rosina Schindler, and after her death, to the widow of the West Indian Missionary Fred. Martin, Maria, m.n. Leinbach.

2. AMADEUS PAUL THRANE, 1718-76. He was born at Aalborg, Jutland, studied theology, served the Church at Herrnhag, Germany, especially among the "Single Brethren," and came to Bethlehem in 1761, with Bishop Nath. Seidel. From that year on until his death, he was the eloquent "Ordinarius" or pastor of the Bethlehem Moravian Congregation, laboring with much success and acceptance among old and young. He was also a member of the Provincial Board and much interested in the Indian mission.
3. TIMOTHY HORSFIELD, 1708-73; born in Liverpool, England; butcher; came to America in his 17th year and, in 1731, married Mary Doughty, of Long Island. Having made the acquaintance of D. Nitschmann and Peter Boehler, he entertained many Moravian missionaries on their way from and to Europe and the West Indies. In 1749 he moved to Bethlehem and was appointed the first Justice of the Peace, which office he held for 12 years. Three children survived him.
4. DIETRICH ERNST WALTHER, 1722-69, a shoemaker, born at Zelle, Hanover. When 19 years old, he was pressed into the service of the Prussian army under Frederic the Great. Here at Bethlehem he worked at his trade, having come to America in 1705 with the colony led by J. Jorde.
5. DAVID NITSCHMANN, Senior, 1676-1758, familiarly known as father Nitschmann, the uncle of Bishop D. Nitschmann and the father of Anna, the second wife of Count Zinzendorf. He was born at Zauchtenthal, Moravia. Like his father before him, he became a leader in the evangelical services held in secret among the descendants of the Ancient Brethren's Church. He was imprisoned as an "arch-heretic," but escaped and went to Herrnhut, Saxony. In 1734 he was sent to St. Croix, W. I., as a member of a missionary colony, but returned after the death of his wife Anna, m.n. Schneider. In March, 1741, he helped to cut down the first tree for the building of Bethlehem, and for many years superintended the affairs of the young town in the capacity of "Trustee" of the Moravian Estates.

6. J. C. FREDERICK CAMMERHOFF, 1721-51, the youngest Bishop of the Moravian Church. He was born at Hillersleben, Saxony. He became acquainted with the Moravian Brethren while studying theology at the University of Jena, was private secretary of Count Zinzendorf, and in 1746 was appointed superintendent of the work in Pennsylvania. To this end he was consecrated a Bishop in London. The same year he married the Russian Baroness Anna von Pahlen. Here at Bethlehem he labored with great zeal, and also made many perilous journeys to the Indians, sacrificing his young life in the service.
7. JOHN (alias Tschop (Tschoop)), with the Indian name of Wasamapa, a prominent Mohican living at Shekomeko, near the Hudson, in New York State. He was converted under the preaching of the Moravian missionary C. H. Rauch and baptized on April 16, 1742. Subsequently he became an Evangelist among his people. In 1745 these Christian Mohicans were driven from their homes and came to Bethlehem; John and other Indians soon after died of small-pox. He departed this life August 27, 1746, much lamented by his people and by the white Brethren.
8. THOMAS, otherwise called Pechtowappid, a Mohican from Shekomeko, who was baptized on August 11, 1742, by C. H. Rauch. Coming to Bethlehem, he served as warden of the small Indian congregation, and died of small-pox, August 15, 1746.
9. ISAAC, with the Indian name of Otapawanamen, of the Wampanos tribe, from Shekomeko. Lived at the Indian settlement of Friedenshütten near Bethlehem and departed this life on August 2, 1746.
10. PETRUS, known before his baptism as Nacasabamit, a Mohican, died of small-pox, 1746.
11. JOSEPH, a Mohican, died of small-pox, July 21, 1746.
12. JOHN GOLD, 1678-1745, born at Zauchtenthal, Moravia, and at one time the magistrate of that village; emigrated to Herrnhut in 1727, proceeded with a Moravian colony to St. Croix, but was recalled. Later he served on St. Thomas, W. I., and spent his declining years here in retirement. His daughter Anna married Dr. Krieglstein, a Moravian medical missionary who spent many years imprisoned in Russia.
13. DAVID ZEISBERGER, 1696-1744, from Zauchtenthal, Moravia, the father of the distinguished missionary of the same name. In 1736 he, with his wife Rosina, came over to Georgia and in 1740 proceeded from there to Pennsylvania, where Zeisberger became one of the founders of the town of Bethlehem.
14. MICHAEL TANNEBERGER, 1704-44, a married man from Moravia, and a shoemaker by trade.

