

Skirmishes with the Indians during the Revolutionary War

Old Town, St, Augustine, Florida

There was a British fort near St. Augutine, Florida.

Levin Watson of Wilkes County, Georgia having enlisted in the war in 1777, served 8 months in the Company of Captain John Stewart of Colonel Elijah Clark's Regiment and was in a battle with the Indians. He afterwards served as a wagoner hauling grain to mill.

On the first of February while serving under Colonel Clarke, he was in a skirmish with the British near the fort at St. Augustine. This occurred shortly before the Battle of Savannah and he was sent to the Battle of Blackstocks in South Carolina.