15. LUCAS (alias Quawatschonit), a Wampanos Indian, from Pachgatgoch, Connecticut, the father of Rachel Post, the first wife of the missionary Fr. Post. He came to Bethlehem in 1747, together with a large company of Christian Indians who were driven out from their homes in Connecticut; died the same year. The funeral address was translated for the Indians by the interpreter Abraham.

17. JOHN BROWNFIELD, 1714-52, born at Greenwich, England, was brought up in the family of General Oglethorpe, in London, became acquainted with the Moravian Brethren in Georgia, and moved to Bethlehem in 1745, where he married Cath. Kearney. He was ordained a Deacon of the Church in 1749.
18. CHRISTOPHER HENCKE, 1698-1752, from Seifhennersdorf, Saxony; lived for 11 years at Herrnhut, and came to Bethlehem in 1743 with the second "Sea Congregation."
19. GEORGE HANTSCH, 1690-1754, born at Ottendorf, Saxony; tailor; came to Bethlehem in 1743 with his wife Regina, m.n. Dressler, and two children. Served as lay evangelist in eastern Pennsylvania.
20. DANIEL BRODHEAD, 1693-1755, "one of his Majesty's Justices" at Dansbury, Pa., and a faithful friend of the Brethren. Died here, while on a visit for the purpose of getting cured of a disease. He was buried on this cemetery with special marks of grateful love on the part of the Church.
21. JAMES BURNSIDE, 1708-55, born at Athboy, Meath Co., Ireland; became acquainted with the Brethren in Georgia, and in 1743 followed them to Bethlehem. After the death of his first wife, he married M. Windover, m.n. Peterson, of New York, and made evangelistic tours through New England and Jersey, being stationed for a while at Dansbury. Later he bought a farm near Bethlehem, and served his country twice as the representative of Northampton County in the General Assembly. His funeral was attended by a large concourse of people from the neighborhood.
22. JOHN REINHARD RONNER, 1698-1756, born near Strassburg, Alsace, a button-maker by trade; came here in 1742 with Nathaniel Seidel. He was ordained a Deacon in 1743, and served with his wife Elizabeth, m.n. Fislser, at Tulpehocken, Philadelphia, Nazareth and al. He also nursed the Indians during the small-pox epidemic. In 1750 he was appointed to the mission of St. Thomas, whence he returned in 1755, afflicted with dropsy.
23. JOHN LEIGHTON, 1706-56, a Scotchman, born at Dundee on the Firth of Tay. He was converted under the preaching of Bro. Molther in

- London, came to America in 1743 with 120 Moravian colonists, and served in the schools and as a Home Missionary, preaching the Gospel to the poor especially. His last appointment was on the Morris river, in West Jersey.
24. SIMEON, 1680-1756, a Delaware Indian from Oak Harbour, New Jersey, formerly a noted witch-doctor. He bitterly repented of his heathen practices, and though almost blind, regularly attended the services of the Christian Indians. He was at Gnadenuetten on the Mahony the evening of the massacre and spent two nights hidden in the forest, until found by Bishop Spangenberg.
  25. JOHN PETER, 1703-57, a Wampanos Indian, born near New London, Conn., was a sailor for twelve years and given to strong drink. Received baptism at Shekomeko in 1748; died of small-pox.
  26. JOHN BERNARD MUELLER, 1716-57, a native of Württemberg; joined the Church at Herrnhag and came to Bethlehem in 1749, with a colony of single Brethren led by John Nitschmann, 28 of whom were married on July 15 of the same year. He founded the cloth-weaving manufactory at Bethlehem and Nazareth.
  27. MICHAEL, an Indian of the Minisink (Monsey) nation, some seventy years old; was converted and baptized in the great awakening at Shekomeko in 1742, and driven out with his Brethren in 1746. He spent nine years at Gnadenhütten on the Mahony; after the massacre he came to Bethlehem to live in the Brethren's House. † July, 1758.
  28. J. C. GOTTFRIED ENGEL, 1723-59, born at Treuenbriezen, Brandenburg, was converted through the singing and testimony of a blind beggar. He came to Pennsylvania in 1749, and was employed as a Home Missionary at Lebanon, York and other places; ordained a Deacon in 1754. He married A. M. Nitsch.
  29. JOHN PHILIP MEURER, 1708-60, originally a shoemaker from Ingweiler, Alsace. He arrived with the first "Sea Congregation" on the snow Catharine, with his wife Christiana, m.n. Kraft; was ordained at Tulpehocken and had charge of a Lutheran congregation until 1746. Later he served in the churches at Donegal, Lebanon, Swatara and York.
  30. GEORGE OHNEBERG, 1720-60, born at Kempten, Bavaria; came here in 1743, from Herrnhag, with his wife Susan; filled several appointments in Pennsylvania, and was then called to Santa Cruz, W. I., where he labored for seven years as a missionary with zeal and success. He had one son, John George, and one daughter, Sarah.
  31. JOHN HENRY MOELLER, 1710-60, born on the island of Fühnen, Denmark; was converted at the age of 25 and joined the Moravian Church at Pilgerruh. Here in Pennsylvania he served in the schools and in the ministry at Heidelberg, Lynn and Oley. He was or-

- ained a Deacon in 1758. His last office was that of financial manager (Vorsteher) of the Bethlehem Boarding School.
32. ABRAHAM REINKE, 1712-60, born at Stockholm, Sweden. He studied at the College of Brandenburg and the University of Jena; was appointed tutor of Count Christian Renatus Zinzendorf and served in the ministry at St. Petersburg, as also in England and Holland. Coming to Bethlehem in 1744, he was soon after ordained Presbyter and served as pastor in the churches at Nazareth, Bethlehem, Philadelphia and Lancaster, until a pulmonary affection compelled him to give up preaching. He was a gifted speaker. His wife, Susanna, m.n. Stockberg, died in 1758.
  33. JOHN JORDE, 1706-60, a carpenter from Hirschfelde, Silesia. He joined the Church at Herrnhut, and came to Bethlehem in 1743, with his wife, Margaret, m.n. Horne, and a colony of 36 married couples, most of whom settled at Nazareth and neighborhood to farm the land belonging to the Church there. For a while he served also as lay evangelist.

(Originally the center of the Cemetery.)

JULIANA NITSCHMANN, m.n. Haberland, 1712-51, born at Schoenau, Moravia, a descendant of faithful members of the Ancient Bohemian and Moravian Church of the Brethren. She emigrated to Herrnhut in 1729 with her parents, and was one of the young women who on May 4, 1730, covenanted with each other to consecrate themselves wholly to the service of the Lord. In 1734 she was wedded to the Rev. (later Bishop) John Nitschmann, and became the mother of seven children, of whom four sons, Jonathan, Joshua, John, and Immanuel, survived her. From 1734-48 she served with her husband in various important positions of the Church in Europe, and in 1749 they were appointed to the work in America, and arrived at Bethlehem bringing with them a congregation of 120 Moravians. She was honored by the title of "the mother of Pennsylvania," and when she departed this life, on February 22, 1751, her remains were interred in what was then the center of the Cemetery, as a mark of special honor and respect.

SECTION C.

ROW I.—MARRIED WOMEN.

1. ANNA MARIA LAWATSCH, Nov. 17, 1712-Jan. 20, 1760. She was the daughter of Tobias Demuth, born at Carlsdorf, Moravia, and emigrated to Herrnhut in 1729. She was a woman of rare social and spiritual gifts; lived in the family of Count Zinzendorf and was ordained Deaconess. In 1738 she became the wife of the Rev. A. A. Lawatsch, with whom she served in various offices and places with signal acceptance and success, particularly in the capacity of "general elder," or spiritual adviser of the female portion of the Church. In 1732 she and her husband were called to Pennsylvania, where her work again was prominently in the cure and care of souls. She assisted in the founding of Lititz, and in 1757 led a colony of newly married persons to the Moravian settlements in the Wachovia, N. C. She left but one daughter.
2. ANNA ELIZABETH BOECKEL, m.n. Rohrbach, 1710-71, born at Carlstadt, in the Palatinate. In 1736 she married Fred. Boeckel, and the same year emigrated with him to America, settling near Reading. She was converted in 1741, under the preaching of Count Zinzendorf, and moving into the Moravian settlements, she and her husband found employment in the "Economy," or common household of those days. Since 1761 she served also as a midwife. She left six children.
3. RACHEL BOEMPER, m.n. Baumgart, 1701-69, born at Marmeltown, N. Y. In her 24th year she married Isaac Ysselsteyn, and came with him to Pennsylvania, settling on the Ysselsteyn farm south of the Lehigh River. After the Moravians had founded Bethlehem and her husband had departed this life, she, in 1745, moved to Bethlehem with her six daughters, a servant (Jacque van der Merk), and the negress

- Hannah. In 1748 she married Abraham Boemper, and during the last 20 years of her life served with him in the Church. (A, III, 42.)
4. MARIA HIRTE, m.n. Klose, 1710-67; born at Roesnitz, in Silesia. In 1743 she married Tobias Hirte, at Herrnhag, and the same year came with him to America. They lived successively at Nazareth, Gnadenthal and Bethlehem. (See A, I, 4.)
  5. ANNA STOLL, 1718-66, born at Balgheim, principality of Oettingen, Germany. She was married to John Stoll in 1737, and came to America in 1749, with John Nitschman's Colony. She worked on the farm at Gnadenthal and at Bethlehem. She had eleven children.
  6. AGNES POST, an Indian woman of the tribe of the Unanamiyack (Delaware). In 1748 she was baptized at Bethlehem by Bishop Cammerhoff, and on Sept. 24 of the same year married the missionary Fred. Post. His first wife, Rachel, also an Indian, had died in 1747. She died at Friedenshütten, near Bethlehem, on July 8, 1751, of consumption.
  7. THEODORA, whose Indian name was "a Techtanoah," grandmother of Rachel Post (the first Indian wife of the missionary). She moved to Friedenshütten, near Bethlehem, and was baptized four hours before her death, Oct. 16, 1747.
  8. MARY SHAW, m.n. Jones, departed on Sept. 29, 1746, at Walpack, beyond the Blue Mountains, after giving birth to a little boy, who expired soon after his mother. The bodies were brought to Bethlehem for interment, under the accompaniment of many friends from Walpack.
  9. SALOME, wife of the Indian helper Joshua, from Shekomeko, Elder of the Indian congregation at Friedenshütten. She died of small-pox Sept. 16, 1746, after having been delivered of a boy one week before.
  10. ZIPPORAH (alias Wawottakkem), wife of the Indian Nathaniel, died at Friedenshütten, Aug. 23, 1746.
  11. MAGDALENA, wife of the Indian Zaccheus, died in childbed, July 20, 1746.
  12. ELIZABETH HENCKE, wife of Christopher Hencke, from Zittau, Saxony; died Oct. 10, 1744, and was buried the following day.
  13. ANNA ANTON, 1724-44, born at Zauchtenthal, Moravia; departed this life after an illness of sixteen weeks, in the 21st year of her age.
  14. JOANNA OKELY, m.n. Robins, 1715-45, born in Philadelphia, of Quaker parentage; was awakened through the preaching of George Whitefield, and baptized by Zinzendorf in 1743. The same year she married John Okely, scrivener and conveyancer for the Moravian Economy, and later a Justice of the Peace.
  15. ROSINA ZEISBERGER, widow of David Zeisberger, who preceded her to the grave by one year and a half. They were both from Moravia,

- emigrated to Herrnhut in 1726, and ten years later went with Bishop David Nitschmann's colony to Georgia. Their son David followed them to America, and afterwards became the most distinguished Moravian missionary among the Indians. His mother died on Feb. 23, 1746, when her son was in his 25th year.
16. RACHEL POST, a Wampanoag Indian, from Shekomeko, N. Y. In 1743 she became the wife of the missionary Frederick Post. She died Dec. 26, 1747, and was buried by Bishop Spangenberg; her still-born son was placed in her arms.
  17. JOANNA WADE, m.n. Hopson, 1723-48, born in Wiltshire, England. She joined the Church in London, and there married John Wade in 1744, who after coming to America was appointed an Evangelist and later ordained Deacon.
  18. ANNA CATHARINE SCHAAF, m.n. Loze, 1722-48, born at Kreuz-Wertheim on the Main, Germany. She came to Pennsylvania in Nov., 1743, with her husband the weaver, Thomas Schaaf.
  19. ANNA MARIA OTTO, m.n. Weber, 1715-49, first wife of Dr. John Frederic Otto. She was born at Frankfort-on-the Main, united with the Church at Herrnhag, and, in 1743, came to America with her husband and many other Moravians in the ship Little Strength. She left one son, Joseph, and one daughter, Anna Theodora.
  20. THEODORA, a blind old Indian woman, who had been baptized by the Rev. Gottlieb Pezold; departed Nov. 24, 1749.
  21. RACHEL, an aged Delaware widow living one mile above Bethlehem, along the Manocacy creek. She was baptized by Bishop Cammerhoff on Jan. 10, 1750, and died on Jan. 15 of the same year.
  22. ANNA ROSINA KLIEST, m.n. Beyer, 1723-50, born at Schoenbrunn, near Brieg, Silesia. She was sent to Pennsylvania from Herrnhut, with the "Sea Congregation," which arrived in 1749, and married the locksmith, Daniel Kliest.
  23. ANNA MARIA, a Delaware Indian, wife of Tobias. She had been baptized at Bethlehem, together with her husband and infant daughter. When taken ill in the forest beyond the Delaware, she besought the Indians to convey her to Bethlehem. Her wish was gratified, and she was carried all the way to Bethlehem, where she died Oct. 28, 1753.
  24. ROSINA MICHLER, m.n. Schneider, 1715-55, born at Zauchtenthal, Moravia. Her father, David Schneider, in 1725, was imprisoned on account of his evangelical faith, together with father David Nitschmann, but escaped in a miraculous way and went right from prison to Herrnhut, followed by his wife and daughter. Rosina assisted her parents by weaving, until in 1741 she married to John Michler. Two years later they sailed for America in the Little Strength, with

- 43 other couples. They served in the Moravian schools at Germantown and at other places.
25. EVA CATHERINE MUECKE, m.n. Mueznier, 1720-55, born at Boeckingen, near Heilbronn, Germany. On May 27, 1743, she was married to M. Muecke, at Herrnhag, Germany, simultaneously with the marriage of twenty-three other couples destined for Nazareth, Pa. She afterwards served with her husband in the school at Frederickstown and at other places. She left four sons.
  26. DOROTHY GATTERMEYER, m.n. Uhlmann, 1726-55, born at Zauchtenthal, Moravia. She came to Bethlehem in 1749, and on July 15 of the same year, in company with 27 other couples, was married to John L. Gattermeyer, a blacksmith and sick-nurse. Together they served the Church in various capacities, until the time of her departure, October 18, 1755. Her widowed husband then went to Gnadenhütten on the Mahony, Pa., to help in the mission work. On November 24 of the same year, at the massacre of the missionaries by the Indians, he died a martyr's death.
  27. ANNA CARITAS (alias Nanny), a Shawano Indian, married to the negro Bro. Joseph. She was born in North Carolina, her mother having been carried away captive by the Mohawks. She came to this neighborhood half a year before Bethlehem was built, and in 1747 joined the Church finding employment in the washhouse. After marrying Joseph she moved with him to Frederickstown and served in the Moravian school there faithfully and diligently, until the war troubles drove them to Bethlehem. On December 31, 1755, having become consumptive, she said: "now I am ready, now I shall go to the Saviour," and soon afterwards expired, while her friends were singing German and Indian hymns by her death-bed.
  28. MARGARET CATHARINE WEISS, 1720-56. She was born at Frankfort-on-the-Main, the daughter of the Notary Public, J. C. Firnhaber, and became awakened through the visits of Chr. David of Herrnhut. In 1753 she married Matthias Weiss and was one of the 120 pilgrims who came over in the Little Strength. She and her husband were among 31 couples who moved to Nazareth, but in 1747 they returned to Bethlehem. She left two sons and one daughter.
  29. MARGARET KUNZ, m.n. Ballenhorst, was married to Matthew Kunz of Bethlehem on August 12, 1750. On September 10 of the same year she ran down to the Lehigh, "near the washhouse," and drowned herself. An inquest was held and the verdict of the jury was forwarded to the court.
  30. ANNA SCHAAF, m.n. Mann, 1720-57, born in the county of Bern, Switzerland; came here in 1752, and was employed as sick-nurse in

Old Moravian Cemetery of Bethlehem, Pa. 59

- the Sisters' House until 1755, when she was married to Thomas Schaaf, being his second wife. (See C, I, 18.)
31. MARY APOLLONIA BECHTEL, m.n. Marret, 1691-1758, born at Heidelberg, Baden, of Huguenot parents. In 1715 she married John Bechtel (A, I, 20), a pious mechanic, with whom in 1726 she came to Germantown, Pa. There Bechtel, though not ordained, but licensed by the University of Heidelberg, for more than sixteen years officiated as German Reformed minister. In 1742 Zinzendorf was a frequent guest at their house, and J. Bechtel was ordained a Deacon by Bishop D. Nitschmann. Having been dismissed from the Reformed Church in 1746, they removed to Bethlehem.
  32. SUSANNA (Sarah) REINKE, m.n. Stockberg, 1715-58, born at Sunmoer, near Bergen, Norway; came to Herrnhut in 1740 with a Dr. Türk, when she could speak Danish only. In 1744 she was married to the Rev. Abraham Reinke (A, VIII, 32), who was appointed to the service of the Church in Pennsylvania, after having held pastoral charges in Russia, Holland and England. Here she served with her husband in various congregations; having a preference for English speaking people. She left one son, Abraham.
  33. EVA, an old Indian widow of the Mohican tribe. In 1742 she was converted at Shekomeko and afterwards baptized by Peter Boehler. She was married to the Indian Nicodemus, who became the Elder of the Indian congregation at Gnadenhütten on the Mahony and departed this life there, in 1747. After her husband's death she moved to Bethlehem and, like Anna, became "a widow of about fourscore and four years, which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day." She died November 18, 1758.
  34. SUSAN DOROTHEA GEITNER, m.n. Gaupp, 1726-60, from Urach, Würtemberg. Came to Bethlehem in 1752 on the ship Irene with a colony of unmarried women from Heerendyk in Holland. The following year she married C. Geitner, to whom she bore three sons.
  35. MARIA WERNER, 1711-60, born at Salzburg, Germany. Left her home with other Salzburg exiles on account of the evangelical faith; arrived in Pennsylvania with the Moravian colony of 1742. She was appointed the first "Pflegerin" (superintendent) of the unmarried women at Bethlehem. In 1745 she married Chr. Werner and served with him in the "Nursery" (children's home) at Bethlehem and Nazareth.

ROW VI.—MOSTLY WIDOWS.

1. MARY MAGDALEN OTTO, m.n. Schmidt, 1735-84, wife of the "Medicus Matthew Otto." She was born in the Palatinate and came to America as a child. Both her parents having died on the journey, she was cared for by Mr. and Mrs. Boeckel at Heidelberg, Pa. In 1748 she came to Bethlehem, was later received as an Acolyte, and in 1778 married the widower, Dr. M. Otto.
2. ANNA MARY KUNKLER, m.n. May, 1718-84, born at Lindheim, Wetteravia, Germany. She was raised in the family of Baron de Schrautenbach. In 1743 she became the wife of Daniel Kunkler and emigrated to Bethlehem, where they found employment at the Sun Hotel and later kept a store.
3. SARAH LEIGHTON, m.n. Clifford, a widow, 1704-85. She was born at Canterbury, England, and in 1732 married the baker John Leighton. In 1743 they came to Pennsylvania in the company of 120 Moravians; served as home missionaries in Maryland, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Her husband died in 1756.
4. ROSINA NEUBERT, m.n. Hauer, 1715-85. Her father, Tobias Hauer, was a linen weaver at Kunewalde, Moravia. Christian David's evangelical testimony brought on persecution and the family, therefore, emigrated to Herrnhut, through the deep snow of winter. She was one of the 18 young women of Herrnhut, who in 1730 joined in the first covenant of complete consecration to the Lord's service. In 1734 she married Dan. Neubert, the ceremony being the first which took place in the church at Herrnhut; and in 1784 the couple celebrated its 50th wedding anniversary. In this country she and her husband worked most faithfully at various stations for the support of the Church.
5. HELEN BIRNBAUM, m.n. Nuessen, 1711-84. She was born near Klagenfurth, Carinthia, Austria, but left her native country on account of the faith. In 1749 she came to Pennsylvania with Bishop John Nitschmann, and afterwards married Joachim Birnbaum, a tailor.
6. BARBARA MARTENS, m.n. Arnold, 1723-85. She was born at Rehweiler, in Franconia, Germany, and came to Bethlehem in 1748, where she became the wife of Rev. Frederick Schlegel. She served with him in several city and country churches, and in 1764 they were called to the mission in Jamaica. There her husband, after a successful service of five years, died. Her second husband was Martens, with whom in 1778 she went to Europe; but he died on the journey and she returned to Bethlehem, where she continued to serve the Church as Deaconess among the widows. Her son, J. Fred. Schlegel, became a missionary in St. Thomas.

7. ELIZABETH LANGAARD, m.n. Sommers, 1729-85, born at Gravenhaag, in Holland. She came to America with her mother, after her father's death, and in 1763 was married to Andrew Langaard who in 1777 died at Emaus.
8. JUDITH OTTO, m.n. Benezet, 1710-86. She was the daughter of Stephen Benezet in Philadelphia, and was born at St. Quentain, France. Being Huguenots they were compelled to emigrate. She came to Bethlehem in 1747, when the settlement had scarcely been commenced, and the next year became the wife of the missionary, Rev. David Bruce, Count Zinzendorf officiating at their marriage. Her husband died in 1749 at the Indian mission of Wechquadnach. The following year she married Dr. John Frederick Otto, the first physician at Bethlehem, later at Nazareth, where he died in 1779. She left one son, John David Bruce.
9. ANNA HASSE, m.n. Chase, 1743-86, from London, England. She was married to John Chr. Hasse, with whom in 1764 she went to Jamaica to serve in the mission-household. From there they came to Bethlehem.
